INTRODUCTION TO THE BEDINGFELD PAPERS

No one who has dipped even slightly into the history of the English Catholics during the times of persecution can doubt that the preservation of the Faith during that time of trial was due to the Catholic gentry. Like all broad generalisations, this statement is of course liable to exceptions, and will need safeguards if it is narrowed down to particular cases. There can, however, be no question that where the gentry fell away, there the Faith was condemned to neglect and exile, and gradually failed. On the other hand, the old sentiment that an Englishman's house should be his castle, made it possible for the Catholic squire to make some head against crushing laws, the absolutism of the Crown, and Protestant bigotry when he was supported by faithful tenants and (below, p. 3) aided by friendly neighbours (below, pp. 163, 164), especially in days when all, even the magistrates, were imbued with respect for the upper classes (pp. 21, 165).

But why Catholicism lived on in this house more than in that, it is usually impossible for us to tell. In the case of one or two of the chief noble houses that kept to the ancient Faith, such as the Howards, the Petres, and the Montagues, there is indeed a fair amount of material accessible in print to which recourse might be had, and there is also much for some individual Catholics. But to trace from printed sources the domestic life of any Catholic family (not of noble rank) for three or four generations would at present be extremely difficult,* though it is probable enough that there is a good deal of valuable manuscript material extant in one place or another which would, if it were properly collected and published, throw a very interesting light on the domestic annals of our Catholic forefathers.

The manuscript materials preserved at Oxburgh Hall are probably not richer or more numerous than those to be found in other old houses that could be named. On the contrary, the devastation which it endured during the Civil Wars makes it likely that its muniments have been depleted to a more than usual degree. Yet there remain, as the reader will see, a certain number of letters, diaries, journals, and other family memoirs which, taken together, tell us a good deal about the life of a Catholic family during the penal times, and these have been printed below.

It is hardly necessary to add that no attempt has been made to collect the records of the family as a whole, much less to write its history, interesting as that history would be.

Incidentally, of course, many important facts connected with the family are touched upon here or there, and the chief authorities are alluded to in a way that will, I hope, make the work of the future historian easier than it was.

He should begin with the Genealogical Supplement contributed by Mr. Richard Thackeray Bedingfeld, which he will find at the very end of the book. The inverted order is not difficult to understand. Mr. Bedingfeld worked on records of one age and class; I was occupied with those of a different series and a later period, and unfortunately I got into press first. It was not till after my contribution had been printed off that I had the opportunity of submitting it to him. The result has been the publication in print of a study on the early history of the Bedingfeld family, the interest and value of which can hardly be overstated. That Mr. Bedingfeld should have been ready to throw into a note at the end of this volume the results of a life-study, which in itself certainly deserved a first place, or altogether separate treatment, is a favour on his part for which, on behalf of all members of the Catholic Record Society, I must heartily thank him.*

From the various picturesque details to be found in this Supplement, as well as in Section IX., a clear idea may be formed of the vigour and endurance of the family whose fortunes we are following, and the vision of their beautiful home (p. 244) must be added to the background of every scene of their history. Not slight assuredly has been the influence upon generation after generation of Bedingfelds which has been exerted by those battlemented towers, that fresh-flowing moat, those halls and courts and corridors, those family pictures, charter-chests, and rolls of arms, which give to the venerable home at Oxburgh so unique and irresistible a charm. It was always impossible to live there without being influenced to some extent by the genius loci, by the memory of that long and ancient line, which had kept faith with God and the Church, with King and family, while all that was mortal of it rested either in the church beyond the garden, or in the chapel hard by.

Of all the tombs in the Bedingfeld Chapel in Oxburgh Church, the finest, no doubt, is that of Sir Henry, the Lieutenant of the Tower under

* The whole of my section in The Various Branches of the Bedingfeld Family (pp. 231, 232) must be considered as superseded by Mr. R. T. Bedingfeld's Supplement (pp. 423-434). In particular, page 231, line 38, for "his youngest brother," read "of Fleming's Hall," and for "grandson," read "great-grandson." On page 232, line 3, for "probably . . . Strode," read "son of Charles of Swatishall, afterwards Swattisfield Hall, and Agatha Cook, see p. 434." On p. 18, note, for "Perhaps Henry . . . Hale," read "of Swatishall, see p. 427." To note on p. 106 add, "see p. 427."

Queen Mary. But he has no place in our records. For though there are some important State letters at Oxburgh which refer to the politics in which he was engaged, there are no papers that I could find which throw light on his character, or social or private life. The earliest papers of this class are connected with Sir Henry the Cavalier, and owing to the calamities that befell his closing years, it is the spiritual and religious side of his character which here comes out clearly, though it must be admitted that at some periods of his life he had temporised (p. 2). This wavering, however, would seem not to have regarded essentials, on which he certainly confessed his faith bravely.* The meditations contain at least one strange point (§ 11), and suggest various problems indicated on pp. 3 and 4.

However good of their class the meditations composed by the imprisoned knight, however superior (in spite of their outrageous spelling) to what most men of our day would write under similar circumstances, one cannot but notice in them a considerable falling off from the literary ability displayed in the Elizabethan collection, contained in the Sydenham Prayer-Book (pp. 22-34). Even apart from the interesting discovery of Good Queen Mary's Prayer, "which she used everye mornynge all her lyfe tyme" (pp. 23-27), and the new poem by the Venerable Philip Howard, Earl of Arundel (p. 29), we have here several new Elizabethan Catholic hymns, and one or two of still older date. Besides this, Catholicity amongst the Sydenhams is in itself somewhat of a discovery, for the family has hitherto been ranked as Protestant. Yet here is incontestable proof that the ancient Faith was lingering on within doors, though the head of the family was a conformist.

How the family and the Catholic tenantry at Oxburgh survived the ruin of the Civil Wars our papers tell us very, very little, though the few hints we meet with are ominous enough. If the country gentleman's house, respected as it usually was by all the neighbourhood, had hitherto formed the only breakwater against the storm of persecution, what must have been the fate of the little flock, when the family was driven from its seat, and when the management of the estate was taken over by the Puritan tax-farmers! Happily perhaps for us, no record of life at Oxburgh during that gloomy time remains; but if we may judge by analogy from what we read concerning martyrs and confessors of the period, the fate of Catholics in most parts of England was then pitiful in the extreme.

* I find I have omitted at p. 2 an incident of some importance for the Cavalier's religious opinions. On the 20th of November 1641 the House of Lords was informed, through William Shales, once a falconer at Oxburgh, that while making inquiries about hawking in Ireland, the Cavalier had used words which were supposed to betoken that he meant to join the Irish insurgents, "for that there was no safety in England for any of his religion." Hereupon the knight was sent for, and his papers put under seal. But on his appearance ten days later he entirely acquitted himself, was discharged, and the seals were taken away. Mr. Pool, whom the suspicious Shales, evidently a non-Catholic, had supposed to be a priest, but who was certainly Henry Widmerpool, the knight's steward (C.R.S. vi.), appeared at the same time. Sir Henry solemnly declared him not to be a priest, and he under oath confirmed his master's explanation of the words addressed to Shales.—J. Nalson, Impartial Collections of Great Affairs of State (1683), ii. 660, 661, 690, 691.

After the fighting was over, and peace had regained its sway over the majority, the demands of humanity and justice began to be more widely respected, and it became possible for the family to settle down again, not indeed at Oxburgh, but at Beck Hall, not so far off, though how they eventually weathered the storm is still a matter of conjecture. Probably they had friends and relatives on both sides, who managed to discover for them a modus vivendi. It is curious to note in a history like this (and especially in Marwood's Diary, 58, 59, &c.) how often the genealogical tree is found to supply an explanation of family movements, and in particular of movements affecting the children. In this case the intermediaries may have been Sir Thomas or Mr. Anthony Bedingfeld, M.P., who are mentioned on pp. 231, 428, 434.

As it must be a very ill wind that blows nobody any good, so even the Civil Wars brought advantage to a certain section of the Catholic community, and to that section which one might least have expected it to benefit. Never were the Catholic convents on the Continent more flourishing in spirit and in numbers than during the Civil War period and immediately after. One obvious reason for this was the immense difficulty which English Catholic girls at that time would experience in finding suitable homes in their own country. No wonder that the holy peace and fruitful life of the convents abroad were more than ever loved and sought after, even though their revenues were reduced to a vanishing point through the impoverishment of the Catholics at home. The Bedingfeld family (of the Redlingfield, not the Oxburgh line) well exemplifies this unusual religious movement, for a whole generation of sisters, not less than eleven in number, followed by their mother to make up the twelve, then became nuns in various convents abroad (below pp. 240, 433), and the names of several are still notable in the annals of convent history, more than half their number having eventually become the heads of their respective sisterhoods.

Not least amongst these was Frances, the first since the Reformation to re-establish convent life in England upon a permanent basis; her foundation at the Bar Convent, York, being now the oldest house of its kind in this country. She was also the first to start a religious establishment at Hammersmith, in which again religious life still perseveres, though the sisters are now (after several changes) Nuns of the Sacred Heart. This Hammersmith foundation is, by an odd coincidence, also connected with the Bedingfelds of Oxburgh. For when Frances first offered to take the house there, the landlord looked askance at her poor widow's dress (the only approach to a nun's habit then possible), but on hearing that she was a Bedingfeld, he at once said that he would trust her "for Coronel Bedingfeld's sake, who was so worthy and honourable a gentleman, and just dead out of the house." * Thus we are brought back to the Bedingfelds of Oxburgh, and at the same time we learn the place of Colonel Thomas's death, and also a testimony in his commendation, which affords a valuable corrective to the references made by his brother and nephew at pp. 5 and 36.

The reason why the Colonel had retired to Hammersmith was, doubtless, because of the ruin that had befallen the Oxburgh property (pp. 16, 17, 37). He had pledged the timber for £600, and there was talk of "pulling down the houses," though how that would have been an economy, it is hard to see. Sir Henry, the first baronet, who was already established at Beck Hall, now succeeded to the Oxburgh property. He does not, however, seem to have migrated thither, but to have handed the Hall over to his son Henry (afterwards second baronet), who had just married a well-to-do wife, Lady Anne Howard. †

Upon the whole, the Bedingfelds had much to be thankful for at this period, in spite of all their losses. Though they did not get back Eriswell (p. 17), though many of the "great matters," which they were led to expect, "proved nothing but Court Holy Water," still the effect of the war on the minds of the King and of all those who sided with him was to soften down many an old prejudice against the Catholics, the most loyal, though the most oppressed, subjects of the realm. We meet with many indications (pp. 19, 20, 21, 37, 241, &c.) that the family was now in greater favour than ever before, and that the state of ostracism, in which most Catholics had had to live at earlier times, had in great measure passed away.

A vivid and interesting illustration of their improved fortunes is the family group, of which a photogravure forms our frontispiece. That it commemorates the escape of the family from the grave perils of that hazardous time is clear at sight, but the significance of the details is so far undetermined. ‡

At the time of Oates's plot the family had something to suffer, like

* St. Mary's Convent, York, p. 60. I should have added in my note at p. 240 below that this book contains a very interesting portrait of Mother Frances, and perhaps the fullest printed account (pp. 44-60) of the eleven Bedingfeld nun sisters.

† The first baronet, even after death, was given the distinctive epithet "of Beck Hall" (p. 242). The second baronet speaks on p. 38 of "Purchases made by me H. B. since 1668," and on the previous page he says he is going back to the time "when first I came to live," i.e. at Oxburgh. The inference clearly is that he came in 1668.

‡ The figures are, I fancy, painted from the portraits reproduced at pp. 20, 34, 90. It is therefore posterior to them, and certainly inferior to them in execution.

most of their co-religionists. The only explicit reference to them which I have noticed is in Father Peter Hamerton's vivid description of his adventures at that crisis, and is very brief.

Father Hamerton reports that Father Richard Strange made inquiries "concerning the searches (sic) made after him at Sir Henry Benefields."* Whether these searches took place at Beck Hall, or Oxburgh, or in both places, does not appear. As there was more than one search, Oxburgh is not likely to have escaped. As to this, it may not be amiss to call to mind that few ordeals of the persecution were more onerous and painful than that of having one's house turned topsy-turvy by a horde of Puritan fanatics.† It is likely that there were several "searches" during the time of Elizabeth, as well as during the Civil Wars. The last "search" was during the '45, when Sir Henry Arundell Bedingfeld, partly by reason of his many friends, but chiefly through his tact and skill, succeeded in avoiding serious consequences (p. 165).

This, however, is anticipating. We must go back to that very interesting personality Thomas Marwood, who has contributed so many interesting pages to the Bedingfeld Memoirs. He was a convert, but the Memoranda which we have relating to this event gives us very few details, though they show us a man of very remarkable earnestness, self-denial, high principle, and piety (pp. 41-44). His Diary throws a very welcome light on the life of Catholics beyond the seas, where they were free to practise their religion, and gladly availed themselves of their liberty. Marwood's attention is of course principally fixed on his young charge, and he watches over his health and education with the most devoted constancy; but he also has eyes for all that is going on around, and he has recorded the names of a great number of other English exiles, some Jacobites, but mostly Catholics, who do not display very extraordinary zeal on behalf of the fallen house (pp. 86, 118), and there were numerous English convents to be visited, and in most of which there was some relative or connection, who made them welcome. We can see how thoroughly Marwood enjoyed the open churches, the great ceremonies, the long but often excellent sermons, the pilgrimages, shrines, relics, the active works of charity, and the various religious objects and practices which are usual in Catholic countries, but were then almost unknown in poor England.

Though it is sad to see how many young Catholics educated along with Henry Arundell Bedingfeld afterwards lost their faith amid the deceptions and severities, the threats and coaxings of penal laws and worldly advisers (pp. 94, 116, 117, 194, &c.), it might nevertheless, one would think, have been prognosticated that a boy so talented, amiable, and high-principled as Henry Arundell Bedingfeld, would have been sure to make his mark as a Catholic in later life. In truth his time did come, but not until old age was setting in, and infirmities had sapped his strength and vigour. The occasion came through the fall of one who should, if he had been true to his vocation, have been a strong support to the Catholic cause.

This was Archibald Bower, a Scotchman, once a Jesuit, and a man of good (though not extraordinary) abilities, who had fallen ignominiously in Italy, and then endeavoured to make out that he was a martyr to the Roman Inquisition. After several half-hearted (or, as many thought, only half-sincere) attempts to put himself right, he became more hostile than ever to Catholics, assailed them virulently in the press, and caused violent measures of persecution to be taken against his Catholic kith and kin. The matter interested Sir Henry Arundell all the more, as the then Jesuit Provincial, Father Carteret, who had had much to do with Bower, had also at one time been chaplain at Oxburgh. The Baronet, therefore, exerted his influence among his Protestant friends to unmask the rascal's insincerity. Alban Butler, the ablest Catholic writer of the day, had indeed already exposed Bower's deceits and pretensions, but, being a Catholic, he had not won a hearing. The correspondence printed below will show in detail how Sir Henry prevailed on Protestant writers of distinction to undertake the same task, and with entire success. Though there were a few critical moments, when nervous Catholics were in anxiety as to "what lengths revenge may make some great persons take" (p. 184), the defeat of the anti-Catholic writer was complete. Though there still remained fanatics, whom no reasons could convince, the good understanding between Catholics and fair-minded Protestants was unmistakably improved.

The Bedingfeld papers show but few indications of the great changes that affected the lot of Catholics at the close of the eighteenth century. If that whole generation was notoriously unadventurous and humdrum, the then representative of the family was the most stop-at-home member of it that we meet with; yet he, too, has left some notes of the dark hours that preceded the dawn (pp. 198-210). Sad memories are those, which are connected with his brief references to the "Curse of Cowdray," the Gordon Riots, the outbreak of the French Revolution, and the migration to England of the convents that had existed for so long in Flanders. More satisfactory are the references to the two Emancipation Acts, and with them we may conclude this general sketch of the matters of wider Catholic interest referred to in the papers before us. There are, of course, a variety of other topics worthy of attention, the various educational systems in which the boys of the family were educated at Brussels, Bornhem, La Flèche, St. Omers, Old Hall, Liège, Angers, &c., should all deserve more than passing note. It is curious again that the first confirmation held at Oxburgh should have been as late as 1805.

It remains for me to express my thanks to all those who have given me assistance, and in the first place to Sir Henry and Lady Bedingfeld, who not only gave me every possible convenience for seeing and studying their papers, but who also actively assisted in this publication by copying, annotating, supplying photographs, and giving information of many sorts. I must also again express my obligations to Father P. Ryan, S.J., and to Miss Stearn for varied help, without which I should not have been able to undertake this publication.

MEMORIALS OF SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD, THE CAVALIER

THE earliest personal memoirs which have so far been found at Oxburgh relate to the Cavalier who behaved so gallantly and suffered so grievously in the Civil Wars. His monument in Oxburgh Church calls him the Seventeenth Knight of his family, but it will be more convenient for us to style him here by the honourable epithet of Cavalier, which he so well deserved. The dire calamities which befell Oxburgh Hall during the Civil Wars no doubt explain why we know so little about one whose life was presumably as full, if not more full of incident than that of any other bearer of his name. Be this as it may, we have before us only a "Case" by Thomas Marwood, of whom we shall hear more later, a few notes on the christening of his children, and his "Meditations in the Tower." The latter may be given first, for though on the one hand they may be classed under literature or asceticism, yet on closer attention it will be found that they tell us not a little of the personality of their writer and of the misfortunes he was passing through.

Sir Henry ruled at the Hall for an unusually long time, for his father died in 1590, when he was a mere child. The times were indeed stirring, but very dangerous for Catholics. He would have just remembered the Armada and have had some recollections of the times of danger to the realm that preceded and followed it. More vividly would he have recalled the better things that followed the accession of King James, soon to be succeeded by the sharp outbreak of persecution that ensued after the Powder Plot. These difficulties lasted for twenty years, till the match of Charles with the Princess of France brought a short breathing space.

Partly to avoid these protracted evils, partly, I think, in pursuit of education and adventure, and partly perhaps because of a bereavement, of which more immediately, Sir Henry obtained as early as November 23, 1607, a licence to travel for three years in company with Francis, son of Lord William Howard (Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, 1603-1610). His fellow traveller was the founder of the family of Howards of Corby Castle, and he had married his sister Mary, the daughter of Lord William Howard of Naworth, "Belted Will" of Border Minstrelsy, and the founder of the family of the Earls of Carlisle.

The Lady Mary bore him one son, Thomas, and then died. We do not know the precise date, but it may well have been before 1607, and if so might account for his journey abroad. He subsequently married Elizabeth Houghton, by whom he had eleven children, some of whom, however, died infants.

In 1620 Sir Henry was Sheriff of Norfolk, in 1626 he was on the Commission of Peace (Mason, History of Norfolk, i. 256). Between these dates he was occupied in raising troops for the war in the Palatinate. All this was connected with the slow and gradual relaxation of persecution, which, as we have said, followed the French match.

On the 21st of July 1626, Secretary Conway wrote a letter to Attorney-General Heath, inquiring whether King Charles could comply with the recommendations of the Queen Mother of France in regard to Sir Henry Bedingfeld. Unfortunately we have neither got the recommendations of the French queen, nor the answer of the Crown lawyer, so we cannot carry our inferences very far. But we see plainly that Sir Henry has now acquired a very powerful patroness, and we know that her influence in favour of humanity and toleration was considerable. So we are not surprised to see at our next passing glance (Domestic Calendar, February 2, 1638) signs of prosperity, even of affluence. We hear that he has lately "purchased divers manors in Norfolk." Law proceedings indeed were threatened in regard to certain rights, thereby affected; but the general import of the paper is clearly indicative of improvement.

At last in July 1639 (Calendar, ibid.) Sir Henry received "his Majesty's letters of grace in bar of the laws against Recusants." This grant formed the high-water mark of his worldly fortunes. But the long-awaited relief was only of short duration. Three years more and a series of overwhelming calamities would commence.

When the Civil War broke out he with his sons Thomas, Henry, and William raised forces and fought on the king's side. The three sons were commissioned as colonel and captain of horse and captain; while his son-in-law, Robert Aprece of Washingley and William Cobbe of Sandringham, were also colonels in the loyalist ranks. The misfortunes, however, which attended the royal arms soon overtook them. The county of Norfolk came under the power of the Puritans at an early date. Just beyond its borders, indeed, the young Bedingfelds would have fought on with better hopes. Lynn itself held out as late as the 16th of September 1643, and Lincoln with varying fortune, taken for the second time October the 20th, 1643, was recaptured by Prince Rupert. But finally the cathedral close was carried by assault on the 6th of May 1644, at which time Colonel Aprece was shot in cold blood as a Papist, and Thomas Bedingfeld, as we shall hear him say below, was wounded and taken prisoner.

It has been stated (by Mrs. Herbert Jones in Sandringham Past and Present, 1887, p. 85) that Sir Henry, with Sir Hamon le Strange and his son, Roger le Strange, Sir Richard Hovell of Hillington, and others, with their retainers, had ridden to the assistance of Lynn, with the result that Sir Henry was taken as one of the hostages who were kept until the conditions of the surrender of Lynn were fulfilled.

She quotes for this "a curious narrative of the siege of Lynn, contained in a small pamphlet printed soon after by G. Bishop and R. White (a copy in the possession of E. M. Beloe, Esq., of King's Lynn), which gives many particulars, and states that Sir Henry was one of the hostages," &c. But there is a copy of what seems to be this very tract in the British Museum, A brief and true relation of the Seige and Surrendering of Kings Lynn to the Earl of Manchester (same printers), and in this Sir Henry's name is never mentioned at all! I imagine, nevertheless, that the authoress has not been mistaken as to the facts she relates, but has inadvertently ascribed them to the wrong source.

As to this and many other events in the life of the Cavalier, which do not proximately concern the papers before us, much must be left to some future historian of the Bedingfelds. Many interesting details might certainly be discovered about his recusancy* and his property. Especially important would it be to clear up the crowning events of his life. Why, if he was at first kept as a hostage, was he subsequently confined to the Tower? Why did he, according to Wotton's MS., "narrowly escape death"? How long did his confinement last? †

Whatever be the eventual answer to these questions, it will suffice for the understanding of the papers which follow to remember that our Cavalier, after having gradually recovered the high station in life, which by birth belonged to him, was exposed at the age of sixty to repeated and crushing defeats in the field of battle, to confiscation of goods, to confinement in the closest of prisons, and to the risk of death on the gallows.

* Sir Henry had sometimes conformed. Edward Bedingfeld, his cousin, wrote in 1614: "My chief relative is Sir Henry Bedingfeld—a schismatic" (Foley, Records, S.J., v. 571). But this must have been temporary, as is clear from King Charles's dispensation.

Moreover his estate had been sequestered (before 5th June 1648), he was not admitted to compound for delinquency, and trustees were appointed to receive the rents and profits of his estate (Calendar, Dom. Chas. I., 1648-9, p. 98), and from now onwards there are a good many entries regarding the property in the papers of the Committee for Compounding. Their true meaning is often quite different from what appears on the surface, for we know that the family managed eventually to buy back most of the estate underhand, through the intervention of friends. A few points, however, are clear. One is that the tenants loyally held out for their master for several years, for the Parliamentary receiver complains even in 1650 that the rents are often secretly paid to Sir Henry and that he can get very little. Nevertheless, it is also clear that soon after this the screw was tightened and the payments were made, amounting to £1638 per year. Between the 24th of March and the 16th of October 1652 the estates were sold, and the figures given in the Calendar (pp. 2622-2626) correspond fairly with those given in the paper, printed by Betham (Baronetage, ii. 195) and others, in which the total loss is given at £47,194, 18s. 8d. It is clear that these figures are not exaggerated.

In 1655 there were new troubles. Henry Bedingfeld, the second son (see below, § III.), was in confinement at Lynn for fourteen weeks, and on the 3rd of October "Captain W. Bedingfeld of Ashill, Colonel Cobbe, Colonel John Paston, and Colonel Bedingfeld were sent prisoners to London." There was probably some idea of their being connected with the attempts, now often made, against Cromwell's life. It would seem, however, that they cleared themselves, for Colonel Thomas got a licence to cross the seas (February 18, 1658), and afterwards Dorothy Paston and Frances Bedingfeld obtained a similar permission. But the aged Cavalier did not survive to see this amelioration in the state of his family. In the autumn of 1657 his strength began to fail under a combined attack of "Quartan ague and Dropsy." At last, after ten weeks' illness, he breathed his last on the 22nd of November 1657. He was buried in the family chapel at Oxburgh, but his monument must have been erected later.

As to the light thrown by the Meditations now printed on the personality of their author, we have only to ask ourselves what the ordinary inference is when we find a soldier (who, as we hear below, "was a great Sportsman and kept a great house") writing with his own hand and sending to his wife "Meditations on the sufferings of Christ" and "Aspirations of a devout Soul"? Does it not at once vividly bring before us the Catholic of those days, though loyal to all extremities, yet robbed, imprisoned, rejected by the world, with but one refuge, prayer and patience? This volume is the keepsake of her husband, which his wife treasured "in her closett" until her death, and which their descendants have ever since honoured as the most venerable memorial of their great ancestor. And so it undoubtedly is. The words, the thoughts, the circumstances of the composition, even (as we shall see) the reticences, speak to us clearly of a calm, strong, courageous soul, with a natural facility in the use of his mother-tongue, lovingly and sincerely true to the principles of his religion.

Turning to the structure and composition of these meditations, we shall easily perceive that though the spelling be below the average, even for those days, the composition itself is correspondingly above what might ordinarily have been expected from a soldier, sportsman, and man of the world. Indeed there seems to be an art in them which it is difficult to consider due to the unaided skill of a novice in literature. Notice the skilful way in which he deals with large and complex subjects like the life of Christ, dividing them up deftly into many points and sections, which in two cases reach the perfect square, sixteen, and in the third the round and seemingly number ten. We should hardly have imagined a middle-aged beginner attending to the balance of meditation with petition, to subtle repetitions* and sonorous terminations, to cadence and to rhythm. Yet these ornaments of speech are found in every paragraph. May we not, therefore, feel inclined to say that this is rather more than we should have expected from one of Sir Henry's education and position in life? The prayer of St. Augustine he must have translated, and it seems to me probable that the other prayers are also possibly modelled on some pre-existing texts, if they are not also translations. Perhaps the quaint legend, which is mentioned in Meditation 11, and is derived from the "Seven Falls of Christ," may lead to the identification of one of the prayer-books used by the Cavalier.

And if this be so it will add to their significance. It will mean that his wife had passed him in some book of devotions, perhaps in Latin or in French, and that he passed out to her these compositions, based on the models she had sent him. For this there was a striking precedent in his family. Sir Henry's first wife, Mary Howard (of Naworth), was a niece of the Venerable Philip Howard, Earl of Arundel, whose wife, Anne Dacre, had passed in to him, while he lay in the Tower, Lanspergius's Latin works, and had received back English translations from that book, with other pious compositions modelled on the same author, which she eventually had published (with some original verses of the Earl) in the Epistle of Christ to the Christian Soul (see also below, p. 29). The example of Blessed Thomas More may also have occurred to the minds of these good Catholics.

It will be noticed that while the language and thought of these meditations is everywhere perfectly orthodox (cf. the cultus of Mary, pp. 6, 11; of Saints, pp. 6, 11; and the correct expressions about justification) there is a clear desire to avoid topics which might unnecessarily offend Protestants. There is nothing about Mass, the Holy Eucharist, the Sovereign Pontiff, or the souls in Purgatory.

These omissions are no doubt due to fear of the Puritan censors, through whose hands the book would have to pass when leaving the Tower. Even the reticences of these meditations have their significance.

The volume, from which the Meditations are printed, is a thin large quarto, bound in white vellum with green silk strings, of twenty-four doubled pages, bearing outside a label, with the following title in a modern hand: Sir Henry Bedingsfeld's Meditations. Sir Henry, the first baronet, the second son of the Cavalier, has with his own hand written the title and the following somewhat discursive preface:—

22 November 1676.

This booke was written with my Dear ffather Sr Henry Bedingsfeld's owne hand, whilst he was a Prisoner in the tower, wheere he was one yeare and three quarters. And procured his release about Hollimas 1649 [sic]. † His Estate was sowld over his head for delinquency for servinge the Kinge Ch: 1^{rst} against the usurpinge Palam^t in the year 52. He departed this Life after many Sufferings, the 22nd of November 1656 [sic], having been ill of a Quartan Ague and the Dropsy ten weekes. He lies

* I have marked these repetitions with an asterisk.

† The letter to Lady Bedingsfeld below is signed 20 February 1645, which would be reckoned according to the "Old Style" then in vogue. We should call the year 1646. A year and three-quarters would bring us to Hallowmass, or All Saints, 1647. The inscription on the tomb, however, speaks of "Three years in the Tower," and this would bring us to 1649.

NO. 1

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD'S MEDITATIONS ON YE PASSION OF OUR SAVIOUR, AND A LETTER TO HIS LADY.

Written in his own hand, when in Prison in ye Tower.

[To Elizabeth Lady Bedingfeld]

MY DEARE,

I that hath loved your parson so dearely, as I have done, for this 38 yeares, and acknowleging the like returns of your affection to me againe, I cannot be so ungrateful to God, who hath bestowed so greate a blessing of me, as your self, to be unmindful of your spirituall comfort, in these most misarable, and distracted times, which doth a mase, the greatest sperits, that now liveth, and for my part, I must confes, my weeknes to be such, that if it had not bine for medditating of this following treates, it would have shaken me much, but cinsse I have loked upon the goodnes of God, and the sufferings of Our Blessed Saviour, I am by his graace and goodnes, so comforted as I wish, that if it were his holy will I might beare a greater part of his blessed cros, then yet I have done, for I know my sinnes hath deserved it, but to his hevenly will and pleasuer, I resine you and my self. From the Tower in London the 20 of February 1645.

* editis. The reading is obscure, but the meaning must surely be "& heir," or "Bart."

† Henry Widmerpoole's name will be regularly found among the Recusants of Oxburgh, printed in C.A.S., vi. The last conviction appears to have taken place, 12, 13 October, 1670. Whereas from this date we see that Henry Widmerpoole died in January of that year, 1669-70!

MEDITATIONS OF THE PASSION OF OUR BLESSED SAVIOUR

I

O Jesu what are we, that you shouldst come out of the Imperiall thron of heven, and to remane here on earth, thirty three yeares, in servitued and obedians, unto human cretuers, for us, your most unwourthy servants, and to suffer thy self to be bannished, out of thy owne cuntry, by that tirant Herod, into a strang plase, when you could get no other habitation, then to be laied in a stable, and a manger, a moug brute beastes, by which meanes you lost all the conveniency of thy supposed Fathers and mothers house. I beseach you, by your infinight humility, you shewed at your first enterans into the wourld,* to for give me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed a gainst your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me with patiens to under go all things, what you shall please to have laied upon me.

Then there was three kings, out of forren nations, a pointed to attend your hevenly Majesty, out of forren cunteres, who were gided, by a miraculus stare, sent from heven, and thay coming by Herod, a quainted him with there bussines, and he commanded them, when thay had found out sweete Jesu, that thay should returne unto him a gaine, that he might likewaies go to adore him, though his intension was to murder our blessed saviour. And these three kings coming in to a stable a moug brute beastes, found this blessed infant, laied in the manger. Unto home thay prostrated them selves, one there fase, an a dored him, offering unto him, mer and gould. But there thay continued not long, but were commanded to returne home, unto there owne habitassions, but not by Herod. And Herod finding him self deceived grew into so greate a fury, as he commanded all the innocens to be murdered, that were of the age of our hevenly saviour, by which meanes, O you blessed innocens you obtained the kingdom of our hevenly father, where I beseach you to prostrate your selves, at the feete of our hevenly father, humbly to beg of him,* to forgive me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed a gainst him, and to strengthen me, to under go, what your blessed Majesty shall please to have laied upon me.

Then the tirant being deade, blessed Josife, was commanded to returne unto his owne habitasion, and to carry with him blessed Jesu, and his blessed mother, which he performed, where our deare saviour, was pleased to remaine many yeares, in obedians unto human power, and seeing his passion to grow ny at hand, he begged leave of his blessed mother, that he might go forth, to Preach the gospel, and to do his meracles one earth, which she granted, unto her dearly beloved sonne, with shedding of many teares, and much affliction of mind, for parting with such a sonne. O blessed mother of Jesu, I beseach you by the teares you then shed, and by the affliction you then felt, to make intercession for me, that he would* for give me my sinnes, that I have committed a gainst him, and that he would strengthen me to under go all things, what he shall please to lay upon me.

Then he went forth and preached the gospel, and did his merrikels one earth, which none but god and man could do, for you revived the dead to life, and the dum to speach, and the blind to sight, o my eternall god and saviour, I be seach you, by the preaching of thy gospel, and by the merackles you did one earth, I be seach you,* to for give me all my sinnes that ever I have committed against your devine Majesty, and to strengthen me, to under go all things, what you shall please to have laied upon me.

Then Jesu cam unto Jerusalem, where he was entertained, with all pompe and glory, the peepel casting there garments before his feete to treade upon. But there he remained not long, seeing his passion growing up at hand, but he retired him self into the garding, to make his praier unto his hevenly father, when he perceived his passion to be so bitter, and sharp, as you be[g]gest of thy hevenly father, that if it were his will, that this challis might pas from thee. If not, his will be done, and not thine. And then our blessed saviour, did sweate a bundans of blud, from his most presious face and boddy. O deare Jesu I be seach you by the humble praier you made unto your hevenly father, in the gardin and by the presious blud, that ranne from thy devine face and boddy,* for give me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed a gainst my deare saviour, and to strengthen me to under go all things, what you shall please to have laied one me.

And then sweet Jesu cam out of the gardin, wher he meete Judas, that traitor, which had sould his M^r, Jesu, for thirty peeses of silver unto the Jues who came with a number of armed men. And his sine was to discover him, by giving him a kis, which he had no soner done, but thay laied violent hands one our deare saviour, and Peter seeing it dru forth his swourd, and stroke of one of the hy Priest servants eare, and Jesu tooke up the eare, and put it one miraculusly, and yet these barberus peepel, did spit, upon his hevenly fase, the light of heven and earth, spurning of him, and dragging you one the ground. Sweet Jesu, I be seach you by the infinight reproches, and disgraces put a pon the, and by the patiens you soffered them with all, I be seach you, of thy greate mercy,* to pardon all my sinnes that ever I have committed a gainst your devine Majesty, and to strengthen me to undergo all things, what you shall please to have laied upon me.

And then sweete Jesu was brought be fore the Juge, where thay accused him of many a rongful thing, and said he had blasfemed who never had offended, but there he staid not long, but our deare Jesu was commanded to be carried unto a piller, and there to be scurged, with most bitter, and sharpe cords, which was performed, with all severity, drawing a most infinight quantity of thy most precious blud, from your most precious sides, and making many wounds one your presious boddy. And not being satisfied with this, they put one his close a gaine one his most blessed boddy, that they might suck into his presious wounds, that they might tortuer our deare saviour, the more, by pulling them of againe. O my eternall god and saviour, I beseach you, of your eternall mersy, and by the presious blud you then shed, and by the presious woundes, you receaved of your blessed boddy, and by the tortuers that they put sweete Jesu unto, by putting one his clothes and tering them of againe, I beseach you * to forgive me all my sinnes, that ever, I have committed against your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me to under go all things, what you shall please to have laied uppon me.

And these tortuers, you o Lord suffered not for thy owne offences, for you never had sinned, but for owers, thy most unwourtiest of cretuers, nay for me the most unwourthyest of creatuers, be reson you have bestowed, so many favours of me, as I blush to think how il I have requited them, yet o Lord I am thine, and none but thine, for which I beseach you, to pardon my life past, and to give me thy grase never to offend your devine Majesty againe, after this minnet.

And then ouer blessed saviour was brought before the Jug, and he committed him to prisson for that night, and to be attended one by souldiers, which was performed with all severity, first they put upon his prescious boddy a purpel garment, and a blessed reade into his presious hand, and then they plased a blessed crowne of thornes, one his presious hed, and blindfouled his hevenly eies, the light of heven and earth, spurning and buffitting him, criing, If you be the sonne of god, and man, tel us who it was, that stroke you. O sweete Jesu, by the reproches and disgrases put apon you, and by the tortuers you then felt, I beseach you * to forgive me all my sinnes, that ever, I have committed against your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me, to under go all things, what you shall please to have laied uppon me.

10

Then they brought sweete Jesu before the Jug the next morning, and he tould the peapel that he found you to be a most innosent man, and that he would wash his hands of thy blud, and they cried out, His blud light upon ous, and owers. Then he demanded whether Barberous, or Jesu should suffer, and thay cried out, Jesus: though thay knew, Barberous a notorious theife, and a murderer. Then he commanded my deare Jesus, to carry the hevvy burthen, of the crose, which he was hardly able to performe, by reson of his hard usage, and the lose of so much of his presious blud, and being for saken by all his frinds. O sweete Jesus what can I expect, from human power, when thou werte for saken of all thy frinds, being the sonne of god and man. No my deare saviour it is not human power, that I beg for, but thy love and thy presans which I desier, and if you please to grant me, I shall be made hole, and safe, if not I had better never to have bin borne, but if you please to graunt my sute, I shal be most happy, which I beg of you, by your hole merrets, and passion.

11

And then my Blessed saviour cam unto the plase of his soffering, where he was laide upon the holy cros, and nailed there unto, with three fearse drivn nailes, persing his most blessed hands and feete, and his persicutors, not being sattisfied with this, threw ower sweete Jesus, hedlong into a pit,† which they had diged for the purpose, to teare his blessed flesh and vaines, to tourtuere him the more. O sweete Jesus, I beseech you, by the pressious wounds, that you receivede one the holy crosse, and by the torturers you felt there one, I beseech * you to pardon all my sinnes that ever, I have committed a gainst your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me to under go all things, what you shall please, to have laied uppon me.

12

And then they raised the againe, and you cried out, O father will you for sake me. No my deare saviour, he left thee unto thy self, for thy greater honor and glory, for thou wert willing to shew thy most magnificient pattions, and to shew thy love unto mankind, for you had power of thy owne, to have confounded them all into the bottomles pit of hel, if you had pleased, but sweete Jesus was willing to shew his infenight patiens, and his love and affection unto mankind. O my eternall god and saviour, I beseech you, by your patiens, then shewed, and by the love you shewed unto mankind,* to forgive me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed, against your devine Majesty and to strengthen me to under go all things what you shall please, to suffer to have laied one me.

13

And then my deare saviour, was plased betwene to theefes, one the holy cros, where one of them repented him self, of his sinnes, and acknowledged Jesus, to be the sonne of god the father. Jesus saide unto him, This day shalt thou be with me in parradise. O by that blessed speach, saïng, This day thou shalt be with me in parradise, I beseech you sweete Jesus, to give me your grase to live after that manner, that at my departuer out of this wourld, I may heare thy devine voice, saïng, This day, I shall be, with sweete Jesus in parradise.

And then sweete Jesus, demanded drinck be reson of his hard usage, and the losse of so much, of his presious blud, and they gave him gall and vinegar to drinck, and thus they mocked the saviour of all. Jesu I beg of your eternall goodnes, and by the blessed gall and vinnegar, that was given you to drinck,* to for give me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed against your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me with patiens, to under go all things, that you shall suffer, to be laide one me.

† This refers to the legend current among many writers at the beginning of the sixteenth century, that when the cross, with the Crucified upon it, was raised up, it was allowed to fall forwards again to the earth (H. Thurston, Stations of the Cross, 1906, p. 75).

And then they thrust a speare, into the blessed side of our deare saviour, at which presious wound ran out, a most infinight quantety of blud. O by that presious wound, that was made in thy blessed side, and by the pressious blud, that isshued out of it, I beseech you* to forgive me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed against your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me, to under go with pasienes all things, what you shall suffer, to lay upon me.

16

And then our blessed saviour bowed down his hed, and saide, It is finnisshed. O by thy last, and blessed speach, saing, It is finnisshed, I beseech you* to forgive me, all my sinnes, that ever I have committed against your hevenly Majesty, and to strengthen me, to under go all things, what you shall permit, to have laied one me.

A repetission

Jesu by thy pressious blud shed for us. Have mercy on us.

Jesu by thy presious five wounds, received one the holy cros for us.
Have mercy on us.

Jesu by the tortuers that you felt one the cros. Have mercy on us.

Jesu by thy most infinight pasienes you suffered them with. Have mercy on us.

Jesus, by the most infinight affection, you did shew to mankind.
Have mercy on us.

Jesus, by the purpel garment put one thy blessed boddy. Have mercy on us.

Jesus, by the blessed reede put into thy blessed hand. Have mercy on us.

Jesus, by the most precious crowne of thornes set one thy presious hed. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by the blindfoulding of your blessed eies. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by the spurnes and kickes thay gave you. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by the humble praier you made unto your hevenly father in the gardin. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by the most blessed speach, you made unto your hevenly father hanging one the cros. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by the blessed promissis you madest, unto the theeve hanging one the cros by thee. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by the blessed gall and vinnegar given you to drinck. Have mercy on us.

Jesu, by thy last blessed speach you made, saing, It is finnisshed.
Have mercy on us.

Jesu, I beseech you, by your hole passion, that if I have forgotten anything, or [am] ignorant of any part there of, you would pardon me, your most unwourthy and weakest servant, and to except of my intentions.

[TO THE WITNESSES OF CHRIST'S RESURRECTION]

O blessed mother, of ower deare saviour, I beseech you, by the joies you received, when you saw your dearly beloved sonne rise, out of the sepulker in splendor and glory, be a mediator for me, unto him,* that he would pardon all my sinnes, that I have committed a gainst his blessed Majesty, and that he will strengthen me with paciens, to under go all things, what he shall please to have laied upon me.

O blessed Mary Magdalen, by the joies you received when you saw, your most beloved M^r rise in splendor, and glory, out of the sepulker, make intercession fore me,* that he would pardon all my sinnes, that I have committed a gainst his devine Majesty, and that he would strengthen me with paciens, to under go, all things, what he shall please to have laied upon me.

O blessed a postels, by the joies you received when you saw, your blessed M^r rise in splendor and glory out of the sepulker, standing in the midst of you, criing, I am the man, and shewed you his wounds, I beseech you to make intercession for me, and that he would be pleased, to for give me all my sinnes, that ever I have committed a gainst his heavenly Majesty, and that he would be pleased to strengthen me with paciens to under go all things, what he shall please to have laied one me.

A repitission

O blessed mother of Christ, pray for me.

O blessed Mary Magdalen, pray for me.

AN ACKTE OF CONTRISSION

To be made before we go to bed, every night after this forme following

O my eternall God and saviour, I am sorry, from my very soule, that ever I have offended, so greate a god, so blessed a god, so sweete a god, and so mersiful a god, as I abhor, and detest all my sinnes, that I have ever committed a gainst your heavenly Majesty, mearly for the love of thee, my deare and dearest savjour, and intend by thy grase and assistans, never to offend thee more.

ST. AUSTIN'S PRAYER UNTO THE HOLY GHOST

O thou who art no lesse, then the love of the diety it self, the holy communication of the omnipotent father, and the most blessed issue, and art thy self the omnipotent sperit of comfort, the most mersifull solace of the sorrowful, vouchsafe to penetrate into the most inward parts of my hart, and be plased, as a most devine Ghust, by the beuty of the shining light, to clarifie the obscurest corners of thy neglected oratory, and by an efusion of thy abundance of dew, refres all that was parched or withered, by never so long a drines. Wound the bowells of the inferior man, by the shaft of thy love, and penitratng into the marrow of my shrunken liver, inflame it with thy restoretive arders, and inlightening all with the sacred fervour of thy fier.

Increase and feed, all at once, the most intimate portions both of soule and boddy. Watter me with the torrent of thy desier, that I may have no list, to tast of the invenomed sweetnes of this wourld. Judg me o Lord, and distinguish me from an unsanctified people. Teach me to do thy will, because thou art my god. I beleeve [that] in whome soever thou dost inhabite, there thou dost build the mansion of the father and the sonne. Blessed is he, who deserves to harbor thee, because by thee, the father and the sonne resides in him. Com then, o come, most indulgent comforter, protector in afflictions, helper in trubulations. Com thou purger of inequity, heler of wounds, com thou fortifier of frailty, supporter of sinners, com thou teacher of the humble, and depresser of the exalted, O com and rest in that soule, which haveing nothing, may have all things, by having but roome for thee. Amen.

[TEN] ASPIRATIONS AND AFFECTIONS OF A DEVOUT SOULE, which abandones her self unto Jesus Christ our Lord

1. O Jesus, I renounce my owne will to accomplish yours, I purpose to for sake my waies and those of the wourld, to walke and live by yours. I wish that my comportment may remaine in your conduct, my deration in your deration, as you shall direct me. Wherefore for your sake, I will become unable and nothing, that you may be my all.

2. O Jesus, I give you my hart, and my hole being, that it may be yours, for the ende you have created it, and I humbly beg that your devine nature may distroie my depraved inclinations.

3. O Jesus, I will depend on you, and remaine yours for ever, in the waies which you shall please to ordaine for me, without making choise of the least thing, that presents it self one earth, but entierly submitting to you, in the waies of all sufferances and repugnances to my self.

4. O Jesus, I make a present of my state of privation where in I live, unto that which you have endured for me, in which you ceased not to be attentive, in contemplating your Father. I render you a donation of my self, that no distinction may divert me from you, but that I may be holy taken up in you, by submission unto your self in this state, not seeking my owne satisfaction, even in my thoughts of your self, but with an humble recignation, I desier to beare this distraction, which I wish to abide in, for no other end then to suffer.

5. O Jesus, I dedicate my self unto your devine power, to the ende it may governe the weakenesses of my natuer, and that I may no longer acte by the instinct thereof, for I utterly renounce it for ever, and I desier that my meanesse may submit unto your greatenes, my feeblenes unto your force, to be governed by them.

6. O Jesus, I give my being unto your being, my life to your life, my thoughts to your thoughts, my wourld to your wourld, my love to your love, my soule to your blessed soule, my power to your power, that when I shall do any thing of my self, it may be no longer mine, and that I may drawe no farther liberty to make use of all that is mine, since I have give you all, I offer my self unto you, o my god, to beare all the states of sufferances, as well interiour as exteriour, to the ende my life in them may honor yours, and that I may enjoy no life for me but for you, and for this effect, that I may employ it to your use, and not for the wourld, and all that I shall doe therin, I desier that the same may be for you.

7. I renounce my self, o my god, to give my self to you, and I renounce all thoughts which are not of and from you, I offer my self unto your very Infancy, o Jesus, to partake of the grace of that mistery, and to reenter into your innocency, that this heavenly mistere may be applied unto the impurity of my nature, to render it capable of your residence.

8. Jesus, in honor of your life, humble on earth, I accept, with a willing hart, all humilliations, which shall happen to me, though repugnant to my self.

9. O Jesus, I renounce all the repugnances, which I have to suffer, and to beare humiliations, I accept them, though never so contrary to my sence, and I submite unto your will, to suffer the paine of my sense, to unite my self unto your holy will, to the eande, that what soever is in me refractory to what thay enioine, may be a subiect to my conforming my self to them and submitting me to you.

10. O Jesus, I desire to enter into your kingdome, and to a bandon all the affections of this wourld, I renounce all the desires, which I might have, to posses riches and the esteeme of men, that my desiers may aime at eternall, not temporall, things, to that I will apply my self, but renounce all that appertaines to the world, and all my proper interest, to entertaine my self with those which concernes your glory, which I humbly request may raine over my sperit, to seperate it from earthly things and from all that is not yours, Be you my strength in sufferance, fight for me, be you my life, give me a plase in your habitation, to the end nothing may enter into my hart, which may hinder you from possessing me, o Jesus posses my soule. Amen.

TWO PAPERS BY SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD ON THE CHRISTENINGS AND GODPARENTS OF HIS CHILDREN

As appears from the Cavalier's monument, he had twelve children. The first of the following papers mentions four boys and three girls, the second five girls and three boys; that is nine in all.

The paper is copied by Sir Henry, the first baronet, on some blank leaves at the end of the Meditations, and he adds the following note, which tells us where he found the originals, and what their authority is.

This I copied out of two papers I found in my mother's closett after her death, written with my ffathers owne hand.

Sir Thomas Southwell—son of Sir Robert and Elizabeth, daughter of Lord Howard of Effingham; died in 1643.

Sir Ralph Hare of Stow, Bardulph, 10 miles from Oxburgh, Knight of the Bath; died 1671. Michael Hare and his wife had been recusants in the time of Elizabeth.

Sir Edward Waldegrave, died 1646. His mother, Jeronima Jerningham (Foley, Records, v. 382). He greatly distinguished himself in Cornwall in 1644.

Eustace Bedingfeld of Holme Hale, married a daughter of — Hawke, and she died 1641, aged 80 (Visitation of Norfolk, 1878, i. 157). He was buried 1596, and their son Anthony, of the same place, in 1636.

Sir William Grey of Merton, Norfolk. Rye's Norfolk Antiquarian Miscellany, iii. 38, says he was son of Robert, a recusant, but that he went to church. He had been a ward of Queen Elizabeth.

NO. 3

The following short paper gives us our first introduction to Mr. Thomas Marwood, of whom we shall hear more later on. It also gives us a vivid indication of the troubles and uncertainties, which remained for years after the confiscations under the Commonwealth. Sir Henry Bedingfeld "of Beckall" was the first baronet. The reason of his not being described as "of Oxburgh" was that Oxburgh Hall was left in an uninhabitable condition after the desolation of the civil wars. The fifteenth-century roof-timbers of the Hall on the east side still show signs of fire, and it is believed that this was due to the accidental fire by which the Parliamentary occupiers burnt a considerable part of the old building. "My house [i.e. Oxburgh] being burnt," says the second baronet below, "gave my wife small encouragement to live there. In supplying the house with furniture that was burnt, and making it habitable, it cost me 1000*l*." (below, p. 37). In his elder brother Thomas's time there was danger of "the houses being pulled down" altogether (above, p. 5). Beck Hall therefore became the family seat, until Oxburgh was restored. "Grandmother Paston" retired there after Edmund Paston's death, and died there in 1654 (below, p. 37). The house has been rebuilt on the old lines, and is now a farmstead surrounded by a moat. It was first a hospital for poor travellers, then a house of the Cokes, whose arms are still upon it.

S^r HENRY BEDINGFELD'S CASE ABOUT OXBURGH LIVING

In ye year 1641 S^r Henry Bedingfeld took up Armes for y^e King. He was made prisoner in y^e tower & his Estate seized by that Parliament. Whilst he was in y^e tower, comes to him M^r Merton (the Grandfather to y^e present incumbent) & desired to buy the perpetuall aduowson of Oxburgh. "For," says he, "sence y^e Estate is lost as to you; you had as good lett me have it (for Something) as a stranger for Nothing." But S^r H. B. answered, "I cannot sell the perpetuity, as being but tenant for life." Mr Merton answered, "I minde not that. Let me have your Name & lett me alone to deal wth y^e parliament." Whereupon, to oblige M^r Merton (to whom he did no wrong; because he told him he was but tenant for life), he tooke a small some of money, & gave him a deed of sale.

After S^r H. B.† got out of y^e tower, he told his son what he had done, vz. upon y^e Motives urged by M^r Meriton; who had then presented his son, the late M^r Meriton. Moreover S^r H. B. told his son, "I charge you on my blessing never to disturbe them during y^r life; as for y^r Son, he is at his own liberty."

This account I had from S^r Henry Bedingfeld's (of Beckall) owne mouth.

Witnesse my hand this 8th day of November 1713.

THO. MARWOOD.

Mary, married William Yaxley, of Yaxley, Suffolk. He died 1588, she in 1631.

Henry Bedingfeld, once of Cavenham (near Oxburgh), died at Sturston in 1629, and is buried there with the inscription, Filius dñi Henrici Bedingfeld militis aurati.

William Paston married Agnes Everard, daughter and heiress of William Everard of Lystead. He died 1652.

"My daughter, Beding:"—This would ordinarily mean—Mrs. Bedingfeld, the wife of the eldest son, Thomas.

† Notice that S^r H. B.'s son and heir was Thomas, who, however, had no children.

COLONEL THOMAS BEDINGFIELD

Born about 1605; succeeded, 22 November 1657; died, 25 April 1665

Of Thomas Bedingfield, eldest son of the Cavalier, we have already heard several particulars. He may possibly have seen service in the Palatinate in 1624, and in 1639 the Calendars of State Papers show that, being now a captain, he, with the king's licence, was helping to raise 1000 men to fight for the King of Spain. I do not find any particulars of his services, but his experiences would no doubt have prepared the way for his being put at the head of a troop of soldiers when the Civil War broke out. We hear something about this troop, after the Restoration, from a tract, with the long descriptive title, A List of Officers claiming the £60,000 granted by His Majesty for the relief of his Truly-Loyal and indigent party, 1663, 4to.

The reference made to him by his brother Henry, the first baronet, was not very flattering (p. 5), and his nephew Henry, the second baronet, has some still severer strictures (below, p. 36). The following petition gives us the Colonel's own account of what he considered the most notable events of his life. The paper may be found in the Record Office, Domestic Charles II., vol. xxii., n. 125, and is conjecturally dated November 1660 by the Calendarers.

THE PETITION OF COL^{LL} BEDINGFIELD

TO THE KINGS MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY

The humble petition of Col^l Thomas Bedingfeild, eldest sonne and heire of S^r Henry Bedingfeild late of Oxburgh in Norff. Kn^t, Dec^{ed}

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

That your petitioner upon the advancing of your Royall Father's Standard, Did at his oune charge raise a Regiment of foot, and a troop of Horse for his service, and maintained them untill at the Storme of Lincolne hee was sorely wounded and taken Prisoner, and for two yeares suffered loathsome Imprisonment in the Common Goale and was at lengthe Banished, his Father's whole estate beinge sold by the Usurped

(c. 1605-1665.)

Power, soe as his Father and hee have been Damnified above threescore thousand pounds.

That out of compassion of his Father's Sufferings, and att his Intreaty, hee concurred with his Father at the time when his Estate was sold, as aforesaid, in the Sale of Severall Lands and amongst others of the Mannors of Eastwell and Chamberlen* in the County of Suffolk to the then pretended President and Society for the Propagation of y^e Gospell in New England for a Summe of money whereof no part was paid to y^e petitioner or his Father, but all in those hands, who purchased the petitioner's Estate at Drury house, where your petitioner and his Father were enforced to pay 21,000 li more for Repurchasing the rest of his estate from the said first purchasers therof, for which his Lands (remaining Unsold) stand yet engaged.

Now, forasmuch as by the Providence of God it so falls out that the said Sale made to the pretended corporation is voyd in Law, for that they were not capable to purchase, being Erected without Authority other then by the Usurped Power, and did consist of Persons altogether Averse to your Royall Father's and your Majesty's Authority, whereupon your petitioner to his great Releife in his present Necessities and satisfaction of his creditors hath lately entred upon, and is according to the law Justly in possession of the same.

May it therefore please your most Excellent Maiesty, that your Royall Pleasure may be signifyed to your Attorney and Sollicitor Generalls, that in any further Charter or Grant, which may be obtained from your Majesty to confirm such Corporation as aforesaid, speciall care be had, that your petitioners title to the said Lands, so farr as by Law belongs unto him, may not in any wayes be impaired.

Endorsed. The Petition of Coll^{ll} Bedingfield.

R. H. Mason, History of Norfolk, (1884) gives the sequel. "These Eriswell estates, now estimated to be of the value of £7000 per annum, were lost to the Bedingfeld family, who never received any equivalent or compensation. They were sold several years since by the New England Society to H. H. Dhuleep Sing" (p. 329), and have lately passed into the hands of Lord Iveagh.

III

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD, THE FIRST BARONET

Born, 10 May 1613; created Baronet, 2 January 1661; succeeded, 25 April 1665; died, 24 February 1685

OF Sir Henry, the first Baronet, the earliest mention I find regards his recusancy. There is a memorandum dated June 1634, ordering inquiry to be made about Henry Bedingfeld of St. Clement Danes, who has forborne Church for one year (Cal. Add., 1634). This is clearly not the Cavalier, who would have been styled "Sir," and I do not know of any other Catholic Henry to whom it would apply. Our Henry was then twenty-one years of age, and was probably (the universities being closed to him) studying law, as other young Catholics of his day were wont to do.

During the war we find a very puzzling note to him. It was written March 21, 1645, by some royalist, calling himself J. Barker (but this is perhaps an alias), who had escaped to Dunkirk. The missive was to be carried by a messenger directed, it seems, to William Cobbe at Oxford. The letter is written in the dashing cavalier style, but contains little personal news beyond the following: "We hear that we may soon see you in France. We have divers of your friends in these parts, as your brother Jo: Capⁿ Thos: Bed: his bro: Math: Hary: and cousen H: Bed: Sir Francis Manock, Sir Edward Sulyard, & Rob: Rookwood, Jack Taborough and others"—and finally the writer "desires to serve your honoured father, if I can."

The names and relationships are indeed difficult to interpret.* Without venturing on this, I only submit that the tendency of this evidence is to prove that both the Cavalier and his son Henry were then with the garrison of Oxford.

In the papers of the Committee for Compounding, we find that on the 19th of December 1654, John Sandall and Benjamin Tanner, trustees for Michael and Edward, infants, younger children of Henry Bedingfeld, of Beck Hall, Norfolk, petitioned against the sequestration of Charlecombe, while on the 27th of February 1655, Henry Bedingfeld and Margaret his wife,

* Father Goldie has furnished me with notes on some of the names, from which notes (and other sources) we learn these particulars:—

"Your brother John." The same of whom the 2nd Baronet says (No. 16), "Uncle John died 16 Febrary 1685" (i.e. 1686).

"Captain Thomas Bed[ingfeld]," i.e. the third son of John Bedingfeld of Redlingfield (Foley, v. 568, Pedigree).

"His bro[ther] Math[ew]," of Amersden, Oxford, and afterwards of Brussels (Foley, ibid.), when he befriended Charles II.

"Hary:" Possibly an abbreviation of Harrington.

"Cousen H. Bed:" Perhaps Henry, fourth son of Anthony Bedingfeld of Holme Hale.

"Sir Francis Mannock," i.e. the second Baronet of Gifford's Hall, Stoke by Newland, Suff., died 1686.

"Sir Edward Sulyard." The son, Sir John Sulyard of Haughley, Suff., married Margaret, daughter of Lord Stourton, and died without issue (Foley, iv. 606, Pedigree).

"Robert Rookwood." Perhaps Sir Robert of Stanningfield and Coldham, who married Mary Townsend (of Ludlow); or their son Robert, if he was not already dead, fighting for the king at Oxford (Foley's Pedigree, iii. 788).

Jack Ta[s]borough, of Flixton, Suff.

daughter and sole heiress of Edward Paston (who had died February 18, 1655), beg that his estate may come to her, whereas two-thirds of it had been sequestrated. This claim was allowed (Calendar for Compounding, p. 3157).

Mention has already been made of his imprisonment at Lynn, from June or July to October 1655, on suspicion. In his extant petition for liberty (Domestic Calendar, 1655, p. 366) he describes himself as "of Billingsford" (the township of Beck Hall), and says that he has "a wife and 9 small children" dependent on him. The docket informs us that he was to be set free.

Of his fortunes after the war we hear a good deal from a MS. which was printed by Wotton in his Baronetage (iii. 215), and which was doubtless supplied by the family, and embodies the family traditions of about the year 1720.

"Henry Bedingfeld, Esq., happened to survive all his brothers and sisters (Mrs. Cobbe excepted), and to enjoy a long tranquillity, after the restoration of King Charles II., and when he had lain before that prince, who had desired it, a calculation of the sufferings of the family in their estate, which manifestly appeared to be above 45,000*l.*, his majesty replied with concern, that it was too great for him to recompense; to which Mr. Bedingfeld answered, that all he begged of his majesty was, that he might hope for the future, to enjoy in quiet that little which was left.

"His majesty did afterwards confer the dignity of a Baronet upon him, for the great and eminent services done by him and his family; but his son being soon after knighted by his majesty, the father let lie dormant his patent for many years after, which postponed him to many of the order in point of seniority.* This gentleman was esteemed one of the most complete and accomplished men of the age, the comeliness of his person, the clearness of his parts, and that noble sweetness of his temper, gave him so great a credit and authority in his country, as scarce any thing was thought well done, without his approbation; and many misunderstandings amongst the greatest families, that friends had tried to compromise, and could not, were referred to him, and happily determined. Yet the most fortunate part of his character, was his felicity in a companion for a wife, in the person of the before-mentioned Mrs. Margaret Paston, who, besides the great portion she brought, equalled him in all his merits, aided him through all his afflictions, and in his absence, when forced to fly beyond the seas, managed his whole concerns, and a numerous family, all with the utmost art and prudence; and so careful in the whole conduct of her life, as Sir Henry, amongst his dying words declared, That she had been a wife, who had never once displeased him; and yet if he had lived six weeks longer, they had been married fifty years. He died the sixth [sic] of February 1684-5, and lies buried in his chapel, within Oxburgh church, under a fair marble monument, erected for him by his mournful widow, who lies buried by him."

Attention may next be directed to the remarkable picture in which he and his family are represented as protected by the special intervention of the Blessed Virgin. No very definite tradition has survived as to the significance of the minor details, but the general theme is evidently the providential escape of the family during the civil wars. The picture will be of the time, when the family began "to enjoy its own again"—that is, the Restoration—and this we gather from the ages of the children, which will be from about ten or twelve to twenty-five or so.† The Baronet wears armour,

* This does not seem accurate.

† If the reader thinks that the ages of the children cannot be so great as I have assumed them to be, then he must also assume that the picture was painted abroad, and was meant to be hung abroad. For before the Restoration there would have been no house in England in which so pronouncedly Catholic a picture could have been safely set up. This theory is, of course, not at all an impossible one.

recalling his fighting days, and in the top left and right corners there is a scene, showing one man on horseback and another on foot, making signals, as it seems, to some ships. From what we know of this Henry's early life, we may be pretty sure that this refers to some adventure during the civil wars, perhaps to some escape abroad, for we do not hear of his having been made prisoner, but we do hear, among the papers of the Committee for Compounding, of an action taken by Thomas Jermyn, trustee for his children in March to September 1651, for safeguarding properties entailed to them. This looks as though the father were already abroad at that date (Calendar, p. 2624).

Of Dame Margaret Paston we know enough to recognise in her a remarkably interesting character. If the description given in Wotton's MS. stood alone, one might not be convinced of its being critical. In any case, however, a woman who did so much for the family during such difficult times, and who at the same time was so good a wife that her husband could not recollect when he had felt her thwart his wishes, must on these titles alone be considered a person of very remarkable gifts. Her son, who did not hesitate to speak severely of his uncle, has only one defect to complain of in her, that she was "a woman of great witte and quick partes, but very partiall in her affections," and this when extreme age is wont to bring natural failings into sharp relief.

The following letter illustrates the "mighty hospitality" which the family traditionally kept up, and tells us something about her Ladyship's character.

NO. I

LADY MARGARET BEDINGFELD TO THE DOWAGER LADY YARMOUTH

Original autograph. British Museum. Additional 27,448, f. 212.

No date or address, but ascribed to 1683 in the Catalogue.

Lord Yarmouth was the head of the Paston family, and the title had been only recently granted. Lady Margaret, herself by birth the heiress of one branch of the Pastons, regards, we see, the head of her house with enthusiastic loyalty. That was only natural in those days, and especially in the conservative reaction which followed the Restoration. Moderns, however, will hardly feel inclined to go all lengths with Dame Margaret, for the earldom had only been won by a marriage with the bastard daughter of King Charles II., and the estates of the historic family of Paston were being heavily burdened in debt (see p. 38).

However, for the moment all is going well, and the conjectural date, 1683, the year in which William succeeded to the title, exactly agrees with the rejoicings on that occasion, which so gratified the writer. His Lordship was not only Earl of Great Yarmouth, but was also (or would immediately be) its High Steward. Well then might its cannons bang "loud enough to reach London," and the Dean [of Norwich] come forward with a gift of oysters to "the favourite of Norfolk." Yet between the lines we can read that there had been a little anxiety how the once Puritan East Anglia would receive the new-made nobleman and his ambiguous wife. She, poor woman, was to die soon, on the 20th of July 1684; so this letter must be before that date.

mine in beeing deprived of the felicity of hearing his stories, being iust [as] deaf as I was, when you were in the country. Two or three days after, I heard again, and haue not bin so deaf till now; w^{ch} in one more considerable might be imputed to witchcraft, but I submit to mortification.

Now in earnest, Madam, I think my Lord came downe in the criticall time; and I wish, from my harte, that you and the king's grantchild, wth the Father and mother (who I begg my find my humble seruis) had bin all here together,* that you might haue seen what a generall disposition of kindness there was in the people to my Lord. I think you should do well to haue it told at courte as newse, what a Loue-fitt the country is fallen into to my Lord of Yarmouth; but this not to come immediatly from your self, but rather to seem coole in it. What passed at Yarmouth, I shall not need to repeat; the Canons were lowd enough to reach to London.

Many thanks for the concern you had of my sonne and husband. In what place soeuer they are, all the seruis they are able of doeing, is but to whisper to all persons, what worth, what witt my Lord of Yarmouth is master of, what the sweetness and candide nature, truth and constancie to his freinds, then perswade them to compare him to others, where they find the contrary very transparant. My Lord hath not had the fortune to be knowne enough, but those that hath his true Character, lett them refuse to loue him that can.

On Fryday S^r Phillip Woodhouse and S^r Jacob Astley, wth other gentlemen came on purpose to waite upon him. The Dean also, wth much respect; who brought a present of Oisters. I expected diuers of a lower form, who was desirous to come, but were kept of by a false Alarm, that we were full, by my Lord Townsend beeing here; and it seems he sayd some such thing to M^r Rawlins, that he would haue mett here, had not the goute hindred him. And that goute was one reason I took to perswade my Lord to send. For I must confess, Madam, it was my fault (if any) my Lord's sending thether; but I am confident he will be no looser by it, but put the two S^r Johns to new consults.† To goe himself had bin below him; but this sending, whilst he wore the lawrell on his browe, is but to triumph in a ciuill way.

I could giue you more substantiall reasons, if fitt for paper; but I hope you will belieue none studys more my Lord's and y^r Ladyship's Reputation then

Madam

Your Ladyship's humble seruant and kinswoman

M. BEDINGFIELD.

My husband presents his humble seruis to y^r Ladyship.

* The meaning seems to be—I wish you, Lady Yarmouth, with the grandchild, who is also the King's grandchild, had been here with the infants' father and mother, to see the great reception, &c.

† It would be necessary to have Lady Yarmouth's "letter of the 30th" to understand all these allusions. Why, what, or whither Lord Yarmouth "sent"; and who were "the two Sir Johns" (i.e. clergymen) "put to new consults," does not appear.

THE SYDENHAM PRAYER-BOOK

Another interesting relic of Margaret Bedingfeld—which indeed throws a good deal of welcome light on the tastes of Catholic ladies of her generation—is her family prayer-book, which belonged to her mother and grandmother before her, and which is still at Oxburgh. It contains a good deal of inedited Catholic verse of the Elizabethan period, and a hitherto unknown prayer of Queen Mary Tudor.

The volume is in size a decimo sexto, and contains 166 pages. The watermark in the paper is the crowned jar or pot, the most usual English mark. The binding is original pigskin, the sides stamped round the edges with gilt lines, and in the panels the letters E. G., with an ornament of cherubs' heads between them. Two brass clasps, the upper one broken; the back also partly broken. The pages have margins ruled with red, and there are about seven or eight different hands. E. G. will clearly be the initials of the person for whom the book was originally bound, but I can obtain no clue as to who this may have been. There is another small volume (ΘΕΟ) in the Oxburgh library with somewhat similar letters on its sides, but again no clue to the original possessor.

First among the contents, we should notice the memoranda of births and christenings, which occur at p. 67.

[1] M[emorandum] that my sonne George Sidenham was borne at brimpton the xxijth daie of October A^o dñi 1588, in the xxxth yere of the raigne of o^r soueraigne ladye Queene Elizabethē &c. godfathers Sir George Sidenham, Sir Jo Clifton [& M^{ris} banfield, cancelled].

[2] Also my sonne John was was [sic] borne there the xxvjth of September A^o dni 1589 in the xxxjth yere of the raigne of the queenes maiesty aboue said. his godfathers were sir John Sidenham, Mr. Thomas Stoughton and thold M^{ris} banfeild.

[3] And also my sonne Raffe was borne there the xiiijth daie of february in the xxxiiijth yere of her maiesties raigne A^o dñi 1590. His godfathers were Sir Raphe Husey, M^r Edward St barbe and my aunte ffitziames.

[4] My [daughter francis, obliterated] was borne at Beer in dorset, the xj of May in y^o xxxiiij yere of her maiesties raigne a^o dñi 1592. & her godmothers were M^{rs} ffrances Turberville & M^{rs} [blank] Ancketill and M^r Alexander Bret of whytchurch.

[5] My daughter baningfeld was borne the 11th of nouember, being St Martines day pope and martyr, her daughter Elizabeth was borne upon St Thomas day before Christmas &c. 1636.

My godaughter francis beningfeld was borne upon ploumonday this present year 1638.*

The first two memoranda are in one hand; the third, fourth, and fifth are each in different hands. The first entries were evidently written simultaneously, or almost simultaneously, with the rest of the book, which we may therefore date as belonging to the year 1590 or thereabouts. The family is that of the Sydenhams of Brimpton in Somerset, now extinct, whose pedigree may be followed in Burke's Extinct Baronetage (1844), p. 516. From this source we learn that George died without issue in 1615, while John, who married Alice Hoby, became heir to his father. Ralph became Master of the Charter House, was eventually knighted, entered Parliament in 1641, and died in 1671. The pedigree of the Sydenhams, given in British Museum, Harleian MSS. 1154, fol. 179 (=225), gives the names of those who intermarried with the Sydenhams of those times, and among them we notice at once three of the families, from which we here see that the godparents of these children were chosen, to wit, Bamfield, Clifton, and [St.] Barbe.

Frances, the daughter born on the 11th of May 1592, eventually married Mr. Edward Paston of Horton in Gloucester and Appleton in Norfolk, and it is evidently she who has in 1638 written the memorandum that "My daughter baninfeld"—that is, Margaret Paston, in whom we are now interested—"was born on the 11th of November." The year of her birth is not added, but as she was eighty-four at the time of her death, January 14, 1702-3, we see that she must have been born November 11, 1618. The date of her marriage is also unknown, but the inference from Wotton's MS. is that it took place on the 27th of March (or rather the 7th of April, see p. 19) 1635. Why the last memorandum has been obliterated does not appear, though we may presume that it had something to do with the civil wars.

We may now proceed to give the contents of the prayer-book. It is evidently meant to be subsidiary to some other prayer-book, presumably the Hours of the Blessed Virgin, the most popular book of devotions of that time. For we see by comparison with the tables of the prayers usually found in printed Horæ (E. Hoskins, Horæ B. V. M., 1901) that the present collection varies from them in almost every respect. Some of the prayers may be translations from new and popular prayer-books printed abroad, such as Verep's Enchiridion Catholicum; some of the verses are original translations (p. 70), some are newly written (p. 77); but the probability is that the majority are derived from more ancient sources.

That the selection of prayers was made to suit the taste of a Catholic lady of about the year 1590 is seen both from the inclusion of "the Earl of Arundel's verses" (p. 77), he being then still alive and under sentence of death, and from the allusion to "Tyburne's force" (p. 74). That the collector was a lady is clear from the inclusion of "good Queen Maryes prayer: which she used everye mornynge, all her lyfe tyme," which is otherwise unknown; as also from the prayers for a married wife, and for a woman with child (pp. 94, 137), and from the ejaculation "Have pity on me thy handmaiden," found in the litany of our Lady.

The prayers are not arranged on any well-defined plan, yet there are certainly some traces of order. I have therefore inserted sectional headings to facilitate the comprehension of the whole. Headings written in the margin of the original are here printed in italics.

[§ 1. Introduction]

P. 1 (flyleaf). A prayer to be sayd at ye preest turning and sayeng, Orate pro me [fratres]. "The holly ghost illumine thy hart . . . offenses of all his faythfull. Amen."*

P. 2. A prayer to be sayd in ye begynning of y^{or} prayers. (1) "O my swete saviour Jesu . . . prayse thy hollye name, now & ever. Amen." (2) "O my good Lord Jesu Christ . . . offences y^t thereby might come. Amen."

P. 3. GOOD QUEENE MARYES PRAYER: w^{ch} she vsed everye mornynge all her lyfe tyme.

O lorde my maker and Redemer, I thanke thy goodnes most humblye, y^t thow hast preserved me all this night past & this daye hetherto, in which tyme, if I have done any thing to thy plesure, blessed be thow for it. I knowlege & confesse all vertewe to come of the. Wherefore I beseeche the to contynewe & encrease the same in me, & let all the lawde & prayse thereof be wholly geven unto the, which arte the authour of all goodnes, and nothing imputed to me vyle wretche, who of my selfe cannot so muche as thinke one good thought w^out thy grace, humblye desiering thy goodnes also, y^t I maye ever yeld thanks to y^e for all thy benefitts w^t suche strong faythe, stedfast hope, pure perfight & fervent love, w^t suche full trust and confidence in y^e, as may be to thy pleasure & y^e helthe and Comeforte of myne owne sowle. Te Deum, &c.

* Hoskins, p. 107, gives this prayer in Latin.

And my God, wherein soever I have offended the, eyther concerning my dewtye towards thy maiestie, or want of perfight charitee to my neighbour, throughe the occasion of the devell, the worlde, y^e fleshe, by misinformacyon, ignorance, negligence, by any sudden motion or passion of frailtee, syckenes of bodye, or any other waye since the howre of my birthe unto this tyme, I aske the mercye, O God the father allmightie, for all my offences committed in thowght, Desyering y^e bothe to forgeve me & to vouchesafe this day & evermore to governe & guide the same. Pater de cælis Deus, ignosce mihi; et propitius esto mihi misere peccatrici.

I aske the in lyke manner forgevenes, O God y^e sonne, for all myne offenses, committed in worde, beseeching thy wysedome to forgeve me, & this Daye & evermore to Rule & governe my toungue. Fili Redemptor mundi Deus, ignosce mihi; et propitius esto mihi misere peccatrici.

I desyre thy goodnes also of pardon, O God y^e hollye goost, for all my offenses committed in my deedes, Humblye prayeng y^e to forgeve me, & both this Daye & contynuallye to order & directe the same. Spiritus Sancte Deus, ignosce mihi; et propitius esto mihi misere peccatrici.

So holly Trinitee, iij persons & one veye God, vouchesafe to forgeve all myne offenses, and send me suche grace this daye as may preserve me from all synne, w^t true knowlege to perceyve wherein, how & in what manner I have offended y^e eyes of thy Maiestie & let the feare of myne owne deathe & thy generall Judgements staye me from all presumptyon in the Discussing thereof, & on the other syde, let the multytude of thy mercyes w^t my full trust & confidence therein, kepe me from vaine or foolish scrupulosyte in y^e same, so y^t I having the right understanding & knowlege of all myne offenses maye, by thy grace, take suche contrytyon & Repentance for them, as maye be to thy contentatyon & the salvatyon of myne owne sowle. Amen. Miserere mei Deus &c.

O my savyour, I offer my selfe whollye to the for a perpetual sacrifice this daye and evermore, that is to saye my freewill, faythe, sowle, bodye, lyfe, deathe, sycknes, helthe, my kynne & frendes, (especiallye thy servants) and enemyes (if I have any) & all my servants and subjects both quicke & deade, Desiering thine infinite mercye to vouchesafe to take y^e order & disposing of all o^r matters bothe spirituall and temporall this daye & ever into thy governance & protectyon.

And first, sweete Jesu, concerning matters of my soule, that is to saye bothe my prayer & all other goostlye exercyses, Graunt me grace, I beseeche the, neyther to omitte nor to do in any poynte contrarye to y^t w^{ch} shalbe most to thy pleasure, the helthe of myne owne soule & the profite & cunforte of all myne evenchristen * bothe quicke & deade.

Secondarilye touching prosperitee in this worlde & the helthe of my bodye, graunt me grace, my most mercifull sayvour Jesu, when thou doest send me eyther of them, bothe to receyve them humblye w^t thankesgyving accordinglye, w^tout any kynde of Elatyon or pride, & so to use them as maye best please the & profite bothe my selfe and myne even christen w^t as willing a mynde w^tout any manner of grudge to have them taken from me, eyther by thy will or sufferance, as ever I was glad to receyve them. And concerning sycknes & adversytee, so long (good lorde) as my lyfe maye do servyse acceptable to the, eyther in the amendement of y^e same, or any other kynde of waye, Vouchsafe, my God, y^t I maye never have power throwge myne owne fawte to abbreviate one Jotte therof. But let y^e vertue of thine abstynence w^{ch} thou didst use heere in earthe for o^r example & the remembrance of the eyzell & gall, wherof thou didst tast in the tyme of thy most bytter passion, staye me this Daye & at all tymes from taking to muche or to litle of meates or drinkes. And whensoever it shall please thy goodnes, my lorde God, through the visitatyon or suffrance to send me any adversytee or sycknes, Graunt for thy sweete name Jesus sake, y^t all seeking of worldlye consolatyon set a part, I may contynuallye call for thy helpe, putting my full hope & confidence therein, & give me grace immediatlye, I humblye beseeche the, both depelye to consider what torments & passion thou my sweete sayvour, being Innocency it self, didst suffer for me most synnefull wretche. And send me therein some devout Contemplation, w^{ch} maye extinguishe all worldlye care in me, & all grace to remember what punishment I have & do daylie deserve for myne offenses, committed against the and my neighbour, & let these consideratyon cause me not onelye patyentlye, but also Joyefullye, to suffer all sycknes & adversytee w^t suche fortitude & Magnanimitie as maye be most acceptable to the & best for myne owne sowles helthe & my neighbours. Most humblye beseching thy mercye to accepte the same in part of penance both for myne owne synnes & y^e offenses of myne even Christian, w^t myne ennemyes also. And when I shall have donne all this bothe rightlye & faythfullye, Gyve me grace afterwarde temperatlye to use all worldelye comeforts & remedies & y^t onelye but in the & for the.

Thirdeleye, concerning myne owtward & worldlye affayres, y^t I have & shall take in hand eyther w^t my superiours, equalls or inferyours, Grant (my most beningne lorde Jesu) y^t in all things I may use y^t waye w^{ch} shalbe chefeldye to thy pleasure, the comefort & salvatyon of my soule & y^e profytte & edefyng of my neighbour. And vouchesafe y^t y^e vertue of thy power, O allmightie God the father, maye gyve me power to leave no Jote thereof undone, & let the vertue of thy wyedome, O god the sonne, gyve me grace & wille to do no kynde of thing contrarye to y^e same. And graunt y^t y^e vertue of thy strengthe & comeforte, O god the hollye goost, maye never departe from me, but strengthe(n) & comeforte me bothe in the begynning, proceding & finishing of my affayres.

Domine Jesu Christe qui me creasti, redemisti, et preordinasti ad hoc, quod sum; tu scis quid de me facere vis: Fac de me secundum voluntatem tuam, cum misericordia tua. Domine Jesu Christe, qui solus es sapientia, tu scis que mihi expediunt; prout tibi placet, et sicut in oculis tue maiestatis videatur de me, ita fiat in misericordia tua. Amen.

Morcover gyve me grace, o hollye trinitee, I most humblye desier y^e y^t mine ennemyes, neyther goostlye nor bodilye, nor any creature may ever have power to cawse me to dowte or waver in any one Jote of thy trew & Catholyke faythe, or the circumstance thereof, But graunt y^t I maye beleve & use everye thing perteyning thereunto in the same sorte & degree, w^{ch} thow hast by thy Church appointed & willed me to doe, w^towt eyther presumption or scrupulosyte. And if ever I shalbe put to any examinatyon or triall thereof, send me suche strengthe (my most bountefull lord God) y^t I maye rather most gladlye, quietlye & willinglye suffer all kynde of torments, yea even Deathe it selfe, then omitte or forsake any parte of my sayd faythe, w^{ch} being thoroughlye and perfightlye grounded in my harte, Gyve me grace rightlye to expresse the same in my owtwarde works, behaviour, & conversatyon; & vouchesafe, my lorde God, to set suche a bridle on my tongue y^t I maye never have power to speake any vayne, Idle, or superfluous wordes, neyther also to the hindrance of any creature, nor to trust any to muche or to lytel, nor yet to disclose any secret matter w^towt Just occasyon, but let my wordes be suche as maye be to thy glorye, myne owne profite & the comeforte & edifyeng of y^e hearers. And whensoever my speeche maye doe good, eyther in geving counsaile or setting foorth the thy truthe, Graunt y^t I maye never be to importunate nor to slowe in speakyng, So y^t myne even Christian maye have no occasyon by my wordes to offend the, or to misiudge me, or any other; but y^t they may perceyve thy goodnes to work in me, and bothe they & I may gyve the whole prayse thereof to the.

Furthermore I beseeche thy goodnes to send me suche pacyence to beare my neighbours Infirmities, as maye be most acceptable to y^e; so y^t when any of them shalbe unpatyent, I may give no occasyon to encrease the same. But whereas, by informatyon or reformatyon, I maye do any good, graunt me grace to doe it, w^t all modestye & temperance. And whereas neyther my wordes nor deedes can prevayle, vouchesafe my God, to sende me suche discretyon, wysedome, humilitee, charytee & patience, as maye, by thy grace, move & procure them to amend their faults, after suche sorte as may redownde to thy glorye and the helthe of there sowles. And vouchesafe, good lorde, to plucke up by the rootes in me all Desyer of worldlye prayse & vayne glorye, so y^t I may neyther doe any thing for the respect of the same, nor reioyse in the having thereof; but whensoever it shall please thy goodnes to worke in me any good thing, gyve me grace forthwth, I humblye beseeche the, to lifte up my harte to the w^t thankgeving, & to consider how all goodnes cummeth of the, & y^t of my selfe, w^towt the, I can doe nothing but evell. Put in there myndes also, y^t shalbe then present, the lyke remembrance & consyderatyon, by occasyon whereof the whole praise of all good things maye be attribute to y^e, to whome onelye it is due. Amen.

P. 13. A daylye prayer to the Trinitie. "O most noble, most hollye and triumphant Trinitee . . . & to the deade, Rest & delyverance from there paynes. Amen."

Pp. 14-68. 7 Meditations of y^e 7 effusions of Christ's bloud, & sutable against y^e 7 deally synnes & necessarye to get y^e 7 Remedyes against them. [The Meditations are allotted to the seven days of the week, and each is followed by two prayers, the first followed by Pater Noster, the second by Miserere.]

P. 68. "I giue thankes to thie mercie . . . thow mayest be praised & blessed. Amen."

P. 69. To Christ Jesus our redemer. "Lord Jesus Christ, sonne of the lyuing god . . . with my whole harte. pater noster." "I offer vp vnto thee lord Jesu Christ . . . praise of thy holye name. pater noster." "Lord Jesu, I comend . . . haue mercy vpon vs, and al siners. pater noster."

[§ 2. Hymns and Proses]

P. 70. A VERIE SWETE HYMNE OF THE BLESSED SACRAMENT, maide by St. Thomas, translated into English.*

- [1.] With devoute feare, | I thee adore | O secrete deitie, |
w^{ch} [here] under y^{ese} figures bare | liest hid undoubtedlie. |
- [2.] To y^e, my lord, my troubled hart | her selfe dooth wholie giue, for thoughte of thee consumes her so | t'is death † from y^e to liue.
- [3.] My sight, my taste, my trembling touch | of y^e all are deceued
yet hearing y^e to be heare, | I haue firmlie y^t beleued.
- [4.] Beleued ! O whie? for I beleue | all y^t my lord hath tolde nothing more true is, then y^{is} word | of truthe, y^t man can holde.
5. Vpon the cros lay hid, swete lord, | thine onely deitye but here thie godhead secrett is | wth thy humanitie.
6. Bothe w^{ch} I stedfastly beleue | & reuerently confesse
wth thefe repentant crauing graunt | of pardon in distres.
7. Mine eyes unchast thiè bloudie wounds | do not deserue to se wth holy Thomas, yet my lorde | I doe acknowledge thee.
8. Encrease, swete Jhesu, my true faith | from sacred throne aboute.
encrease my stedfast hope in y^e, | encrease in me thy loue.
9. O suete record of dolefull death | w^{ch} ended all our strife most louing lord y^e truest bread | to man w^{ch} giuest life.
10. One onely thing I craue, swete lord, | my soule let fede on thee be in her taste like sugar swete | turne backe thie loue to me.
11. O pelicane all full of loue | Jhesu my soule washe cleare
what's nowe impure wth y^t pure bloude | w^{ch} stream'd downe Longins speare.

* The division of the lines in these and the following verses is extremely confused in the original MS., owing to the smallness of the pages.

† In MS., "y^t death is."

12. One drop of w^{ch}, o vertu greate, | were able to restore this wretched world from all her sin | to liue for euermore.
13. Swete Jhesu when shall I obtaine | y^t w^{ch} I most desyre
y^e sighte whereof though under shade | hathe set my harte on fire.
14. I meane thie selfe, my loue most deare, | desiring, face to face, thee to behold wth blissful eyes | sit on thy throne of grace.
Afforde the poore translatoure a place in yo^r devowte prayers.

P. 71.—JESUS

With a reuerend * mynd this picture vewe | which by the doste passe, and godly honour geve to him | for whome it pictured was.

Take noe offenc to looke upon | this Imag thus imprest ;
condeme not those which vse the same | but Judge of them the best.

It is no God, yt hathe no life | yet offereth to the eye,
the manner howe our Sauour Christ | vouchsafed once to dye.

To reconcile mankinde to God, | from whome by sinn he fell, into a state most damnable | amidst the dieueles of hell.

With pacience then behold the same | and often haue in minde
the passion of our sauour Christ | that thou his grace maist finde.

Here followeth the pittifull and lamentable speach of Christ Jesu vnto synners.

“Behould O man what I sustayne for thee . . . that the ramping lyon and ravening woulfe might not deuoure thee . . . thou art devided from

P. 74.—THE HARTY WYSHES OF A PENYTENT SYNNER

O that I could with streames of teares
my synfull lyfe Lament,

O that I coulede my dolefull harte in sundry peaces rent.

With dolefull sighes and eke wth sobbes, would God my dayes were spent,
That so I might with Angells bright enjoy æternall lighte.

O God how hard a harte haue I,
that yealdes not droppes of bloode,

To satisfye, to pacyfye,
to doe my poore soule good.
yf that I could, full fayne I wold,
this cravant corps forgoe,

By rack, by rope, or Tyburn's force,
I would cut of my woe :

But God, who knowes my secreate thoughtes, dispose me at his wyll

That flyenge yll contynualle his servant I be styll.

A harte [a harte], sweete Saviour,
a harte vouchsafe to sende,

A harte to bid me take goode harte my heauie harte to mend.

* The scribe, in copying these verses, has written “d” with a stroke through the top, “đ.” This is a more antique form than he otherwise uses, and suggests that his exemplar itself was of a more ancient date.

Make that my harte, become thy harte,
 that whatsocuer fall,
 My wyll, thy wyll may ever be,
 on the to crye and call,
 That I, not I, may ever be,
 but thou in me, and I in thee,
 To serve thy heavenly maiestie.

P. 75.—A DIAŁOG BETWENE GOD AND SINFUL M. J. C.

“Good God send teares.” | “What teares?” | “Of blood abundantly.”
 “From whence?” | “From every parte | from hart incessantly.”
 “For what?” | “For siñes | comitted grevouslye.”
 “Gaynst hōme?” | “Gaynest God : | gaynst man contemptuouslye.”
 “What then?” | “Then Lord dissolve my bandes,
 And soule well bathed in blood, | receue into thy handes.
 For this I longe : | For this I languishe Lord
 This that I craue : | This let me haue : | vouchsafe this to afford.”
 “So hart shaft stay * from bloody teares : | so soule shall gladsome be.
 So head and hande : | so every part | shaft praise † thy maiestie.”

[Here follow ejaculations for mercy, and in praise of the providence of God.]

P. 77.—EARLE OF ARUNDLE'S VERSES

O Christ my lord which for my sinnes didest hange upon a tree ;
 Graunt that thy grace in me, poore wretch,
 may still ingrafted bee.

Graunt that thy naked hanging then may kill in me all pride
 And care of wealth, sith thou didst there in such poor state abide.

Graunt y^t thy crown of prickinge thornes, w^{ch} thou for me didst were,
 May make me willinge for thy sake all shame and payne to bare.

Graunte y^t the skornes and tauntes, w^{ch} thou didst on the cross endure,
 May humble me, and in my hart all pacience still procure.

* MS., shutt.

† In MS., J. C. is inserted here, not at the end of the line. M. in the headline probably stands for “Master.”

‡ At this point there occurs a curious copyist's freak. He (or she) has copied out, and then cancelled, the following doggerel rhyme :—

“When myne eyes beheld of yore the seemly sainte y^t I adore,
 I was glad : She was coye :
 Greefe I founde in steede of joye.”

The simplest explanation would be that the copyist inadvertently passed from one set of verses to another. But if any are resolved to see here a romance in real life, no one will be able positively to disprove that theory.

Graunt that thy prainge for thy foes may plaint within my breaste
 Such charitie as, from my hart,
 I malis maye deteste.

Graunt y^t thy pearced handes, which did of nothings al thinges frame,
 May move me to lift up my handes, and ever prayse thy name.

Graunt that thy wounded feete, whose steps were perfect evermore,
 May learne my feete to tredd those pathes, which thou hast gone before.

Graunte y^t the bitter gall, which did thy emptye bodye fill,
 Maye teache me to subdue my fleshe, and to performe thy will.

Graunt y^t thy woundes may cure the sores,
 w^{ch} sinn in me hath wrought,
 Graunt y^t thy deathe may save the soule,
 w^{ch} with thy blood was bought.

Graunt y^t those dropes of bloode, w^{ch} ranne out from thy hart amayne,
 May melt my hart into salt teares, to see thy greuous payn.

Graunt that thy blessed graue, whereas thy bodye laye a while,
 May burye all such vayne delightes,
 as may my minde defile.

Graunt y^t thy goinge doune to them, which did thy sight desiere,
 Maye kepe my soule, when I am deade, cleare from the purginge fyre.

Graunt y^t thie rising up from death may rayse my thoughts from sinne :
 Graunt y^t thy parting from this earth from earthe my hart may winne.

Graunt lorde y^t thy assendinge then may lift my mynd to thee.
 That there my hart and joye may rest, though heare in fleshe I be.

Amen.

A PRAIER TO JESUS

Jesu lord that madest me,
And wth thy bloud me bought,
Forgeue, that I haue greued thee,
In wordes, workes and thought.

Jesu for thy woundes smarte
On thy feete and handes two,
Make me lowlie of my harte,
Thee to loue, as I should do.

Jesu Christe to thee I call,
That art God full of might,
Keepe me cleane, y^t I do not fall
In deadlie synne [by] day & night.

Jesu geue me my askinge
Perfitt pacience in my disease,
And that I neuer doe y^t thing
Thee to anger or displease.

Jesu that art heauen kinge Soothfast God and man also,
Geue grace of good ending,
And them that I am holden to.

Jesu for thy dolefull teares,
That thou sheddest for my gylt,
Here and speede my praier
And grante that I be not spylt.

Jesu for them, I the beseeche,
That anger thee in any wise,
Strike them not in thy wrathe
And let them liue in thy seruice.

Jesu ioyfull for to see,
Of thy Saincts eueryehone,
Comfort them that carefull be
And helpe them that be wobegon.

Jesu keepe them that be good,
 And them amend y^t greueeth thee,
 And send us frute and earthlie foode,
 As us needeth in our degree.

Jesu that art wthout ende
 Allmightie God in Trynitie
 Cease all warr, and peace us send,
 With lasting loue and charitee.

Jesu that art the g^hostlie stone,
 Of all holly church on earth,
 Bring thy flock all into one,
 And Rule them right in one herde.

Jesu for thy precious bloude,
 Bring the soules into blisse
 For whom I haue any good,
 And forgeue them there mysse.
 Amen.

There is an interesting, and I think superior, North-country version of this hymn in the British Museum (Arundel, 285, f. 177). The volume is lettered outside "Scottish Poetry and Prose." The date of the MS. would be early sixteenth century.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD.
Second Baronet, 1636-1704.

IV

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD, THE SECOND BARONET

Born in 1636; succeeded, February 24, 1685; died, September 14, 1704

Wotton's MS., which doubtless gives us the family traditions of the early eighteenth century, has the following account of him :—

"Henry Bedingfeld came over with the duke of Gloucester,* upon the restoration of King Charles II., being that duke's chief favourite, and was soon after knighted. The court breeding meeting with so generous and affable a temper, made him so fine a gentleman, as few were in a higher character; and after that, when he became settled in a country life, so great was his hospitality and splendid house-keeping, as no gentleman of his rank and fortune did any where exceed him; and had not the religion of his ancestors, in which he was born and bred, obstructed his coming into the public stations of his country, no man whatever would have been more popular.

"He was twice married, first to Anne, only daughter and heir to Charles [Howard] viscount Andover, afterwards earl of Berkshire, by whom he had no issue. His second wife was Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Sir John Arundell, of Lanhern, in the county of Cornwall, Bart., by whom he had three daughters, Elizabeth, who died young at Brussels; Margaret, who married Sir John Jernegan, Bart., eldest son and heir of Sir Francis Jernegan, of Cossey, in the county of Norfolk, Bart., and Frances, who was married to Sir Francis Anderton of Lostock, in the county of Lancashire, Bart. (who died without issue); and one only son, Sir Henry Arundell, his successor.

"Sir Henry died 14 Sept. 1704, and lies interred in the said chapel of Oxburgh, between his two wives, at the foot of a noble monument, erected for them by the said Sir Henry, in his life-time." †

NO. I

MEMORANDUM BOOK OF SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD, KNIGHT AND BARONET, who died in 1704

The Second Baronet has left a Memorandum Book, written, as appears from Memorandum No. 21, about the year 1698, when his mother reached the age of eighty. It contains a sort of survey of the family, and of the family fortunes at that time. There are three chief topics. The first gives an account of his stewardship in regard to the will of the Countess of Berkshire, his mother-in-law, of which he and his brother had been appointed executors. This portion is here omitted, as telling us nothing about the Bedingfeld family. The second topic or section consists of memoranda on living and dead members of the family. For convenience of reference I have numbered these notes consecutively. The third topic or section gives a rough survey of the additions and improvements to the family estate, which had been made in his time. From the slightly apologetic tone of

* Henry Stuart, third son of Charles I., was born 1640, and died September 13, 1660. According to this account, Henry Bedingfeld entered his service while upon the Continent, and returned at the Restoration, 1660.

† The English Baronetage, printed for Thomas Wotton, iii. 216-217. He calls the paper "MS. penes T.W."

this section, we are tempted (though perhaps unreasonably) to suspect that some one* had accused him of extravagance, and so he sets down this survey of his position, for the quieting of his own conscience, and perhaps for the future satisfaction of his heirs.

[Family Notes]

1. I married Ann Howard, sole daughter of ye Earle of Berkshires, she brought me noe cheldren, And dyed 19 Sept 82.

20. My Brother John Bedingfeld dyed at Wickmore 9th August 1693 aged about 42.
21. My mother, aged neer 80, is in perfect health, and in all probability may live many yeares, she is still a Woman of great witt & quick partes, but very partiall in her affections.
22. My Lady Barkshire was a person of great honour and was very kind to me at all times, or else I must abeen a begger.

[The Oxburgh Property; Debts & Purchases]

When I first came with my wife, ye Lady Anne, to live here,* I was 450[£] in debt, & I was forced to repair this house, and all my tenants houses, w^{ch} putt me into debt before I could well Imagen itt att least 3500[£]. W^{ch} I paid most of itt by som bargains I made, what my Uncle Paston left, and by 1500 I had of my brother Johns portion. But for that 1500 I am like to be a great sufferer, by reason I agreed with my Father, in consideration of y^t 1500, to lett my Brother John enioye Ashill Holt in or during my Mothers Life, from ye death of my father, soe that I have alreadye paid since my father's death 2700 in consideration of 1500 & in all likelyhood I may pay it many years, w^{ch} as times are has halfe ruined me. When I consider well my expenses I find I have spent a great deal of money since 1666, And I have for my justification the obligation of maintaining my first wife according to her quality w^{ch} I did to gain my Lady Barkshire's favour, And then it is to bee considered I had not till my fathers death six hundred pounds to live on, soe consider[ing] how I lived & what vast expense I was at in repairing houses that I wonder I did not run further into debt.

And since my father's death I have all ye charge of the familie upon me, And I dare say I never received [£]1000 a yeare, Ashill being deducted, Shingham to my Brother Edward, and a rent charge of 120 per annum to my Mother out of Cavenham, and Considerable matters out of ye estate. I must also say something for my selfe for spending my last wifes portion, being 4000[£]. I lived in London in hopes of getting great matters at Court, as I was promessed, And also my house being burnt gave my wife small encouragement to live here; so that, in supplyng ye house with furniture that was burnt & making the house habitable, it cost me 1000[£], and 4000[£] I laid out in purchases soe I conclude I spent 2000 in expectation of great matters, w^{ch} proved nothing but Court Holy Water. And since the Revolution I find I

* It will be remembered that Oxburgh had been partly ruined during the Commonwealth, and that the first Baronet had lived at Beck Hall. See above, p. 15.

* The wording is obscure. The underlying thought appears to be: "The double taxes, imposed upon Catholics, have, I find, run me into debts equal to all the taxes. For though I laid out the following sums, which I borrowed, in profitable purchases of land, I remain indebted to that extent."

† Apparently William Paston, second Lord Yarmouth, who succeeded in 1683. He was related to Sir Henry through his mother, Margaret Paston, as mentioned above.

THOMAS MARWOOD'S MEMORANDA

Of Thomas Marwood we learn enough from his diaries, and other extant papers and notes, to make us keenly regret that we do not know more. There is a picture at Oxburgh of a middle-aged man with a boy, which has been too hastily labelled with Marwood's name. But in a dark corner the date "1640. Aetatis suae 64" can, on closer inspection, be distinctly read, and this conclusively proves that the picture represents some one else. We must therefore leave out this picture from our consideration, and considering the unprepossessing cast of the features, this need not afflict us.

Marwood occurs twice in England as a place-name, in Devonshire and in Durham, and this may account for the two large Marwood families, the one chiefly in Devonshire, the other chiefly in Yorkshire, and a good deal of information is extant about each of them. I have not been successful in finding our Thomas's place in either family, but it seems likely that the quest, though it might be a long one, would very probably be brought to a successful termination.

The year of his birth is nowhere mentioned. Half-way through the seventeenth century—that is, 1650—would suit the other dates well enough. The day of his birth is alluded to below, in the year 1700, on the 28th of November. His death, as appears from his tombstone, took place on the 26th of October 1718. Some important dates for his life have been recorded by him on the fly-leaves of a meditation book still in the Oxburgh library. The memoranda are in effect resolutions, or are connected with resolutions set down during annual retreats, or days of special recollection, from the year 1689 to 1698, and generally on New Year's Day. The book is Méditations pour l'Advent, &c., composées en Latin par le R. P. Busée: Nouvelle Traduction, Paris, 1684, and inscribed "à libris Tho. Marwood." The first line has been cancelled, but a good many of the words can be deciphered.

There are also in Oxburgh Hall Library a considerable number of books with the inscription "è libris Tho. Marwood," all (esp. a Bible) annotated or underlined by him. It is very likely that some of these may contain other biographical notes. There is a Memorandum Book of farm receipts, &c., with date 1681 on 1st page, and on page 1 of the Rentall Book of 1688-1696, in Marwood's hand, there occur the words, "In the year 1679, that I came to Oxburgh."

It has sometimes been suggested that Marwood must once have been an ecclesiastical student at a seminary; and without a doubt the acumen, which he shows in some of his theological notes, is considerable. But with these memoranda before us, we see that this theory cannot be upheld, for it is now evident that he was born and educated a Protestant. That his education was good (though his Latin style was not Ciceronian) is evident from all that he has left us in writing. His first serious introduction to the world was "In the house of Doctor Lett^l, from the first of January 1669-70 to October 1671." If only we could read that name "Lett^l" perfectly, we might make out much about his early years.

For the present we can only conjecture, from the tastes displayed by Marwood in the Diary and other notes, that "Dr. Lett^l" will have had his degree either in medicine or in divinity, as his pupil shows decided tastes for both sciences.

The next date is that of his conversion, January 11, 1672. This, it will be noted, was just three months after leaving "Dr. Lett^l." We may therefore plausibly conclude that there was some connection between these two events, but all else remains obscure. Then come the dates of the deaths of his father and mother. There is no R.I.P. added, though it is inserted after his brother John's obit. The omission is presumably of no meaning, but if it has any, it would signify, not that he did not wish them peace, but that they were Protestants, for whom the prayer was not then usually added.

In the year 1679 he was confirmed at Montaigu* in Belgium, a celebrated shrine of the Madonna. The inference, from the long wait between conversion and confirmation, is that he had been in England during all that time. In the same year, but whether before or after is not known, he came to Oxburgh, officially as steward or agent to the estate, but in truth he seems to have been everything to the family—nurse, tutor, doctor, and friend. "Amicus Verus, et Benefactor insignis Domus Bedingfeldianæ," are the words which the third baronet inscribed on his tomb. On the 11th of December 1684 he was hit in the left foot while shooting at

* Montaigu, near Sichem (N.E. of Louvain), a celebrated shrine where a miraculous statue of the Madonna has been venerated ever since the beginning of the sixteenth century. Owing to its proximity to England, and to the English settlements in Belgium, "Our Lady of Sichem" was a favourite place of pilgrimage for English and Irish Catholics, and was much frequented by them. Cf. Foley, Records . . . vol. i. pp. 111, 113; iv. 547 (with a note on the history of Sichem), 548; v. 304, 602. Collectanea, vol. ii. pp. 760, 867, 1200—J. Morris, Troubles of our Cath. Forefathers, vol. i. pp. 308, 310. On the history of Montaigu, see A. Van Weddingen, Notre-Dame de Montaigu (6^e édit., Bruxelles, Schepens), where the chief authorities will be found.—[W.]

Necton (some four or five miles north of Oxburgh), and the wound was not fully healed for nearly two months.

The next series of memoranda are of a private, indeed of a sacred character. They show us the man in his relation to his Maker. It would serve no purpose to prolong our analysis of them, or to endeavour to formulate the edification which they will cause to appreciative minds. The facts are as follows. On the 5th of June 1686 he made a general confession of his whole life to "D^{ns} Syll^d," which I suppose means Mr. Sulliard. "D^{ns}" or "Mr." would be the ordinary title for a secular priest, but who he was, I cannot accurately determine. Foley (Records, iv. 606) gives accounts of two John Sulliards, who studied for the priesthood at the English College some thirty years before. Neither of them were ordained there, but they may very well have been ordained elsewhere.

Three and a half years after this commence a series of resolutions, renewed and amplified on nine successive New Year's Days from 1689 to 1698. From these we see that this strong, acute, and kindly layman, who, in the face of his Maker, speaks of himself simply as "Peccator," has set his mind in the first place on acquiring that virtue of virtues, humility, and his method was thorough.

He will fast every day up to dinner-time, and will be content with bread and water at supper, while thrice in the week—that is, on Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday—he will eat nothing after dinner, and abstain entirely from wine. Every Saturday he will recite the entire rosary, and the Office of the Blessed Virgin daily, except on Sundays and great feasts, when he will say the Office of the Church. As penance for his sins, he will say daily one of the seven penitential psalms, with the five accustomed prayers, and thrice strike his breast and say, Jesu Christe, misere mei, maximi peccatoris! In 1693 these resolutions are explicitly renewed (except that nothing is said of his fare at supper), with the condition "as far as health permits." He generally undertakes each year to work for a new virtue, or a new aspect of a virtue, such as chastity, charity, expectation of the Lord's coming, patience, peace of mind, &c.

In the diary which follows there is no allusion whatever to his own interior life, but, from what we have now heard about that subject, we can understand that the casual references to prayers, good sermons, and solemn ceremonies, and that significant "✠" (or "at my duty," or "devotions," for confession and communion *), were to him of the deepest significance, and recorded moments of the most reverential intercourse between the man and his Maker.

THOMAS MARWOOD'S DIARY

A quarto volume, bound in white vellum, leaves in six gatherings, each of twelve half folio pages, pot paper. The last gathering and a half sheet or two of the penultimate gathering, on which accounts had been kept, have been torn out. Entirely written in Marwood's hand, who has added on the inside, "Retraite à Momorance & à Notre Dame aulx St. Denis & Panior." This retraite is not alluded to elsewhere. On the modern label outside, Mr. Marwood's Diary, 1699-1703.

The diary seems to have been kept not for its own sake, but as memoranda for letter writing, and a record of business transacted. It begins abruptly, with the departure from Oxburgh of Marwood and his pupil, Henry Arundel Bedingfeld, without a word as to the object of their journey. This, however, soon becomes apparent. The three daughters of the Second Baronet, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Frances, have already gone abroad, and are staying with their aunts, Margaret and Anne Bedingfeld, nuns at the English Carmelite convent of Lierre, which their grand-uncle Edmund, afterwards Canon of Lierre, had helped to establish, and had watched over all his life. Pictures of all three hung, and still hang, on the walls of their Norfolk home, an indication of the strong bond of affection which existed between the various members of the family. The separation of the cloister brought no division or oblivion to the children of Dame Margaret, and her grandchildren would have known their aunts' faces before they actually met them.

There had been, moreover, at Lierre two cousins of Sir Henry's—Sister Mary of the Incarnation, professed in 1671, who died between 1709 and 1714; while her sister, Anne of the Ascension, professed with her, had died in 1692. These were daughters of Sir Henry's aunt Elizabeth. There were also two Eyres—Sisters Mary Martha of Jesus and Mary Catherine, who were respectively professed in 1689 and 1691, and who died in 1706 and 1729. They were daughters of the Baronet's sister Mary.

The occasion for the family reunion seems to have been the jubilee of the convent at Lierre, which had been formally opened on St. Francis's day, October 4, 1648 (Life of Mother Margaret Mostyn (Margaret of Jesus), by the V. Rev. Edmund Bedingfield, Canon of S. Gomarre's, ed. H. J. Coleridge, 1878, pp. 56-64).

This was the immediate object. Eventually a still more important subject, the children's education, was to be considered. This, as we shall see, needed much deliberation, and led to many changes of plan.

In the introductions to the different sections (I need hardly add that these divisions are made by the editor) an endeavour has been made to set before the reader a connected view of what the Bedingfeld family was doing, why it chose this or that line of action, and who the English persons and communities were with whom it dealt. On these points Marwood is studiously silent—indeed he purposely disguises what he has to say, as English Catholics of that day were forced to do. More detailed accounts of individuals will be found in footnotes, while at the end of the year 1700 an interesting Appendix will be found on the places visited by Marwood. This has been drawn up for me by the Rev. L. Willaert, S.J., whose unequalled knowledge of the intercourse between the English Catholics and the Low Countries is attested by his papers on the Négociations Politico-Religieuses entre L'Angleterre et les Pays-Bas Catholiques (1598-1625), which have been appearing since 1907 in the Revue d'Histoire Ecclésiastique of Louvain.

§ I. THE JUBILEE AT LIERRE

22 August to 18 October 1699

The journey to Antwerp was not marked by anything unusual. At Antwerp "the Style altered." They now followed the New Style, which was eleven days ahead of the Old Style, then observed in England. As usual with our travellers, they spent the day seeing the great churches and the ramparts. It is well to take note of the English persons whom they met; they are Mr. (probably the same as Captain Edward) Blackburne, Mr. Exton (? Euxton), Mr. Tobin, and Mr. Hunter. The latter was presumably Father Thomas Hunter, a Dominican, who will be frequently mentioned afterwards.

On the 8th of September they continue their journey to Lierre, where they lodged at Mr. Drury's boarding-house. Several canons and other churchmen lived here, as also several English. Mr. Southcote, Mr. Doughty, Mr. Bowles, Mrs. Hatcher, and "Mr. Jo. Martin of Burham" (Bornhem), dined there on the 17th. He was a young Dominican Father, a cousin of the Bedingfelds, and afterwards became, as we shall see, a man of some note.

Father Pordage returned to his post at Oxburgh on the 12th, and his first letter, received ten days later, brought the good news that Sir Henry was coming. He doubtless found it quiet at home, now that all the children were gone. So he must have applied for a licence to travel, in form such as the licences printed in previous volumes (C.R.S., ii. 305 ; iii. 1), and leaving old Dame Margaret to herself, he set out to join the family party at Lierre. He was no longer young or strong—in fact, he had only five years of life left before him—and we see in the diary that he was easily upset (Sept. 27, 28, Oct. 3, &c.). He came by Calais and Dunkirk instead of by Antwerp. He had perhaps to come up to town for his permit to travel, and so the Calais route was not much longer.

Upon his arrival the visits to Count Winterfeld, the governor of the town, were renewed, and the reception was doubtless not less hearty than that given on the 11th of September to Sir Henry's children.

The celebration at the convent was now about to commence. The occasion of these festivities is not stated, but we cannot be far wrong in considering them as the jubilee of the foundation. It is true that the date of their first foundation was St. Francis's day, October 4, 1648, and that the fiftieth year of the foundation would therefore have been 1697-1698. But there were reasons for postponing the celebrations a little, especially as the house they actually occupied had not been theirs from the very first. Anyway the fésta was kept "with great splendour" on St. Theresa's day, "with good MUSICK." The governor of the town with his family were afterwards treated to dinner at the convent, and, with the Archbishop's permission, the same honour was done to the Bedingfelds on the next Saturday, and their guests were, with the same favour, shown all over the house, and then there came the farewells. Sir Henry returned on Sunday to sup with his sisters. It was almost their last reunion here below. Next day the family took wagon and went on to Brussels.

§ 2.—BRUSSELS

19 October 1699 to 24 January 1700

The Bedingfeld family came to Brussels full of joy and hope. They could not but have been satisfied with the happy gathering at Lierre. They now found themselves yet once more among friends and relatives, and were about to commence under very favourable circumstances the educational courses which they had come so far to seek. But a sad calamity befel them after two months, and they left Brussels again amid grief and fear.

They arrived there in a large travelling wagon after a day's drive, and the three young ladies were set down in Place du Grand Sablon, at the convent of the Augustinian Nuns, called "the Lorrainesses," of whom more immediately. It may be that they were to live there as pensionaires; but from the way Marwood speaks, it seems not impossible that they were day scholars, and lived with their brother, under Marwood and Mrs. Masterson, at Captain de Bodes, "derrière l'Eglise de la Chapelle, à la Haute Rue, beyond the Steen Porte." All these names still figure on the map of Brussels, and fix the locality with great exactness. This seems to be the house which Marwood means by "home."

On the 16th of November the little Esquire began to go to school at the Jesuit College, and to take his share in their feasts, ecclesiastical and collegiate (November 19 and 26). The quarter's pension (200 florins) had been paid at once, and there were extra tutors engaged for their music, singing, and dancing. These accomplishments were probably acquired "at home" during the afternoon or evening. While the children were at their schools during the day, Marwood would have had plenty of time for his rounds among churches, convents, ramparts, and gardens, in all which he so much delighted (October 25, November 2 (All Souls), Christmas at St. Gudule, &c.). On the walls of these churches were many monuments of English Catholics, not a few of which have since perished, though the inscriptions may often be read in Sanderus, Flandria Illustrata.

Of the English convents the most frequented was "The Spellicans." They were English Dominican nuns, founded by Father (afterwards Cardinal) Howard, at Vilvorde, about the year 1661, and removed to Brussels some ten years later. Het Spellickins-huys, "the pin-house," had been a pin-factory, and stood in the road afterwards called Rue des Epingles, not far from the Porte de Louvain. The whole quarter has since been revolutionised and rebuilt. The Oratorians had turned it into a religious house, but were now anxious to leave, as they had built again in a less retired situation. So Father Howard succeeded, not without some difficulties however, in completing the transfer, and brought Mother Barbara Boyle (Prioress), Sisters Magdalen Sheldon, whose death is mentioned below (December 13), Catherine Mildmay, Frances Peck (died 1680), Ann Busby, and Catherine Howard, with two lay sisters, Jana Bergmans and Columba Pound. Three other ladies of the Howard family afterwards joined, in religion Mary Delphina, Dominica Rose, and Catherine. It will be remembered that the Baronet's first wife was also a Howard, and there were probably other kinships to unite the visitors to the convent. The community has wandered many times in the course of the last century, and now flourishes at Carisbrooke.

The following description of the convent from a Description de la Ville de Bruxelles, written about the year 1742, will give us the points which a spectator of that age thought most worthy of notice:—

"Les Religieuses Angloises de l'Ordre de St^e Dominique sont établies un peu au-dessus depuis quatre-vingt ans ou environ. Le terrain où leur Monastère est bâti, étant élevé de la Ville, leur a procuré des moyens faciles d'y faire de magnifiques jardins.

“ Il y en a trois en terrasse, qui se communiquent par des escaliers à trente degrés chacun, ce qui forme un bel amphithéâtre, d'où elles ont la vue de la Ville & de la Campagne à plus de trois milles de distance. Leur maison est grande & commode pour loger environ trente Religieuses qui composent cette illustre Communauté, qui fut transportée de Vilvorde dans cette Ville. Elles ont une petite Eglise très propre et bâtie à la moderne, où elles font le service divin avec beaucoup d'édification. Elles sont exemptes de la juridiction Episcopale & dirigées par des Religieux du même Ordre.” (British Museum, 156, a. 7, p. 171.)

For more about these sisters, see Husenbeth, Notices of English Colleges, &c., pp. 94-97; F. M. Steele, Convents of Great Britain, pp. 41-44; C. F. Raymond Palmer, Life of Philip Thomas Howard, O.P., Cardinal of Norfolk, with Sketch of the Dominican Order in England, 1867, pp. 119-122, 139, 145, 179, 232.

On the 17th of January 1700 Marwood “was at the Benedictines, with Mrs. Waldegrave, Mrs. Chilton, Mrs. Bowles.” This convent was founded in 1599, and was, I presume, the first separate community of English religious founded since the Reformation. I may again quote the Description de Bruxelles, for the chief points of interest in the monastery (p. 178):—

For further information about the English Benedictines founded at Brussels, but now settled at East Bergholt, see Dom Bennet Weldon, Chronological Notes, Appendix, pp. 30-35; Francesa Steele, Convents of Great Britain, 24-27; Husenbeth, pp. 60-62.

No part of Brussels presumably was more frequented by the Bedingfelds than the Grand Sablon, at the east end of which stood the convent of “The Lorrainesses,” which the three girls attended; while on the west stood the Hôtel Elsbury, to which the Baronet paid many visits, the home of the wealthy Thomas Bruce, Earl of Elgin and Ailesbury, who frequently appears in our narrative. He had endeavoured to steer a middle course during the Revolution; had accepted William as a reformer, but refused to sanction his advancement to the throne. Gradually, therefore, the suspicions of the Orangemen against him became more and more acute, and at last he was thrown into the Tower on a charge of treason. His wife, who was with child, died of anxiety at the shock, and after he had been set free on bail he obtained King William's leave to live abroad. He then settled at Brussels, built himself a fine hôtel, and eventually married again. We shall meet this second family later on (11th August 1700). His stay at Brussels was afterwards commemorated by the Ailesbury monument in the centre of the Sablon.

I may again quote the Description de la Ville de Bruxelles, p. 100 :—

“ La place du Sablon, nommée le Marché au foin . . . ou les Troupes de la garnison s'assemblent tous les jours pour la Parade en relevant la garde. C'est un grand carré long, dont l'Hotel d'Elisbury occupé par le Mylord Anglois de ce nom remplit une des petites faces. Le Monastère des Religieuses nommées Lorraines est situé dans l'autre. Elles vivent selon la Règle de S^t Augustin ; les ravages de la Guerre, leur ayant fait désertier de Lorraine, elles se retirèrent à Bruxelles, où on leur a donné le nom du Pays, d'ou elles sont sorties. Les deux autres faces ornées de belles Maisons la plupart modernes & couvertes d'ardoise en mansarde et en pavillon, forment un beau coup d'œil. Ou y voit vers le milieu une Fontaine qui fournit la meilleure eau de la Ville. C'est un des plus agréables endroits, où on respire un bon air à cause de la hauteur du terrain, où il est situé. Ses maisons sont habitées par plusieurs personnes de condition.”

This description, written about 1742, does not contain any allusion to the Ailesbury monument which was erected soon after and is still standing. I may quote an account of this from the “Description” of 1782 :—

“ La place du Grand Sablon est la place d'armes de Bruxelles ; au milieu se trouve une belle fontaine que le Lord Bruce, Comte d'Ailsbury, qui avoit habité quarante ans Bruxelles, avoit par son testament chargé son heritier de faire construire. Cette fontaine est ornée d'un groupe de marbre blanc de Gène qui représente Minerve assise tenant les portraits en médaillon de leurs Majestés Impériales & Royales ; à sa droite est la Renommée, & à sa gauche l'Escaut ; un génie tient l'égide & la lance de la déesse, ce groupe est posé sur un pied-d'estal élevé de 13 pieds, sur les deux faces de ce pied-d'estal sont sculptées les armoiries du Lord d'Ailsbury, avec cette inscription au-dessous, Fuimus : ces armoiries sont appuyées par deux têtes de Mascaron, qui vomissent de l'eau : aux deux côtés du pied-d'estal on lit les deux inscriptions suivantes, composées par M. Roderique de Cologne, Conseiller intime du Prince Charles de Lorraine.

“ Ce monument a été érigé en 1751, & exécuté par Jacques Bergé, sculpteur de Bruxelles, d'après les dessins du Comte de Calembert. En face de ce monument, & à l'une des extrémités de la place, est l'Hotel du Général Chanclos, qu'avoit habité jusqu'à sa mort le Lord Ailsbury : à l'autre extrémité est le monastère des Lorraines.” (Pp. 16, 17.)

Foreign politics do not seem to have excited much enthusiasm in Marwood ; they do not often do so in Englishmen. But Europe was, in fact, rapidly nearing a situation which would inevitably result in war, and war in which England would have to take part. Charles II., King of Spain, was sinking to his grave, and when he was gone what would come of the motley group of states which Charles V. had attached to that throne? Flanders and the Milanese, the two Sicilies, and the Indies were involved, and there were various claimants, whose rights could only be balanced with difficulty. But amongst these candidates loomed large and ominous the descendants of the King of France. The balance of power in Europe would be utterly upset if France received so enormous an accession of power as this heritage must necessarily bring with it. So there were various "Partition Treaties" arranged upon beforehand, in order to maintain that balance. The first of these would have placed on the throne of Spain the son of that Maximilian Emanuel, Elector of Bavaria, who was then Governor of the Low Countries (November 6, &c.). But the poor boy had died of small-pox in the preceding February. A second child was born at this time (November 17 and 30), but by another wife, so now all was in uncertainty, though the chances of Maximilian's accession to power had suffered exceedingly.

New efforts to make some arrangement were made, and on the 31st of October we hear that "the Repartition" (or second Partition Treaty of this very year) was "burnt by the hangman," doubtless because it did not suit the aspirations of the Elector, who was French in sympathies, and was eventually driven for the time out of the country by Marlborough, after the battles of Hochstecht, Blenheim, Ramillies, &c.

Bearing these above circumstances in mind, we see what good reason there was for keeping the birthday of King Charles (6th November) with rejoicings. The "Mass at y^e Jesuites for y^e Soules of y^e Soldiers" (October 31) was, I presume, a requiem for the many gallant fellows who had fallen in the great wars, which had been so lately ended by the Peace of Ryswick, 10th September 1697. This peace had restored Mons to the Low Countries, and the reference to its garrison on December 16 will be somehow connected with this.

For the last few years, the popular party of the "nations" (guilds) had been agitating for new privileges; in September 1699, riots broke out in several parts of the town; the government first tried to calm the people by granting new liberties; but the leaders persisted in their attitude of disorder. At last, on December 16th, Maximilian introduced in the town several regiments of paid soldiers, and the chief agitators were thrown into prison. Cf. Henne and Wauters, Hist. de Bruxelles, vol. ii. p. 160. The Pasquil, mentioned 1st November, would have turned on the strained situation, and it must, of course, have been against the Government. On the soldiers, see 21st December.

The domestic life of the family at Brussels was at first only troubled by the indispositions of Sir Henry (October 23, 24, 28, and December 10), and these were not very serious. He had moved to new, perhaps to more comfortable, quarters—Aux trois Fontaines, Mons. Jacques. He often dined with Lord Ailesbury (sometimes taking his children with him), also with Mr. Fonseca and Mr. Thomond, or Thaumond, and went "to the play" (10th December) or "to the Assemblée" (20th December).

The happy life was now interrupted by a sad bereavement. In these days, before vaccination was discovered, the ravages of small-pox among children were very terrible. We have already seen that it had not spared, in that very year, the young prince, on whose life the peace of Europe depended; and shall hear later on of other calamities of the same kind (see 19th August 1700). The Bedingfelds were now saddened by the loss of their eldest girl, who still wanted two months for the completion of her fifteenth year. Deeply pathetic is the account told day by day in Marwood's diary, from the 12th of December, when she fell ill, to Christmas Eve, when "she died like an Angel, R.I.P., about $\frac{1}{4}$ past 8 in the morning," and this though two days before they had thought her on the fair road to recovery.

She was "decently enterred in y^e Chappell Vault, belonging to y^e Religieuses; but privately, because her decease was not to be knowne." Were it not for a few clauses like this in various places of the diary, we should hardly have perceived how heavily the penal laws pressed upon the Catholics. Marwood seems to have stood by the sick child like a parent. It was to him that the doctor gave the sad warning that the end was at hand. He sends for the priest, and sees her buried. Doubtless Sir Henry was there too, but Marwood, we feel, is the directing spirit.

As soon as Elizabeth's sickness declared itself, Margaret and Frances were taken off to Lierre under the charge of Mr. Drury, with whom they had lodged previously. But the Esquire, it seems, remained on in the sick house. Two days after Elizabeth's death Nurse Masterson was taken ill, but was soon better again. Next day the boy was "ill after dinner," and it gradually became evident that he, too, was going through a somewhat severe bout of fever. However, the dread pox-marks did not declare themselves, and owing to the careful nursing of Marwood and Mrs. Masterson, he was well enough to be moved to Lierre in a coach on January the 23rd.

§ 3.—LIERRE.

24 January to 25 May, 1700.

Marwood's object being mainly to chronicle daily events, we have to judge for ourselves what the reasons for them may have been. It is, of course, obvious that the party moved from Brussels to Lierre for change of air after the severe attack of fever which had ravaged their "home" at

* This Mistress Waldegrave seems to be Arabella, daughter of Henry, first Lord Waldegrave, and of Henrietta, the natural child of James II. by Arabella Churchill, sister to the Duke of Marlborough. Mistress Waldegrave would thus have been great grandchild of Anne Paston (who married Sir Henry Waldegrave, the second baronet), sister of Margaret Paston, Lady Bedingfeld, who was still alive. As Mistress Waldegrave is mentioned first among the nuns, it is likely that the visit was made to her as to a relative.

From the list of nuns professed at Brussels, printed in the Appendix to Weldon's Chronological Notes (Ed. 1881) p. 34, it seems that Mistress Waldegrave was called in religion Theodosia Joanna, professed in 1666, and that she was Abbess from 1713 to her death in 1719. From the same source we learn that Elizabeth Chilton was professed in 1691, and Gertrude Henrietta Chilton in 1694, but there is no mention of any Bowles.

Brussels. For a week after his arrival the boy invalid was convalescent, but after that he seems to have got quite strong again, except for an occasional cold in his eye. On the other hand, Marwood sprained his leg (Feb. 3), and, worse still, the Reverend Mother was sick unto death. The best doctors were sent for, and Marwood, ever interested in medical details, tells us approvingly many particulars about her treatment, which will, I daresay, sound barbaric and cruel to moderns. She recovered a little, and Sir Henry came down for the last time to see his sisters, and left for England on the 13th of February, the terms of his permit to travel probably forcing him to return.

At last, on the 19th of March, "being St. Joseph's day, after a most painful sickness of 50 days, the Rev^d Mother dyed." Next day Marwood and the Esquire attended her funeral.

She was Elizabeth Mostyn, in religion Mother Ursula of All Saints, sister of Sir Edward Mostyn of Talacre, as well as of the celebrated Mother Margaret. Elizabeth was born 14 February 1627, and many details about her will be found in the Life of Mother Margaret Mostyn (by Edmund Bedingfeld), pp. 11, 18*n.*, 23, &c. She had been Prioress ever since the death of her sister twenty-one years before.

On the 19th of next month Mistress Southwell was chosen Prioress, Mistress Somerset Sub-Prioress, and Mistress Fettiplace "Discreet."

Mrs. Southwell must be an alias, for from elsewhere we see that the succeeding Prioress was no other than the Baronet's sister Margaret, in religion Margaret of Jesus, who was professed in 1673, and died in 1714. Sister Mary Francis of St. Anne (Somerset) had been professed in 1680, and died in 1745. Mrs. Fettiplace was a widow, her maiden name was Mostyn, and she was one of three nuns at Lierre, nieces of the Reverend Mother just dead. In religion her name was Margaret Theresa of the Immaculate Conception, professed in 1694. She died in 1743, and had been twenty-one years Prioress.

They will frequently appear hereafter as correspondents, especially in money matters. The explanation of this probably is that Sir Henry was accustomed to send to that convent the dowers of his sisters, and, having made sure that this channel was safe, went on sending to Marwood by the same means. It will be seen that "writings" were executed (5th March) and "bills" received (3rd April), and a visit was made to Brussels and Antwerp (March 13 to 16), to Mr. Hunter, Sir Dan. Arthur, and others. These were all presumably on business, and probably connected with the death of the Reverend Mother Mostyn.

On the 19th of April Marwood goes to "Burham," and there meets Captain Binn and Mr. Dryden. Read without comment, this entry may seem unimportant, but in reality it was a family matter, and one of some importance for the Esquire. "Burham" is really Bornhem, the chief house of the English Dominicans. Captain Binn, i.e. Captain Bing, has long since resigned his command, and is an octogenarian friar, who has just resigned the post of Provincial. Mr. Dryden is the youngest son of the great Poet Laureate (who was then on his deathbed, and died on the 1st of May, O.S.) by his wife Lady Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of the Earl of Berkshire, and sister to Sir Henry's (the first Baronet) first wife Anne, and by consequence a cousin of the Esquire. Martin was now Sub-Prior, and it was probably at his invitation that Marwood called.

Our author's description of the house is that it was "neat," a favourite adjective of his, and he adds that it was "well situate for summer, but low for winter." Read in the light of future events, we see that this is written in view of the Esquire's coming to live there, for the Friars were about to develop their school there, which, after the year 1703 (Palmer, Life of Cardinal Howard, p. 221), grew and flourished exceedingly, but which at this time seems to have consisted only of a "Mr. Mannel," perhaps one of the Meynels of Kelvedon.

Marlow's guarded report perhaps did not fully satisfy Sir Henry, but preparations for removal began. On the 1st of May they were "at the governor's to take leave," and on the 3rd the family party broke up. Father Pordage seems to have returned to guide the young ladies, with Mrs. Masterson, to Dunkirk. Marwood and the Esquire accompanied them as far as Antwerp.

Marwood again passes over the reasons for the choice of Dunkirk as a place of education for the girls, and again the genealogical tree of the family supplies the omission. The Benedictine monastery at Dunkirk was a foundation from Ghent, commenced in 1662 under the Lady Abbess Mary Caryll, who died in 1712 (Annals of the English Benedictines of Ghent, and now at Oulton, 1894). Her brother Richard had married Frances Bedingfeld, Sir Henry's sister. So a family tie connected the girls with the convent, while Father Pordage also had two sisters nuns there.

If, therefore, Sir Henry had been asked by some government inquirer whether his children went to Papist schools abroad, he could truly answer that they were only travelling on the Continent, and had been paying visits to cousins, aunts, and other relations.

The reason for this caution was all the greater at this time, as Parliament had just passed the cruel and malignant laws of the eleventh and twelfth years of King William, "for the further preventing the growth of Popery," which were intended to ruin every Catholic who heard mass, or educated his child as a Catholic. To say nothing of inability to inherit or purchase land, after the 10th of April 1700: "WHOEVER shall convict a Person of sending his child &c. beyond Sea to be educated in popery—TO RECEIVE as a reward the whole Penalty of 100*l.* inflicted by 3 James I." &c., &c. An enormous premium therefore was now set upon the vile trade of the informer, and it behoved every Catholic parent to act with the utmost possible circumspection. It cannot surprise us hearing frequent changes of plans and of precautions, which were perhaps all the better for being a trifle comic.

Thus we read on the 14th of May: "I rec^d a letter from S^r H. in order for Fr.," that is, orders to take the boy to France with a view to his going to school there, as was eventually done. So letters were "writ to Mr. Fonseca to take places" in the coach, and all was ready for departure when a second letter came to stop them, sent by the care of the Reverend Mother Southwell. There seems to have been a consultation as to what should be done next, and it was resolved that Marwood and his charge should visit "Mr." or "Mrs." Burham (i.e. the Dominican convent at Bornhem). This system of turning place names into personal names in order to disguise them was frequent among English Catholics. It sounds funny here, but Marwood had good reasons for keeping his hand in for the "epistolary style" of the period.

After a preliminary visit to "Mr." Burham by Marwood, and the usual long farewells, he and his little charge set off to "Mrs." Bornhem by boat on a wet day. A friend, Mr. Lutre, sent down his "Caless" to drive them next up to the house, and there they were kindly received by "Captain" Bing and "Mr." or "Mons." or "Father" Mine," who was to be the Esquire's preceptor.

§ 4.—BORNHEM

27 May to 26 October 1700

The stay at Bornhem was comparatively uneventful. The most important news here recorded is the death of the King of Spain (14th

* Calesh, now generally Calash; a light two-wheeled cart with a hood.

November), soon to be followed by the War of the Spanish Succession. Hardly less eventful for England was another death, that of the boy Duke of Gloucester (19th August), so momentous for the fortunes of Prince Charlie.

Frequent and interesting are the notices of the various Dominican Fathers, of whose virtues and labours we as yet know so little. Marwood, regular in his practice of disguising proper names, hardly lets us know who are Friars, who laymen, but with attention we recognise besides FF. Bing and Dryden, already mentioned, FF. Barker, Burges, Donain (? also Doning), Grimes, Lovett, Martin, Moullins, Myne (Meen or Mine), Pennington, Peter, Williams, Worthington, and Brothers Dye and Vincent. A good many details concerning them may be found in Palmer, Obituary Notices of the Friars Preachers in England. There are also other points of interest in regard to the order, e.g. their great traveller, Father Felle (9th June), and many movements of Fathers to the English mission and to the various cloisters.

Marwood's little charge was now growing rapidly. Though only eleven years old, he was 4 feet 5 inches on June the 13th; on 1st September he was "4 feet $\frac{5}{8}$ "; and on 8th November 4 feet 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches. I am not clear as to Marwood's standards, and gather that he was using a measure rather shorter than ours. But however this may be, the boy was tall, and all things considered, his health was good. He made his first communion on the 4th of August, St. Dominic's Day. A week earlier his old grandmother had sent him what would be considered, in those thrifty days, the very handsome tip of one guinea.

Bornhem being comparatively near Antwerp and Brussels, a good many visitors passed through, as Lord Ailesbury and his family, and Mr. Thomas Eyre of Hassop, and the painter Hagenbroche. Marwood, moreover, was frequently paying calls at Lierre and other places, of which full descriptions are often given (18th June, 9th July). He was also struck by the funeral of Count Colonna (25th June, 13th July), and the subsequent reception of the founder's next heir (31st August, 3rd September). He was also amused by a variety of quaint objects, a decoy (7th June), a fortress (1st July), a unicorn's (i.e. narwhal's) horn, and rich armour (8th July), bad malt (15th July), weights and measures (7th August), &c., &c., &c.

At last orders came from Sir Henry (30th October) that they should set out on their journey to France, and after all preparations for travelling were finished, and farewells said, they left Bornhem on the 11th of November.

Thursd. 27 May. Mons. Mine went to Brussels, so we went about ye house, & saw ye Village.

Frid. 28. All Day within. Father Mine,* the Preceptor, at Brussels. This day 3 Cittizens were condemned to dye. I writ to S^r H., & ye R. [? Reverend Mother] at Lyre, & Nurse, & M^r Drury.

† Henry Stafford Howard was son of the martyred William Viscount Stafford, but took part against King James, and was created Earl of Stafford in October 1688. See also J. Kirk, Biographies of English Catholics, p. 130.

‡ John Frans Coloma, born at Brussels on August 22, 1630, married Maria Theresia d'Ognies (1654); he was created a count of Bornhem on May 2, 1658. His wife died at Malines on December 7, 1712 (Van Doninck, p. 377).

Sund. 31. I sent back the Gardinier: a good day till towards Even.

November: Mond. 1. All S^{ts}. I walkt afoot to Antwerp; called in & saw the Abbey of S^t Bernards, † w^{ch} had been burnt some few years past & not yet finisht & is a Rich Abbey. And the Abbot is properly the Bishop of Antwerp who has his Revenues from thence: but they wise[ly] came to a Composition wth the Bishop & pay him a Certaine rent. And have an Abbot of their house & still continue rich. Wiser in this than the Monks of Afflighem, ‡ who had the Arch Bishop of Malines assigned them for Abbot, who takes all their great Wealth, And assignes them a poor competence. I discourst M^r Kenada a^{bt} Heany.

Tuesd. 2. All Souls. I went to Lyre. And arriv^d there by din^r D^r Fran. Eyre there a most improved gent.

Wed. 3. I was mostly with M^{rs} Southwell.

Sund. 7. I took boat & got home by 3 Very Wet found there Cap^t Barri, Nephew to ye Pr., who was newly married at Antwerpe to a fortune. I found 2 Letters fro S^r H. for Dunk[irque].

Mond. 8. I sent a Messenger to Lyre wth them this day. I measured the Esq. & found him 4 feet 8 inches & $\frac{1}{4}$: so he has growne a $\frac{1}{4}$ Inch since Sept. 1 last.

Tuesd. 9. My Messenger came back fro Lyre & brought me Word M^{rs} Southwell would send next day to me.

Wed. 10. We gave ye Chevalier Valegaz our Visit of Congé. And that night took leave of F. B. [? Father Bing] who was sick.

§ 5.—JOURNEY TO FRANCE

November 14 to December 28, 1700

Leaving Bornhem, Marwood and his charge passed through Dendermond and Ghent, where for a wonder they made no stay, and reached Bruges. There was one member of their family (or even two) in the convent of the Dames Anglaises, but they belonged to the Redlingfield branch. Foley gives the names both of Mary and of Agnes (Records, v. 568), and one of these had probably taken the name Austin, after their founder. Marwood, while systematically avoiding the name of the convent, mentions eight nuns, besides Mistress Austin Bedingfeld, whose families will probably have been allied to, or acquainted with the Bedingfelds.

Next day they passed on to Nieupoort, where there was a convent of

* See above, No. iv. 5. Sir Richard Beling was godfather to Frances, Lady Belings, godmother to Elizabeth Bedingfeld.

† The abbey had been incorporated to the bishopric of Antwerp by Pius IV. in 1559; the "Composition" alluded to happened in 1636. Cf. Leioy, Notitia marchionatus sacri romani imperii, pp. 55-67.

‡ Afflighem is a famous Benedictine Abbey, SE. of the town Alost, SE. of Ghent.

English Carthusians. Marwood, of course, only mentions the names of Mr. Hunter and six other fathers. Father Hunter was a regular correspondent, but it is hard to distinguish him in the diary from Father Thomas Hunter the Dominican.

Thence to "the Lady Caryl's" at Dunkirk, and again nothing to tell us that this was a Benedictine monastery, under a Lady Abbess. We have already seen that she was closely connected with the Bedingfeld family, and that it was on this account presumably that Frances and Margaret had been sent to her for their education. But Sir Henry now wanted the elder girl home, so on the 21st of November preparations for the start were begun. On the Monday following they went off in great state, the Governor and Intendant of Police lending them their great "Coaches to carry them and their company to Marlo's Vessel." But no sooner had they got under weigh than the wind veered round and blew so violently that amid the many sandbanks they were in no small danger, and had to lie straining and tossing at anchor all that night. Miss Margaret and the rest came ashore next day, resolved to make their next attempt viâ Calais, which they eventually did on the 26th. Mrs. Masterson went back with her.*

Meantime the good Lady Abbess was very ill, and an English doctor is sent for (November 30), who turns out to be Irish, so early had that nation won their way to the front of the medical profession. Her ladyship, however, took a turn for the better, and was destined to live yet many years.

Marwood remained six weeks at Dunkirk, and comments on several sights. The Abbess's kitchen seems to have pleased him most (November 19). He also dwells on the big ships, on the pile-driving round the harbour (December 2), the fortifications, ice-carrying, &c. &c.

On the 20th orders came to go to Paris, and on the 28th they had reached Calais, and passed for good on to French soil. We must regret that our travellers have left Flanders behind them, where they met English Catholics at every turn. Henceforward there will not be quite so many of them.

On the other hand, it will soon become clear that the journey to France, from an educational point of view, was a great success. We may suppose that Sir Henry did not care to send his son to St. Omers or any of the greater schools in Flanders, lest he should be detected by the informers of the English Government. So the boy is nominally only staying with cousins and relatives, though really his education is in full swing. In central France, however, there will be less chance of attracting hostile notice, and there he may go to a great public school, though always under a feigned name. Indeed, it seems that he had been called Mr. Nelson for some time back (October 26).

Thurs. 11 Nov. St' Martin's Day a fine Frosty Morn. We took a Wagon for Dendermond, at nere 9, and arrived there at nere One. Lodged at ye half Moon, Mon^r Gabriels. After noon went round the Rempars w^{ch} are not very Strong, but double Pallisado'd. There the Dender runs into ye Scheld whence ye Towne is named. The Strength of the Towne is that they can drown for nere a Legue round. There was a Castle in it, but t'is demolisht. T'is a poor Towne, but one large Church, besides Cloysters of w^h the Carmes is a perfect Isle.

Frid. 12. After Pray^{ts} at ye Augustines we took a Chaise for Ghant 5 hours distant, went away at 11 arrived a^{bt} 5, And took our Lodging at ye Picardy nere the Grand Bouchery.

* I fancy that Marwood suspected Captain Marlo of sharp practice. There are several rather pointed notes about "Marlo pretending to go to sea, but did not." Perhaps he refused to refund the fare after Miss Margaret had taken a different route.

Sat. 13 Nov. After prayers at ye Church. We took ye Boat for Bruges (at 8 in ye Morne) w^{ch} is 8 houres from Ghant, where we Arrived a^{bt} 4 afternoon. A pleasant day. The Towne large, but the Houses nor Streets nothing so gracefull as Antwerp & Ghant. We took our Lodging at ye Comen bloom, Mons. de Groone.

Sond. 14. We took Coach to M^{rs} Austin Bed[ingfeld] & there found M^{rs} Powdrell, M^{rs} Tasb[urgh], M^{rs} Jernegans, M^{rs} Stanlys M^{rs} Rookw[ood], Hadleston M^{rs} Hellard M^{rs} Wright, P. [? Prioress] And dined there and then went to ye little Carmes, who have a new and neat Chappel, & so has ye Calceat Carmes. Then went a Tour about ye Towne. At night a French officer told me the K. of Sp. was dead.

Mond. 15. We took Coach about 7 & went to ye Newport boat, w^{ch} in 7 houres goes to Newport (the boat 12^d) & arrived ab^t 3, & was presently carried to ye Gouvern^r, whom having satisfied (his name Don Diego d'Yagur) we Lodged at ye Couroune Imperiall & then went to M^r Hunter, who received us kindly wth M^r Tyrrell & Th^{os} Baker, M^r Yates, M^r Hills, M^r Ridle, M^r Nelson.

Tuesd. 16. We Wayted on ye Gouvern^r afternoon, wth M^r Hunter who Invited us next day to Dinner but we excused our Selves, as designing to leave the Towne next morn, w^{ch} we intended. There we had the first certaine Acc^t of ye K. of Spaine's death, tho' the Goverⁿ would not own it freely.

Wed. 17. We went ab^t the Wals, saw the Strength of ye Towne, w^{ch} is most in the Sluces drowning the Countrey, even to ye Market of Furnes. Saw all ye Appartm^{ts} of ye Carthusians, who had ye day before brought us to their house. Visited Mons^r le Franca, who was an officer of ye Garrison, & extreme Civil to ye Ladys, when there. Saw the Fish Market w^{ch} is a very pleasant, & easy selling of fish à l'encan & for ye Price, whoever buys it, the Fishmongers of ye Towne are there, & pay the Money, & for that are allow'd ye 12th penny of the Price Thursd. 18. At 8 in the morn we took a Wagon to Our selves to Dunkerque, arrived there ab^t 3 wthout Stop; went all the Way on the Sands. And came to the Lady Caryll, where I found M^{rs} Caryll,* M^{rs} Pordage,† M^{rs} Copley,‡ S^r Edward Southcote,§ M^r Smith, M^r Sheldon, M^r Parkhurst &c.

* According to Max de Trenqualéon, West Grinstead et les Caryll, 1893, ii. 105, not less than fourteen ladies, sisters or nieces of the Abbess Lady Mary Caryll. entered various English convents about this time. But which of them is here intended is difficult to determine. Later on we hear of Lady Caryll's "niece" (December 26). It was possibly Mary (in religion Mary Magdalen), the daughter of Richard Caryll and Frances Bedingfeld; but as she was not professed till 1706, I suppose that she had not yet entered the order. The first place assigned to her here suggests that she was the nearest connection of the Bedingfeld family at the convent. See also Weldon, Chronological Notes, Ap., p. 45.

† Anne Pordage had been professed at Ghent in 1650, and Xaveria in 1661. Both these are styled of Rodmersham, and came to Dunkirk (Annals of the Benedictines of Ghent, p. 198). A Frances Pordage had been professed there in 1671 (Weldon, Ap., pp. 37, 45).

‡ Two Mistress Copleys appear in the list of professed religious of Dunkirk, Dames Mary and Mary Alexia. professed in 1679 and 1685 (Weldon, Ap., p. 45).

§ Sir Edward Southcote's Memoirs of the Southcote family are printed: J. Morris, Troubles, i. 364-410. He died in 1751, at the great age of 93.

Frid. 19 Nov. We were introduced to ye Lady Caryll,* who was ill, Saw all the house w^{ch} was Magnifique & Usefull, The Vaults Noble; The Kitchen the Neatest Contrived I ever Saw; it would roast 3 Spits wth a little Charcole & baek Small things by 2 little Ovens above as in a Box by the same Fire &c.

Sat. 20. We spent in Visiting the Ladys. I writ to Madam Southwell, M^r Hunter S^r Henry.

Sond. 21. Nurse & M^{rs} Margaret prepared for going to Calais & accordingly I writ to M^r Eyre M^r Jowrno M^r Charles Bed. S^r Henry. My Pocket Pickt at Church.

Mond. 22. Nurse & M^{rs} Margaret had the Govern^{rs} & the Intendants Coaches to carry them & their company to Marlo's Vessel. ab^t 11 a clock they entered the Ship & weighed Anchor in half an hour for England; wth them went M^r Sheldon, M^r Parkhurst, M^r Brunetti & his Lady &c It was very rayny all day after, but the Wind fair in the South, but swerved North West (just in their Teeth) before they got clear of the Sands; so that they were forc'd to Anchor all Night, not having Water to Come into the Peer. And they had much Fear of their Cable holding.

Tues. 23. Ab^t 3 while they lay at Anchor the Wind riss very high & Stormy, So that as soon as t'was day not being able to Weigh their Anchor they slipt their Cable & left their Anchor, And got into the Peer. And ab^t 10 a Clock, all came a Shore Safe, but tyred extreamly. Nurse came to our Lodging Mon^{sr} de Guys.

Wed. 24. M^{rs} Marg^t pretty Well and all resolved to go to Calais, but we could not hire a Wagon to themselves. Very Wet weather for divers days.

Thurs. 25. Was a fine Frosty Morn & we Walkt & Saw the out works of ye 'Towne fro' ye Newport Gate to ye Porte Royall. There is but one other Gate the — to ye Towne to Land Ward, but divers to ye Key. In the Afternoon Mon^{sr} Cosse, M^r Hebbe ye Esq^r & I walkt on ye Rampars by Leave. Went into ye Cittadel. Saw the Basine capable of 50 Men of War of 60 to 70 Guns. Saw ye New Arsenall (& the old One), well Stockt wth all Small Armes. Went on ye High Part of ye Citadell, where 3 Brass Guns were mounted (one of 22 foot Long brought from Lorraine) that would Shoot 2 Leagues to Sea. They were building a New Arsenall for Ships Store. I saw M^r Tho^s Tasburgh.

Frid. 26. M^r Tasburgh accompanied us to ye Wagon w^{ch} M^{rs} Margaret took betw. 7 & 8 ith Morn, wth M^r Sheldon, & M^r Barkas. That day I writ to S^r Henry by M^{rs} Barret, Marlo pretending to go to Sea but did not. Lady Caryll very ill.

Sat. 27. The Wind tollerable, yet Marlo Stirred not. At Night a Great Storme.

Sund. 28. My Birthday. I went to M^r Churchill & after to my Devotions at ye P. Jes. That Night was a Great Storme. And Next day some talk of Ships castaway: by some floating Barrels &c.

* There appears to be a life of her at St. Scholastica's, Teignmouth, and there are a good many letters from her among the Caryll papers in the British Museum (Additional MSS. 28,226, 28,228). These materials have been used by Max de Trenqualéon in his chapter on the Abbess (West Grinstead et les Caryll, 1893, ii. pp. 99-125).

Mond. 29 Nov. S^t Andrew's Eve. Fast. I went wth M^r Smith & M^r Powel to ye End of ye Key to ye Fort Vert w^{ch} ye Waves shook sufficiently & dashe over it, there may be ab^t 24 Cannons, & 2 Mortars Stood Mounted on the other side, West stood the Fort d'Esperance all on Piles.

Tuesd. 30. S^t Andrews. The Esq. went to M^r Creighton to his Devotions. Lady Caryl Visited by D^r Connor from Bethune, but she was now quit of Feavour.

December: Wed. 1. We were at S^t Aloy's the Great Church, it being his Feast & a holly day in Dunkirque. Afternoon I Visited M^r Crosby who was Sick of ye Gout.

Thurs. 2. The Esq. & I went all along the Peer to the Fort Vert & it was at Low Water. And the Ouse Stunk most horribly. Then we saw the manner of their driving down Piles to mend the Haven.

NOTE

ON THE LOCALITIES IN BELGIUM MENTIONED IN MARWOOD'S DIARY

BY L. WILLAERT, S. J.

At the time of Marwood's journey, Belgium was composed of a number of states—the duchy of Brabant, the county of Flanders, &c.—without any very close union between themselves. These states, however, with the exception of the prince-bishopric of Liège, were all “personally” united under the sway of the King of Spain, Charles II., and governed in his name by Maximilian Emmanuel, Elector of Bavaria. They had been wasted for the last fifty years by the armies of Louis XIV. and of his allied foes; even the peace of Rÿswyk (1697), which ended the war “of the Augsbourg coalition,” could only be considered as a truce, and the disputed succession of Spain was soon to draw the armies of Marlborough on the battlefields of the Netherlands.

Another connection between England and Belgium was due to the numerous English Catholics who had taken refuge in Catholic "Flanders." Chief among them were the inhabitants of the many religious houses founded by British refugees at the end of the sixteenth and the beginning of the seventeenth century. Several of these houses are mentioned in Marwood's diary. I propose to show the reader how to trace the journey of the Bedingfelds on a map of the present day, and to supply some information on the English religious houses which they visited.

ANTWERP

After crossing the Channel from Harwich (August 24, 1699) our travellers passed "the light at ye Gorée" (Goeree, then an island off the Dutch coast, between the islands Schouwen and Voorn, but now amalgamated with the island Over-Flakkee), and the next day "entered the Bril" (Briel, then a fortified harbour on the N. coast of the island Voorn), which they left soon after, and arrived at Rotterdam "in ye skeut boat" (the Flemish word schuit means a flat-bottomed boat for inland navigation).

In those days the arm of the Scheldt that ran N. of Antwerp and met the Meuse was still broad enough to allow shipping; so Marwood and his charge travelled by water to Dort (Dordrecht), and, having been obliged to stop at "Meredike" (Maerdyck, on the E. bank), "took a waggon" for Antwerp (duchy of Brabant).

At Antwerp they visited several places of interest (September 7): first, "St. Mary's Church," i.e. Notre-Dame, the famous cathedral, well known to every traveller on the Continent; the Jesuit Church, now St. Charles Borromeo, situated between Notre-Dame and the Museum, near the present S. Ignatius Commercial Institute (Courte rue Neuve)—the church was built on the plans of P. P. Rubens, who painted for it no less than thirty-nine pictures; unhappily, part of the building was burnt down in 1718, and the church lost most of its treasures.*

The Carmelite Nuns had been founded in 1619 by Lady Mary Lovel with the assistance of Mother Anne (Worsley) of the Ascension, who was chosen first prioress, and continued in office till her death in December 1644. In 1794 the nuns were compelled to leave; they found refuge in their native country, and eventually settled at Lanherne, near St. Columb's, in Cornwall.† Their Antwerp house was situated in the street then called Hopland (now rue des Houblonniers, near Rubens' house, between the Place de Meir and the Avenue des Arts); it was sold in 1798, and the old Carmelite Chapel is now used as a storehouse; but the chief part of the convent belongs to the Redemptorist Fathers, who have built a new chapel in the Gothic style.‡ The convent stood at a short distance of "ye rempars," Antwerp being an important fortified town; they have since been pulled down, and are now the "avenues" (du Commerce, des Arts, de l'Industrie).

St. Michael Church (May 4, 1700). This old abbey, founded by the Norbertines or Præmonstratentians in 1124, was one of the chief abbeys of the Netherlands. It became "bien national" after the French invasion in 1796, and was totally destroyed by the Dutch in 1830. The name of the "Quai Saint-Michel," near the "Station du Pays de Waes," is the only trace left by the once prosperous abbey.* At the time of Marwood it was situated close to the citadel, built by the Duke of Alva in 1572, which formed the southern limit of the town, but has since been demolished. In fact, St. Michael was once termed "Pégglise de la citadelle." Marwood calls it the "Castel St. Michael's"; this name (S. Michiel's bolwerk), however, was only given to a little bastion near the church.† The tombstone of Don Francisco Marcos de Velasco has been transferred to St. James Church, where it is still to be seen.‡ Some of the artistic treasures to which Marwood makes allusion are described by Sanderus, Chorographia . . ., vol. i. p. 121. Among them was the Adoration of the Magi, by P. P. Rubens, which is at the Antwerp Museum, No. 298. Woodcuts of the pictures in the refectory, by "Quilinus" (John A. Erasmus Quelin), will be found in P. Génard, Anvers . . ., vol. i., pp. 196 seq.

Leaving Antwerp our travellers arrived at Lyre (now Licr, Lierre), a small town some three hours to the SE. of Antwerp. Here also there was an English Carmelite convent, which had many connections with the family (see above, pp. 47, 57).

Two days after their arrival Marwood paid a visit to the governor of the town, Charles-Theodore, Baron of Winterfeld, who was lieutenant-general of the armies of Philip V. in the Netherlands, and was created a marquis on March 12, 1706.§

His father, Charles-Frederic, Baron of Winterfeld, Knight, "Seigneur de Daluun, Stresan et Poppendorf," who belonged to the Brandenburg nobility, came over to the Netherlands under the Archduke Leopold of Austria, governor.

On the Carmelite convent at Lierre, cf. F. Foppens, Historia Episcoporum Antverpiens., p. 195, 1717; Sanderus, Grand Théâtre sacré du Brabant, t. ii. p. 175 (La Haye, 1729). After having left Lierre the nuns were settled first at Auckland, St. Helen's, near Durham; they are now at Carmel House, Darlington. Cf. Husenbeth, p. 102.

Edmund Bedingfeld, who was appointed by the Bishop of Antwerp confessor of the convent, was buried in the beautiful church of St. Gommaire, the patron of the town. Here his tombstone is still to be seen; it bears the following inscription (without date):—

D.O.M.

Hic jacet Edmundus non falso nomine mundus,
Christiparæ et mundæ virginitatis amans.
Hæreticos Anglos Romana ob sacra reliquit,
Insigni et veteri NOBILITATE potens.
Ilic demum corpus sub terra exsanguè relinquit,
Surgat ut angelica vociferante tuba,
Anglici ut angelicos ipsi mutentur in agros,
Tu prece catholica lector amice juva.

Amen.

Not far from the church was the well of St. Gommaire (see March 31, 1700), to which tradition ascribes a miraculous origin. Some harvestmen working in a field, being tired and thirsty on account of the heat, the saint dug a hole in the earth with his stick, and at once a fountain sprang up. BRUSSELS

The route to Brussels (October 19) is clearly indicated "by Duffelt" (Duffel, then called Duffel Vryheit, a small town on the Nèthe inférieure, half way between Lierre and Malines), Malines (on the Dyle, about half way between Antwerp and Brussels), and "Vilbort" (Vilvorden, a small town N. of Brussels). Hence the goods were sent on "by water," i.e. by the Willebroeck Canal, passing near Vilvorden and connecting Brussels with the Ruppel at Boom.

Both the "Towne House" and "Grand Marché" of Brussels are well known to English visitors.

As to "ye rampars," they have been turned into modern "boulevards" (de Waterloo, du Régent, &c.), beyond which the town has since extended itself on all sides.

The Dominican Convent was situated between the present Place de la Liberté and the rue du Gouvernement provisoire (see old map of the town in Henne and Wauters, Histoire de Bruxelles, vol. ii. p. 1. For further details about the convent, cf. Henne and Wauters, vol. iii. p. 572; Sanderus, Grand Théâtre sacré du Brabant, vol. i. p. 287; De Jonghe, Belgium Dominicanum, p. 414; Van Ghestel, Historia Archiepiscoporum Mechliniensium, vol. ii. p. 47; Oliver, Collections . . . Cornwall, pp. 154 seq.; Van Doninck, Het Engelsch Klooster te Bornhem, pp. 172 seq. (Louvain, 1904).

The church and abbey of the English Benedictine nuns have long since disappeared; they stood near St. Gudule's collegiate church, where is now the rue de Berlaymont (see map in Henne and Wauters, Hist. de Brux., vol. ii. p. 1). Besides the works quoted above the following may be noticed: Henne et Wauters, Hist. de Brux., vol. iii. p. 216; Destombes, La persécution religieuse en Angleterre, vol. ii. p. 496; Sanderus, Grand Théâtre . . ., vol. i. pp. 285 seq.; Gallia Christiana (1731), pp. 59, 306; Le Messager des Fiddles, vol. ii. (1885) p. 170; iii. 274, 465; iv. 130; Le Messager des Sciences historiques (1865), p. 308; Van Ghestel, Hist. Archiep. Mechliniens., vol. ii. (1725) pp. 44 seq.; Oliver, Collections . . . Cornwall, p. 142.

The Jesuit School (cf. Sanderus, Chorographia sacra Brabantiae, vol. iii. p. 32, The Hague, 1746) was near at hand; it extended from the rue de la Paille to the rue de Ruysbroeck and the rue d'Or, the church occupying the place now called Place de la Justice (the present rue Lebeau, which connects the Place du Grand Sablon and the rue d'Or, runs on the old premises of the college).—Cf. Henne et Wauters, Histoire de Bruxelles, vol. ii. p. 1.

The house of "Cap. de Bode" was situated where is now the rue d'Or, at a very short distance of the Place du Grand Sablon.

The Lorrainesses, who belonged to the Institute of B. Peter Fourier, came to Brussels in 1638 from S. Nicolas in Lorraine under the guidance of Henrietta of Phalsbourg, Princess of Lorraine. Cf. Abbé Mann, Abrégé de l'Histoire . . . de Bruxelles, vol. i. p. 177 (Bruxelles, 1785). In their Histoire de Bruxelles (vol. iii. p. 417, Bruxelles, 1845) Henne and Wauters give the following details: "Elles firent construire un cloître, des cellules, une chapelle et des salles pour les jeunes filles auxquelles elles enseignaient gratuitement la lecture, l'écriture, l'arithmétique, la musique vocale et instrumentale, et la langue allemande." At the French invasion their house was turned into barracks; later it was made part of the old Palais de Justice; it is now destroyed.

The odd custom, which Marwood relates on January 19, is thus recorded by the chief historians of Brussels. It will be seen that Marwood had heard a different account of the origin of the "Viel de femmes." "La tradition rapporte que les guerriers bruxellois échappés au cimetière des Sarrazins [in the first crusade] . . . reparurent subitement dans leur ville natale le 19 janvier 1101. Grande fut la joie de leurs femmes, qui se croyaient veuves; elles leur laissèrent à peine le temps d'achever le repas de bienvenue et les portèrent dans le lit conjugal. Le souvenir de cet heureux retour s'est perpétué. . . . Lors de l'anniversaire de cet événement, appelé la Veillée des Dames (Vrouwkens avond), celles-ci sont maîtresses au logis et les cloches des églises sonnent en leur honneur. Jusqu'en 1781, le conseil de Brabant conserva l'habitude de prendre vacance l'après-dîner de ce jour" (Henne et Wauters, Histoire de Bruxelles, vol. i. p. 30).

SECOND VISIT TO LIERRE

For the reasons which have been pointed out above (p. 57) the Bedingfelds went back from Brussels to Lierre, of which we have already spoken. Here again Marwood informs us of the places which either he or his friends went to visit—the "Prieuré de la Montagne de la Paix, dit Vredenburgh" (January 26, Butkens, Trophées . . . Suppl., vol. ii. p. 144), the Bernardine abbey of Notre-Dame at Nazareth, a small village near the town (February 8), the Carthusian "Prieuré de Ste. Catherine au Mont-Sion" (February 9), St. Elizabeth Hospital (in Flemish gasthuis; see May 1, "Ghant House"), and, of course, St. Gommere Church. There Marwood saw the Dean washing "12 poor men's feet"; the well-known custom had been introduced in the canonry some seventy years before.*

BORNHEM

About the end of May, Marwood and his pupil moved off from Lierre, viâ Antwerp, to Bornhem, a small town SW. of Antwerp, along the Scheld; it was then the head town of the county of Bornhem, which belonged to the county of Flanders. Here was the famous Dominican house of the Holy Cross, founded in 1658. It had been built in 1603 by Pedro Coloma, and in 1658 Fr. Thomas Philip (future Cardinal) Howard, first Dominican prior, took possession of it. Since the departure of the Dominicans in 1794 it was left uninhabited till 1835, when it was bought by the Cistercian monks of St. Bernard's Abbey, who are the present owners. A college for English youths had been started as early as 1660, but this first attempt failed. Again in 1672 some students were admitted, but again they left for various reasons. However, the next year a hospitium was established, where candidates for the order might pursue their studies; but this was not more successful, and after 1690 no students were received. As has been said above, it was only in 1703 that the College of Bornhem was opened. At the time of Marwood's stay Fr. William Thomas Barry was prior.†

TERMONDE, BRUGES, NIEUPORT, DUNKERQUE

After a stay of about five months, orders having come to leave Bornhem and go to France, Marwood took his course towards Dunkerque, making a detour by Bruges, for the reasons pointed out above. The party first arrived at Dendermonde (Termonde, see October 9), where Marwood notices the fortifications.*

Then, after driving to Ghent, they took the boat, which sailed regularly—as it still does—along the canal from Ghent to Bruges.

The English convent of Augustinian Canonesses (Dames anglaises) at Bruges had been founded by sisters from St. Monica, an English convent established at Louvain in 1609. The first prioress at Bruges was Sister Frances Standford, who took possession in 1629 of a house formerly belonging to Lady Mary Lovel. There it is that the convent is still flourishing at the present day in the rue des Carmes, the only English community which returned to Belgium after the general removal of 1794.†

The Carmelite house mentioned by Marwood was situated along the present "Potterie Rei" (Quai de la Potterie).

Pursuing their journey, Marwood and his charge travelled first by the Ostend Canal, then by the Plasschendaële Canal to Nieuport—in those days a fortified town on the seaside, WSW. of Bruges, where they visited the English Carthusians. This community, before settling at Nieuport in 1626, had been successively established in various towns of the Netherlands, Bruges (1559), Louvain (1578), and Malines (1591); it was suppressed in 1783 by the Emperor Joseph II.‡

Finally, after driving southwards along the "dunes" of the seaside, the travellers left the Netherlands and arrived at Dunkerque. This town, formerly belonging to Flanders, was in 1659 given to England; it was sold to Louis XIV. in 1662. At Dunkerque Marwood found "ye Ladys" at the Benedictine Convent, of which mention was made above (p. 76).§ The Jesuit College (Nov. 29) had been opened in 1620 in a house called "het roode Kruÿs," on the Place Saint-Jacques, on the spot where the town college now stands.

The difficulties which delayed the embarking for Calais gave Marwood an opportunity of visiting the harbour and the forts. The curious reader will find a map of them in Rousset, Beschrijving, vol. ii. p. 341. The entrance to the harbour was kept by a double pier, extending as far as the low-water mark; the end of the east pier being protected by the "Château verd" ("Fort vert," November 29), and the end of the other pier by the "Château de Bonne Espérance" (ibid.). Risbank (Richbank, December 16) was a fort east of the pier on the sands.

December 29, 1700, to January 24, 1701

Marwood's narrative is here easy to follow. They passed along a well-known route, through Abbeville, by the "neat" castle of Pierre, Beauvais, the porch of which "is celebrated for its beauty," and St. Denis "où les Roys ne vont jamais, mais y sont portés." There were several carriage accidents, two near Pois, another while approaching Beauvais, and a narrow escape from disaster after leaving that town.

At Paris rooms had been found for them by Mr. Edward Lutton, the chaplain of the English Augustinian convent in the Rue des Fossés-Saint-Victor, and the explanation of their going there is once more to be found by consulting the family tree. In this convent there had been two Pastons nuns—Frances, who died in 1650, and Agnes, who died in 1693; also two Cobbes—Elizabeth Ursula, dead in 1687, and Dorothy Austin, who was still alive. There were also still alive Anne Austin Waldegrave and Pulcheria Dorothy Eyre, the Esquire's aunt, who had been superioress a few years earlier, but was now rapidly failing. Besides this there was a Mistress Elizabeth Eyre, apparently not a nun. So there were many reasons why the Bedingfelds should have felt themselves no strangers to this interesting religious family. A Mr. James Eyres also appears as a constant companion, and though the regular addition of an "s" to his name should make us cautious in identifying him with the Leicestershire house of Eyre (of Hassop and Eastwell), still the reasons for doubt are inconclusive, and the probabilities are that he was a cousin, a son of the Esquire's aunt Mary, and that he was then studying medicine (6th Jan., and note).

At "y^e Grand Ursulines," they found Mrs. Catherine Caryll, and at the Scotch College (where he was afterwards buried) John Caryll, the head of the family, and Secretary of State to the fallen Stuarts, soon (i.e. after the death of James II.) to be proclaimed a Lord. He was the only Jacobite of any mark whom they visited, and they wisely kept away from St. Germain's. Indeed, but for the casual reference to "the Prince of Wales" instead of to "the Pretender," and for the variations between "P. O." (i.e. Prince of Orange) and "K. W." (King William: see May 23, June 21, Sept. 19, 1701; March 31, 1702), Marwood's political colour would be indistinguishable.

At the English Benedictines, i.e. at St. Edmund's in the Faubourg St. Jacques, they found Dom Clement Paston, a near relative (see 6th and also 12th January), and also saw the Abbot President of the Anglo-Benedictine congregation, though Marwood, more suo, only calls him plain Mr. Grigson.

The first day in Paris was Thursday, the feast of the Epiphany. This having been given up to a round among the English convents and monasteries, Friday was devoted to the great sights of the town, the Tuilleries, the Louvre, the Luxembourg gardens, &c. Next day Marwood went to take places in the coach, but found that all had been booked a fortnight before. He managed, however, to get a promise of seats for the Wednesday week.

With this additional time an additional trip to Versailles and Marly was arranged, and it was made in company with Dom Clement Paston and Mr. James Eyres. They had the opportunity of seeing Le Grand Monarque at supper, also at church; for Louis was now in his pious stage. One wonders what Marwood's inner mind was, when he put down the colourless note about Madame de la Vallière (January 9). He was more outspoken later about Madame Varenne (June 3, 1703) and Madame de Montespan (June 6, 1702). It is easy to see that Marwood thoroughly enjoyed this excursion to Versailles, and he notes carefully the facts and figures which seemed to him most worthy of being remembered (January 12-14).

Saturday and Sunday, the 15th and 16th, were again given up chiefly to calls. Visits are made to Mrs. Whetenhall at the Hôtel d'Estrade, and on Lady (Madame) Throckmorton, also on Sister Cobbe. The first and third were cousins to the Esquire. Also upon "Mr. Sergeant," presumably the great but eccentric controversialist. On the 19th of January the journey to La Flèche was continued, and on the 24th they reached their destination.

Wed. 29 Dec. A very Wet Day. We went ab^t ye Ramparts [of Calais] w^{ch} are old & ruinous, but the dehors good and regular, wth a Cittadel, and the Estay fine, and they are making a Noble Basine capable of the biggest Ships & carrying the Estay farther out into the Sea & making a Rich-banc. We hired 2 plaices of Mr. Du Val's Coach, but to Abbeville certaine.

Thurs. 30 Dec. We took Coach ab^t 8 wth Mr. Glas who went but to Bullogne. And Mons^r Jonquet Cadet Musicien du Roy dans la Petite Place à Versailles who went to Paris with us. By 1 we got to Marquis a poor Village, miserable entertainment, & sad Stormey Wet Weather. At Night we got to Bologne (7 Leagues) w^{ch} is a pretty old Town fortified wth Walls & Towers à l'antique & seperate fro' ye Basse Ville where we lay at Mon^s Gaillard's at ye Angel. For our meat we went to ye Rotisseur where we had a Capon Larded a Rabbit Larded, a Pigeon & 2 Greenes for 45 Sous, all ready drest.

Thursd. 31. We set out by 7, & by 1 got to Frank (ye Weather good) the Way good but Hilly & nothing like the sad way from Calais to Bologne, (where we had 8 horses but stuck sometimes). At 5 we arrived at Montreuil wth 6 horses, there we had a Macquerey & Trout for Supper (ye Macquerey much like our brent geese, & allowed to be eaten on fasting days). Montreuil is sweetly seated on a hill surrounded on 3 parts wth a Marsh & well fortifyed. And has a basse Ville that has gates and Works before them, but not very moderne. There are 2 Parish Churches besides Convents (as in Bologne). We did our Devotions in ye G^t Church.

Janry. : Saturd. 1. And then set out ab^t 7 to Abbeville w^h is ab^t 10 leagues. And good way & we had good weather till ab^t Sun Set the wind riss. We dined poorly at a Village called [Frank cancelled], & between that & S^t Huberts walking & leaving our Swords in the Coach, mine was lost (supposed shaken out). At 6 we came to Abbeville, ye Gate being just shut, but they were opened to us, & this was the last Towne they search at, from Calais to Paris. We lodged well at ye Catt. 'Tis a Town well fortified has a triple bridge, has about 13 Parish Churches & 16 Monasterys.

Sund. 2. We set out for Pois, ab^t 8 in ye morn, & ab^t 9 Leagues off. We were overturned about 10, between 2 Close Mountaines, wthout ye least Damage or Danger. We dined poorly at a Sorry Village called Pierre where was a Neat Castle, belonging to ye Dutchesse of Moire (as I remember) & between 7 & 8 we got to a Towne called Pois a poor village, 9 Leagues fro' Abbeville, where we had poor lodging, & about $\frac{1}{2}$ a League from ye Towne, our Coach had like to have over turned at a precipice but ✠ Escaped,* but we forct to alight & walk afoot $\frac{1}{2}$ a Mile, when it was Night & till we got off ye Hill.

Monday 3. We left Pois at 5 & $\frac{1}{2}$ for Beauvais 9 Leagues (which is famed for good mutton, and where I saw some so fat and white there could not be better). By 11 we came to Granville, and at 6 we got to Beauvais, a neat Towne, the entrance of whose church is celebrated for beauty. Just at the entrance of the Towne the coach broke, and we walkt to y^e Star where we were well entertained. (Beauvais Mutton, Abbeville bisket and Bullogne Gloues are Esteem'd.)

Tusd. 4. We left Beauvais by 7 for Beaumont about 8 leagues, and before 10 in the morning came to a village and dined, because there was none nere midway. About 5 we got on the Causey of Beaumont, a neat, fortified Town with a River just by the Gates. The causey is rayed over a kind of Marais in some places, about 12 foot high like a wall (on y^e side) & somewhat too narrow for 2 coaches to pass. A cart met us, and they endeavoured quietly to pass each other. Our coach stopt (& 8 horses were in it), and by accident the horse next y^e side of y^e high causey fell downe, and drew his fellow, & they the next, on which y^e Postillon was, and they the next, that 6 were down y^e precipice. But the coach man riding on y^e next, nimbly cut the Traces, and so † we escaped a most imminent danger of Death.

Wedns. 5 Jan. We left Beaumont at 7. and came to S^t Brices, a village but 4 leagues off, and at 2 came away by S^t Denis an old ville, the church celebrated by the funerall of y^e French Kings (ou les Roys ne vont jamais mais y sont portés) and by 5 arrived at Paris, & visited M^r Lutton* who had provided us a Lodging in y^e fosse S^t Victor being nere him.

Thursd. 6. Jour des Roys. We were at prayers at y^e Austines, afterwards at y^e Douain for our Goods, afterwards at y^e Grand Ursulines with M^{rs} Caryl; then at y^e Benedictines to see M^r Cl. P., † M^r Grigson, M^r Hitchcok, then M^r Ja. Eyres ‡ who supped with us y^e night.

* Edward Lutton was chaplain to the English Convent in the Rue des Fossés Saint-Victor. His father's name was Elrington or Eldrington, a well-to-do London distiller. Like many other priests, Edward adopted his mother's name Lutton as an alias. Born in 1637, he entered Douay College at the age of 14, and in due time became a priest. He was a good scholar and a good preacher, whose excellent business qualities led to his being appointed Procurator to the Seminary of Douay, then to St. Gregory's, Paris, and thence to the convent chaplaincy in 1674, which he held till his death on the 30th of June 1713. His assistance to the nuns, both by advice and by loans and gifts of money, was very considerable, and the convent still regards him as one of its chief benefactors.—Gillow, v. 353; F.-M.-T. Cédoz, Un Couvent de Religieuses Anglaises à Paris de 1634 à 1884, Paris, 1891, pp. 64, 201-213.

† Dom Clement Paston, of Barningham, Norf., was professed at St. Edmunds, October 26, 1683.—Weldon, Ap., p. 21. Several Gregsons were professed at later dates. This seems to have been Dom Bernard, then President of the English Congregation. Weldon's Appendix only gives one Hitchcock, Dom William (alias Needham), but he was professed at Douay in 1650.—B. Weldon, Chronological Notes, 1881, Ap. p. 10.

‡ The spelling of this name should be noted. It is consistently Eyres, not Eyre, during the stay in Paris, while Eyre is consistently given to the ladies, Mistress Elizabeth and Mother Pulcheria Eyre. Though Marwood, like most of his contemporaries, cared little (according to modern ideas) for orthography, this strong contrast must have its meaning, and it would seem to mean that Mr. James was not of the family of Eyre of Hassop, which eschewed the "s."

Yet this is not really certain. It had been common a generation or two earlier, for different sons of the same father to adopt different spellings of the family name. Thus four sons of a Mr. Eyre in Elizabethan times might have called themselves respectively Eir, Eire, Eyre, and Eyres. And below we find "Aunt Ayres" (July 10, 1701) and Mr. James Eyre. Probably, therefore, Eyres is a personal, not a family spelling of the name. This being so, we should probably after all identify him with James, the fourth son of Thomas Eyre of Hassop and Eastwell, who married, as second wife, Mary Bedingfeld, the Baronet's sister. James became a Doctor of Medicine, and died 1769 (Nichols, Leicester, vol. iv. i. 398). As he would not be able to graduate as a doctor in England, we may assume that James was studying or practising medicine at Paris. His sister Mary married — Paston of Barningham, who may therefore be the "Cousin Paston" alluded to by the Baronet, p. 38. (See also Notes on the Bedingfeld family.)

Frid. 7 Jan. We spent all day in visiting y^e Pont neuf, the Louvre, Thuillery, Jardin du Luxemburgh, y^e Invalides, which is capable of 6000 beds, & the Dome stately; y^e College des 4 Nations finely built, and the Palais Royall, much like our Exchange and Westminster Hall. I writ to S^r Henry, M^{rs} Southwel, M^{rs} Francis and M^{rs} Caryl.

Sat. 8. I dined at home and then went to M^r Lutton & took my account of him, and then received of him 20 Lewis d'or at 12*l.* 15*s.*, and then went to y^e Rue de la Harpe, Enseigne S^t Eustache to take places; and there was none but y^e bootes, the rest being taken 15 dayes before. So I gave him a pistole in part for 2 places certaine for Autels on y^e 19 Instant, Wednesday, 7 night, and then took coach and went to S^r D. Arth., who received us kindly and invited us to dinner next day, and promised to do the kindnesse I desired.

Sund. 9. We were at prayers in the morning at the Carmelite Nuns of y^e Incarnation, where Madame La Valiere,* is Religious, where is a most noble small chappell, up 3 degrees of stairs, and parted by Iron gates from y^e body of y^e Church. The altar very rich and Pictures round the Church of vast worth. The same built by Cardinal Berule, who is buryed there in a little chappell. And his statue to the Life is cut in a Marble Stone upon a Pedestall in his habit at Prayer, as lively as if it were a man. Card. Camus is buryed at y^e foot of the same altar. Then we went to y^e Benedictine Nuns of Val de Grace, built by Anne of Austria, Mother to Lewis 14, who lyes buryed in a chappel on y^e Ghospel side of y^e altar. The Dome of the church is exceeding noble gilt with gold in the Outside, & the Inside with Glorious Painting representing the Saints in glory. Then we went to y^e E. Benedictine F., where we were handsomely treated at dinner, & staid till evening and went to prayers at S^t Stephen's Parochiall Church, where by candle light, it was most edifying to see the side chappels & Neffe all filled with young ones chatechizing by y^e severall Canons &c. . . .

Mond. 10. We wayted on Mad^m Tilsly,† Prioress of y^e Augustinians, and then went to see y^e Place des Victoires, where is a most noble statue of Brass can be seen, of Lewis 14, all gilt with gold, and at y^e 4 corners 4 g^t statues of brasse, like slaves in chaines. And there are 4 Lanthernes on 3 pillars each, y^e most curiously adorned with sculptures of Victorys. Then at y^e end of a very long street in the view of the Former is the Place Vendosme, now a making, in a circular forme of similar noble buildings in the midst of which on a marble Pedestall is Lewis 14 on horseback in brasse. In passing we went to see S^t Eustache church, which is a noble Parish church. A large font all brasse. . . .

† Anne Tyldesley was the second of the three daughters of Sir Thomas Tyldesley, governor of Lichfield for King Charles, and who eventually died on the field near Wigan. All three daughters entered the convent, and were all still living. Mistress Anne was elected Superioress (not Prioress) in 1698, and she died in office, December 11, 1720, aged 79 years, of which nearly 63 were spent in Religion. An account of her government of the convent in Cédos, pp. 177 to 217.

Tuesd. 11 Jan. We visited Lady Throckmorton,* M^{rs} Wheatenhall † at y^e Hostel d'Estrade; then went to a high Turret to view ye circle of Paris which does not appear so large as London by far. Then we saw y^e g^t Jesuites, a stately uniform Quadrangle (besides y^e church which is noble, & on the Ghospel side is the heart of Lewis y^e 13. in a great urne of silver gilt, & supported by 2 great angels of massive metall, part all silver & part brass gilt). The Library is stately as indeed is the whole fabrick & stair case. I writ to S^r Henry.

Wedn. 12. We took coach (with M^r Jas. Eyres, & M^r Cl: Paston) for Versailles. And there found out M^r Jonquet (cadet) Musicien du Roy dans la Petite Place. And carried us to the court, which we saw; and then to the Menagery, and then to the Orangerie, which are all excellent. The Figures, the Fountaines, the Walks &c. are fit for a King. We lay at the Hotel de Mante. That night we saw y^e King of France, y^e Dauphin, Mons. the Duke de Chartres & Duchesse de Burgogne all at Supper about 10 at night.

Thursd. 13. We saw about 9. the King of France at Mass with a mighty consort (sic) of Vocal & Instrumentall Musique. About 12, the Dauphine, Mons^r, Duchesse de Borgogne & Chartres in like

* Lady Throckmorton may have been Anne Monson, the wife of the second baronet. Her husband died in 1680, while she survived him many years, her will not being proved till 1728 (C. E. G., Baronetage, ii. 198).

† This Mistress Whetenhall cannot be Elizabeth, sister of the second baronet, for we have heard him say, "My sister Whetenhall died 24 February 166- [sic]." Whatever the indefinite date stands for, she must have been dead before 1669, when the words were written. The Oxburgh pedigree says she had no children. But Foley (vi. 802) believes there were several, e.g. Henry the heir (who married Lettice Tichborne in 1691), and apparently also Dame Placida of Pontoise, Sister Teresa Benedict, Blue Nun at Paris, and Catherine, who lived and died, in 1717, a boarder at the same convent. It would have been one of these, perhaps the last, that is mentioned here. The family deserves further notice.

Thomas Whetenhall, who married Elizabeth Bedingfeld as his second wife, belonged to a family, which had been settled at Hextall Court, East Peckham, Kent, since the days of Henry VIII. (Hasted, Kent, iv. 45), having presumably descended from the ancient family of Wetenhall of Wetenhall, Cheshire. The Kent family were mostly Catholics in the beginning of the seventeenth century, for in 1613 William Darrell (afterwards a Jesuit), whose mother was a Whetenhall, says: "Most of my relatives on my mother's side are Catholics" (Foley, iii. 476).

Thomas, says de Grammont in his Memoirs, had once thought of studying for the priesthood, but on the death of an elder brother had returned to carry on the succession of the family (Mémoires, 1812, p. 320). This would seem to be true, for we find that Thomas Whetenhall, under the alias Stanley, entered the English College, Rome, in November 1645, aged 19, and left again almost immediately in March 1646 (Foley, vi. 365, where an erroneous note says that he afterwards died in Flanders). He subsequently married Catherine Talbot, second daughter of John, 10th Earl of Shrewsbury, in 1655, but she died ten months later, July 6, 1656, at Padua (R. Lascelles, Voyage of Lady Catherine Whetenhall, B. M., Add. MS. 4217).

The Memoirs of the Count de Grammont make occasional mention of Mrs. Whetenhall, in describing the intrigues by which that unscrupulous gallant wooed and eventually won the hand of "la belle Hamilton" (Œuvres du Comte [Autoine] Hamilton, 1812, pp. 319, 320, 329, 330, 372, 373). It is clear that the scandal-loving Frenchman embellished pretty freely his narrative of the little adventures in which he was engaged. As far as Mrs. Whetenhall, however, is concerned, no scandals are recounted. She is beautiful, but devoid of all passion, while her husband, who is mockingly portrayed as a dry as dust bookworm, wearies her, and so she is not averse to going to court, in charge of Miss Hamilton, where the engagement (which did not turn out a happy one) was eventually made.

manner. Then we went to see the Trianon, a neat Majestique house of Pleasure in the Park, which is stately furnished & has fine guardens, & an orangerie and Mall.

Friday 14 Jan. We went to y^e Ecuries which have the mine of Palaces. Saw the Menage & Pages ride. Then took coach at y^e Bureau, & went to Marli (about a League $\frac{1}{2}$ distant) where we saw a most Majestick Square house with a round hall cal'd y^e Salle du Soleil, to which there are 4 dores that come into it (oppositely) from all the Quarters—Richly meublée, & has 7 fine buildings, all squares on each side, Ranging downe y^e Garden and adorn'd with Incomparable Walks descending, Fountaines, Rocks &c. From thence we went to the Watermachine which is a prodigious Work, and brings up Water from the River 600 foot perpendicular, to y^e Top of a Water house built on y^e hill, about 100 foot high, from whence is an aqueduct upon vast arches, which carries the Water by Pipes &c. to Versailles. There are about 17 or 18 wheeles in the River Seine which turne by the Water & move so many Pumps about $\frac{1}{8}$ of a mile distant. The Tuyaus are vast cast iron, & joynd with scrues of Iron, & stopt at y^e Joynings with cordage & mastick very firme. Thence we came home to Paris by y^e Pecq—; arrived about 7.

Sat. 15. We visited M^r Jo. Caryl* at y^e Scotch College; M^r Whitford abroad, and M^{rs} Eyre afterward & M^{rs} Pulcheria Eyre (dead since)† & M^{rs} Cobbe‡ &c. Then visited Mr Hitchcock, M^r Serjeant,§ M^r Ja. Eyres, M^{rs} Kath. Caryl at y^e Vrselines, and were invited to dine on Sunday at y^e Augustine Nuns.

Sund. 16. We din'd neatly with M^{rs} Ell. Eyre at y^e Austin Nuns, and afterward visited y^e R. M. Tilsly, Lady Browne. Then went to see Sir Dan: Arthur, who invited us next day to dinner. Went to see M^r Ployden || at y^e g^t Jesuits. Sent a compliment to M^{rs} Wheatenhall &c.,

* Mr. John Caryll, afterwards known as Lord Caryll, of Lady Holt, Sussex, was secretary to Mary of Modena, James, and the Chevalier. He was at this time a constant visitor to the Scotch College, in which he was eventually buried. It may, however, be that Marwood would have described him as "Mr. Caryl," without any addition, and if so, this John would have been one of his nephews, who was under the tutorship of Thomas Innes, President of the College.—Max de Trenqualéon, West Grinstead et les Caryll (1893), ii. pp. 1-156. I am not able to identify the Mrs. Catherine Caryll at the Ursulines, mentioned January 15, but as we have heard, the family sent a large number of its daughters to convents, more than are marked as nuns in the family tree.

† Mistress Pulcheria Dorothy Eyre was born at Hassop in 1631, professed in 1647, Superioress from 1678 to 1694, and died in 1701 (Cédoz, pp. 143-155). No Elizabeth Eyre—indeed no other Eyre—appears in the list of nuns of this convent (ibid., pp. 459-464). So the inference is that she was a visitor or a boarder.

‡ This would seem to have been Dorothea Austin Cobbe, professed 1665, died 1732 (Cédoz, p. 461). She and Elizabeth above mentioned were the two elder daughters of Colonel William Cobbe, the husband of the Baronet's Aunt Elizabeth. Two more daughters, Anne and Mary, are also said to have taken the veil.—H. Jones, Sandringham Past and Present, p. 88.

§ This may well have been the celebrated, though sometimes erratic, controversialist John Sargeant, who is said to have been living in Paris about this time.—Gillow, v., 492.

|| We shall find many references to Father Plowden later on, and generally relating to matters of finance. This enables us to identify this Father Ployden as Francis Plowden (alias Perot and Simeon), S.J., who was at this time residing in Paris, as procurator for the English Jesuits. He belonged to the Plowdens of Plowden Hall.—Foley, Records, vii. 603.

and then went to a neat supper given us by M^r Ja. Eyres at y^e —, where is a chamber cal'd the Princes' Chamber, upon y^e horrid occasion of a man being kild there by y^e Princes of y^e blood—&c. We saw this day y^e Place Royall, where Lewis y^e 13 is on Horseback. 'Tis a noble square, & a Piazza under Regular buildings on each side.

Monday. 17 Jan. We dined with S^r D. Arthur, and afterward went to y^e Gaubelaines a work house of Tapistry, where we saw noble works, and the manners of making haut lice and bas lice (or à la mosaic). There were pieces of about 4 Ells square worth 1000 Crownes. Rare stone statues & Inlay work (called à raport). We were visited by M^{rs} Wheatenhall, M^d Throgmorton &c.

Tuesday. 18. We were at y^e cloathing of 2 Lay Sisters at y^e Austines, & afterwards handsomely treated at dinner by M^r Lutton (with M^r Ja. Eyres) and then I carryed my Trunks to y^e Bureau for La Flesche.

Wednesday. 19. We took coach for La Flesche, 52 Leagues from Paris, at 8 morn., accompanied by R. P. de Pré & P. Contancine,* who was going for China with M^r de Fontenay. We dined at Palesseau, 4 Leagues from Paris, a poor village, & supped at Bonelle 4 Leagues farther.

Thursday. 20. We din'd at Guêt de Lauret, 6 Leagues, where y^e Dutchesse de la Ferté & her daughter y^e Marquise de Mirepoix (a prodigious fat woman) came into our chamber to speake with P. Contancine. We came to Chartres that night, a neat wal'd Towne, the Church celebrated for Beauty, 4 Leagues from Guêt de Lauret, & there we lay.

Friday. 21. We dined at Heliers, 6 Leagues from Chartres; a poor village. We sup'd this night at Les Autels, 5 Leagues, & came in late, at 9 at night, an ordinary village.

Saturday. 22. We din'd at Pont de Veni, a low village, at that time much overflowed with Water; & came in at 3 o'clock, the wheel being mended by the way. And there we stay'd till 9 night, because y^e next stage was very bad way; & we stayd for y^e Benefit of y^e Moon, & to make our horses in good heart, for we had a League in a Rapid Water & dreadful way beside, before we came to Conary, 4 Leagues off.

Sunday 23. We came about 3 in the morning to Conary, when I put y^e Esq. to bed, & lay downe onely myself. We heard P. Contancine's Masse in y^e Paris[h] church about 7, & then took a good breakfast, intending only a collation at Mans, a neat City 5 Leagues off. And at night we came to Gévelaer about 4 Leagues off, but excellent way—& there we lay.

Monday 24. We came ✠ to La Flesche by 10 o'clock in y^e morning—bad way mostly, & din'd together at y^e 4 Vents, where I took up my lodging till y^e Saturday Following.

§ 7.—THE FIRST YEAR AT SCHOOL

The four years which Henry Arundel Bedingfeld spent at La Flèche were certainly a great educational success. It will be worth while, there-

* Père Cyr Contancin reached China in 1701, and became superior of the French Jesuit mission there. Between 1725 and 1730 he was forced by persecution to retire to Canton, whence he returned to France to report on the state of the mission, but died on his return journey in 1733.—Sommervogel, Bibliothèque de la C. de Jésus, ii. 1386.

fore, to notice from the first what we are told about the factors of that success.

First there was the noble college founded and regally endowed by Henri IV., one of the greatest and most popular kings of France. His heart was buried in the college chapel, in which those great sermons were preached of which we frequently hear mention, and which must evidently have been very impressive. The college is still used by the French Government as a training school for officers. See Additional Note, p. 157.

Then there were the beautiful surroundings, with great freedom for games and outdoor sports. Football, tennis, shooting, riding, walking, swimming, are all mentioned.

The theatre was also carefully employed as a means of education; tragedies, moral plays, declamation, enigmas (June 12), affiches, &c., were frequent: comedy was not neglected, and besides these the usual carnival masquerades (February 8).

The discipline was not at all of a cast-iron character which made lapses physically impossible, and we shall find an unfortunate example of an English lad, Mr. Braithwaite, who after various "pranks," including a row with the watchmen, card-playing till late at night, and other boyish extravagances, had to be bundled off home.

An excellent feature was the quasi-home life of the extern pupils (there were also "pensionairs") under their respective "gouverneurs." No influence could have been better than that of Marwood's good sense and good heart. From all that we hear, the inference is that Mr. Farley, the Abbé Murphy, and the other tutors, to whom Marwood so often alludes, were men of the same class as himself.

Our Esquire was eleven and three-quarters when he was put into the cinquième, and had the good fortune of coming under the influence of a remarkable man as his "schoolmaster." This was Louis Joseph de la Ferté. For some reasons unknown to us, this eloquent preacher had been in "disgrace" (June 5, 1701), probably for being too outspoken in denouncing some of the distinguished sinners of the day. But whatever his indiscretion or error, the mistake was a happy one, in so far as it brought young Henry for some eight months under the influence of a very eloquent man, "a most excellent orator," and this probably gave him a taste and skill for literature which was certainly remarkable, as the event showed.

In three weeks from his arrival, he was "competing for a premium" (February 21), and at the end of the school-year he entered for the "General Premium" (August 17). After twelve months he was "first Imperator," that is, the head of his class (January 28, 1702). His future successes will be mentioned later. I also postpone till next year some notes on the English boys who were with him at La Flèche, but their names, aliases, and respective "gouverneurs" should be carefully noted. Attention should also be directed to the various riding tours through the country which were undertaken by the pupils.

Afternoon I delivered a letter of M^r Lutton's to M^r Farly, L^d W[aldegrave]'s* Governor, a most obliging Gent, & afterward went to y^e Colledge to visit.

Tuesd. 25 Jan. I was visited by M^r Farget & went to Lord Walde-

* James Waldegrave, Baron Waldegrave of Chewton, Somerset, was the son of Sir Henry Waldegrave of Staining Hall, Norfolk, and Chenton, Somerset, who had married Henrietta FitzJames, illegitimate child of James II. and Arabella Churchill, and had been created baron in 1685-6. He followed the Stuarts to St. Germain, but soon died, and his son James succeeded to the title in 1689 at the age of four. In 1714 he married Mary, second daughter of Sir John Webb of Hatherop, and in 1715 he registered his estates as a Catholic (J. O. Payne, English Catholic Nonjurors of 1715, pp. 64, 88, 230). But after the death of his wife in childbirth, grave's, who invited us to dinner & supper. We also saw M^r Hescott,* who introduced us to J. de la Ferté,† who received us most kindly.

Wed. 26 Jan. P. Contancine tooke his leave of us (recommending me to Père Hirvieu & de la More). We saw all y^e College which is beautifull & stately, built by Hen. 4, whose Heart with his Queen, Mary de Medicis is there, & therefore called y^e Royall College. I writ this day to S^r Henry, M^r Lutton, M^r Paston, M^{rs} Frances. Dined at home.

Thurs. 27. I dined at L^d Walgrave's Lodging, with M^{rs} Smith, her son,‡ M^r Witherington.§ And that day walkt at y^e Garden of Mad^m de Lavarine, & met M^r Skelton|| there. Afternoon went to see Pensions &c.

Friday 28. We din'd & supt there, and visited the Towne and the River Le Loyre, which is a fine River, and has divers Bridges over it; and many Mills at y^e chief Bridge. We saw the Recollects Garden.

Sat. 29. We were at the Nuns of the Visitation, S^t Francis de Sales' Feastivall. Din'd with L^d Walgrave, and agreed our Pension for 332l p. an. each. And that night late went into our lodging at Mons^r De Roshuilles. The Esq^{re} made his Theme this day.

Sond. 30. We took our Degouté at y^e Lion d'Or, M^{rs} Tuilleries daughter, & then walkt to y^e Grand Cymitier of the Towne. Writ to M^{rs} Southwell.

Mond. 31. The Esq^r took his place in the 5th Forme (or Classe) and we took a repititor (M^r Conelane) for a Crowne a month. I received a Letter from S^r Hen. & M^r Lutton.

Feb.: Tuesd. 1. Wet weather—almost every day rayne for 6 weeks together. I writ Letters to-day for the Post to morrow, & walkt in y^e evening with m^y Lord, M^r Faryel and Coll. Skelton.

1719, Lord Waldegrave gave up his religion, and on the 12th of February 1722, having pronounced the Oath of Supremacy, he took his place in Parliament, became Earl, English Ambassador in France, K.G., &c., &c., and died in 1741. According to Dr. George Oliver, Lord Waldegrave expressed upon his deathbed, if not repentance, at least remorse for his apostasy (Gibson, Lydiat Hall, pp. 277, 317-321). His will, naturally, says nothing of this, but betrays deep bitterness of mind at the conduct of his daughter, who had married an actor (J. O. Payne, Records of English Catholics of 1715, p. 17).

* Thomas Hesketh, priest of the English Province, S.J., was at La Flèche as tutor to certain pupils in 1701 and 1704 (Foley, vii. 357). But Marwood does not tell us who his pupils were, but as he is often in company with the Herberts, who here went by the name Grey, we may assume that they were under his charge.

† Louis Joseph de la Ferté, S.J., a distinguished preacher, perhaps a relation of the Duchesse de la Ferté mentioned January 20. A sermon of his preached on Corpus Christi day, 1716, before the King, gave rise to a good deal of controversy, on which see C. de Sommervogel. Bibliothèque de la C. de Jésus, iii. 702.

‡ There is nothing to tell us whether Smith is here an assumed or a real name. Later on the second name, Stafford, is given (March 31).

§ It is impossible, until the Christian name of this boy is found, to make sure which branch of the Widdrington family he belongs to. There does not, however, seem to be any actual obstacle to identifying him with Charles Widdrington, second brother of the fourth Lord Widdrington. Charles was arrested for joining the rebellion of 1715, but afterwards pardoned. He is said to have died at St. Omers in 1756. (Information supplied by Major F. Skeet, and History of the Families of Skeet, Somerscales, Widdrington, &c., by a Connection of the Same, 1906, p. 109.)

|| Mr. Skelton seems to be the same as the Colonel Skelton below and the Bevil Skelton mentioned in D. N. B., lii. 326 ii.

Wedn. 2 Feb. I writ to S^r Henry, M^r Paston, M^{rs} Francis, M^r Lutton, & at a sermon this afternoon, & after y^t at a Gouté at y^o Lyon d'Or. A great tempest.

Thursd. 3. A wet day; we spent most Time at home. At night with my Lord W.

Frid. 4. At ye Tragedy at ye Colledge from Noon till between 4 & 5. And it was performed well, & we were at ye best place next the Rector.

Sat. 5. We were out all y^o afternoon with Lord Waldegrave a shooting.

Sund. 6. Was a most noble service at 6 at Night at y^o Salue; we all there at y^o Jesuit Colledge.

Mond. 7. We walkt in y^o afternoon to S^t Columba's, a village about a mile off, famous for a sort of Cheese called Fromage de S^t Columbe. Then we were at y^o Salue, whence L. W. went out sick. Blanchisseux 3*l.* p. q^r [? pour quartier (see May 9)] chaque.

Tusd. 8. We saw the Mascaraders run at y^o Goose, to pull y^o head off hanging.* And that night we were at a comedy at y^o Colledge till nere 10 at night.

Wedn. 9. I writ to S^r Henry, M^r Drury, M^r Bing.

Thursd. 10. This day y^o schole began, after a week's vacation. We were at night with L^d W.

Frid. 11. I received a Letter from M^{rs} Margaret B. and one from M^r Lutton with his bill.

Sat. 12. We were at home &c. at night with Lord W.

Sund. 13. We were at a sermon at y^o Jesuits I writ to Nurse.

Mond. 14. I had a Letter from M^r Clem. Paston. I walkt with M^{rs} Smith, M^r Pharily, M^r Browne, Coll. Skelton.

Tusd. 15. Was a snowy day. In the afternoon visited by P. de la Ferté & y^o Esqr.'s scholemaster, & after walkt with M^r Browne and his wife &c.

Wedn. 16. I writ to M^r Paston, and sent him my watch for M^r Helmes to mend; and to M^{rs} Margaret Bedingfeld, and to M^{rs} Southwell.

Thursd. 17. I visited P. Antoine, a Recollect, with M^r Fareley & F. Hescot, and y^o Esq^{re} played that afternoon in y^o Coll.

Friday 18. I received a Letter from M^{rs} Francis, from Dunkerque. It was a very wet day. Dyed M^{rs} Anne Bed. at Lyre ætat. 50. Rel. 31.†

Sat. 19. I was at home all day. At night with L. W.

Sund. 20. At sermon at y^o Colledge. At even with M^r Fareley at Chemino.

Mond. 21. The Esq^{re} competed for a Premium and got y^o 2nd. In the morning he came out ill, but thank God he was well at noon, and I gave him nothing to dinner but some burnt wine & tost. Afternoon he was well & would go to Schole, because of the Premium. I received this day a long Letter from M^r Ed. Bed.

Tusd. 22. I was at a sermon at S^t Thomas'. The Esq^{re} continued well. I writ to M^r Edw^d and S^r Henry in one sheet, & dated it as tomorrow.

Wed. 23 Feb. I sent a Letter to Sir H. & M^r Edw. visiting my L^d W., I found the Rector of y^e Jesuits there.

Thurs. 24. We walkt a League off to Mons. Birree's house where we were (with L^d W.) civilly treated.

Frid. 25. Wet weather. At S^t Martin's. M^r F. & I drank a Gouté at Night with M^{rs} Smith. I received a Letter from S^r Henry, dated Feb. 6. ✠* & Nurse.

Sat. 26. I writ an answer to Sir Henry dated to morrow. At night we were at my Lord's.

Sund. 27. I writ to Mons. Jonquet, and the Esq^{re} writ to his Father.

Mond. 28. I was at home. At Night with L. W.

Tues. Mar. 1. I was at Madame le Morinée's and Mad. de Land's, both fine discreet women. The 1 [1st] of distinction, whose sister — buried a son 14 dayes since, who being open'd had a long worme, sharp at both ends, that had eat a hole quit thro the Coat of his Stomach, so y^t y^e Chyle might run out.

Wed. 2. I writ to S^r Dan Arthur, M^{rs} Southwell a long letter, and M^r Patrick.

Thurs. 3. We were all y^e Morn at home, and being Midd Lent Thursday (a day of Congé) we walkt out & were at S^t Martin's with L^d W. & his brother. †

Frid. 4. I received a letter from M^r Paston. A wet day & night.

Sat. 5. I writ to M^r James Eyre.

Sund. 6. The Esq^{re} visited Mad. la Morinée & she was not at home. At night at my Lord's, where M^r Brown, M^r Donn ‡ &c.

Mond. 7. I received a Letter from S^r H. B. dated Feb. 13.

8. Tuesd. Was a Congé afternoon. We were out a town with M^r Ingram who came to visit us; and L^d Wal. &c. There was a mighty flood; divers were drowned on the Road to Angers.

9. Wed. A fine day and frosty. The water fell. I had recommendations from P. Contancine who set sayl for Chinay Mar. 3. I writ to y^e Peruquier Patrick for our things.

Thurs. 10. A fine day; the water fell apace. We walkt out.

Frid. 11. } No bad weather.

Sat. 12. }

Sund. 13. A fine day. We were with L^d Wal. at Chimino.

Mond. 14. I received a letter from Sir H. B. M^{rs} Southwell, M^r Drury and Mons^r Jonquet, & br. Hunter.

Tuesd. 15. I received y^e Periwig from M^r Patrick in a box, with Powder Balls & Oyl. The Esq^{re} began to cough with a cold.

* This cross probably here signified "Important."

‡ Donne or Dun appears afterwards to be an alias for Gage. There were two brothers, and Mr. Brown ("Mrs." Brown occurs once, it may be by a mere slip of the pen) was their tutor. Their names on the 20th of September are given as Thomas and Isaac. On the 6th of February 1702 we hear that "Dun aisné" is dead. But as after both Thomas and Jos. (sic) are alive on the 3rd of June and 20th August, we gather that their father or some elder brother must have been meant.

Wedn. 16 March. I writ to S^r H. B., to S^r Dan. Arthur and to [Mr. Patrick cancelled]. It snowed this day. I received 6 L. Dors [Louis d'or] of y^e Procurator & bid him dispose of y^e Rest.

Thurs. 17. We visited Mad. de la Morinée, who was not within. I also visited Mons^r de Biré yesterday, who was abroad.

Frid. 18. M^r Nelson had a letter from S^r H., and I had one from S^r Dan Arthur, about 820*l.* he was to pay me, & one from M^r Paston. I was with Ch^l Skelton & D^r —.

Sat. 19. I writ to M^r Paston and M^r Patrick. This day measured the Esq^r & find his height to be 4 foot 10 Inches $\frac{3}{4}$, so that since last Nov. 8 he is growne 2 Inches & $\frac{1}{2}$. This Night I gave y^e Esq^r some Cawdle for his Cold. I returnd y^e Peruque to Paris.

Sond. 20. Palme Sunday. Y^e Esq^r's Cold continued, and I gave him some burnt wine & water with an Egge at Night. Tho he cougnt in y^e night, he slept well.

Mond. 21. I kept him at home all day, and he cougnt much, but thank God he began to spit, and said he had no paine in his Stomach. I consulted with Doctor Galloy who prescribed a Ptisane, Lozanges de Guimauves, & milk morn & night with y^e yolk of an Egge. I received a letter from S^r D. Arthur.

Tuesd. 22. His cough abated but I kept him from schole. In the afternoon he went to M^{rs} Smith's.

Wedn. 23. I writ to S^r Henry B. and S^r D. Arthur. The young Gent. was within all day, till evening he visited my Lord W.

Thurs. 24. The Gent. was much better and afternoon was with F. Hescott at his Catechisme. I was afternoon at M^{rs} Smith's. The Esq^r visited by Mons^r de Mordoigh the son of a Conseiller de Ville, y^e best in y^e Towne. I writ to Nurs. & Bart. Chivens.

Frid. 25. Good Friday. I was at Prayers at y^e P.P.J. He received a Letter from His Sister Frances.

Sat. 26. I writ to M^{rs} Frances, and this evening conversed with P. Lynch * at y^e Colledge.

Sund. 27. Easter Day. I was at S^t Thomas church, y^e Parochiall at 8 in y^e morn. Afternoon at y^e Colledge.

Monday 28. We were at Breakfast with L. W. and at night there. M^r Farely told me my Peruke was received at Paris.

Tues. 29. We were with M^{rs} Smith at y^e Colledge where she was not permitted to enter into y^e P.P. side.

Wedn. 30. I gave a supper to my L. W., M^{rs} Smith, her Son, M^r Witherington & M^r Fa. The President Dorsie gave me a visit.

Thurs. 31. It snowed & froze all day (with hayl) so that at night the house was an Inch thick covered with snow. M^r Smith went from hence to Brest, a Guard Marine by name of Stafford (sic). †

Aprill: Friday 1. It froze all night, and the snow continued in y^e fields, notwithstanding the bright sunshine. D^r Gallois gave y^e Esq^r a

* We are not told enough about this Father to identify him with certainty. If he was a member of the Irish Province S.J., he may well have been Marcus Lynch, who was several times rector of the Irish College at Poitiers (Hogan, apud Foley, vii. pt. 2, p. 56).

Sat. 2 April. Was a snowy & very cold day as in Mid Winter. I walkt out to S^t Columba's & visited y^e Church where is a neat Statue of S^t Columb in Pontificalibus.

Sund. 3. M^{rs} Smith went for Paris by y^e way of Orleans. I writ to S^r Henry. And about 2 afternoon L^d Walgrave, M^r Widrington, M^r Acland als Horsey the Esq^r & myself accompanied her & M^r Skelton to Tours, which is 14 Leagues off, in order to see the Country. We came to Lud that night 4 leagues East, & lay at Notre Dame, M^r Bellcrit's, & bespoke a Periwig of M^r Fouchier there. There is a neat Chateau belonging to the Duke de Rochloire, who is now about 42 years old, & has never been in it since he was 8 years old. Yet it is a neat, regular & strong building, well furnisht & a noble wald Park, & good Stables, a very deep ditch Wald without, and a brave home Work (just against the River which runs below it) now made a neat Garden with balustres round it.

Monday 4. We past thro Chateau which is 3 leagues farther, and din'd at Sovigné, a small village belonging to Madame de Valière, as does the noble wood of Beaujour nere it, & the Château of the same name, now given to her daughter who is married to the Prince de Conti. And that night arrived at Tours, 10 leagues from Lude, where we lay at the Galaire royale.

Tuesd. 5. We went about the Towne (M^{rs} Smith leaving us nere 9 ith morne). Saw the noble Mall the length of the Towne, above $\frac{1}{2}$ a league long, just under the Town Walls, South next the Towne, in a strait line. Then we saw their Silk Manufacture, the famous Clock of Tours in the Cathedrall of S^t Gassien. We went up the Towre of it, 300 steps high, and saw all the beautifull situation of the Towne, and fine houses round about. The Scite is extream pleasant, the Towne strait, on the South side of the La Loyre where is an Iland, built from the bridge, which is longer than London bridge. And on the south of y^e Towne, about $\frac{1}{2}$ a league off runs the Charre, a pretty River which often overflows the valley. And therefore there are abundance of noble stone arch bridges of g^t length built over it, till it fals into y^e Loyre, a little below the West end of the Town, and makes the Territory a Peninsule. From the Tower might be seen the fine Chateau of Chaumont nere Blois, on the East, and the Benedictine Monastery of Marmotier, the finest in Europe, on y^e North side of the Loyre. The Cathedrall is a fine old building, and the Quire venerable, the altar closely surrounded with brasse Work. There is about 16 Parishes in the Town & about as many Monasterys in & about it. We cald at the Jesuites & were invited to dinner by P. — but we took horse about 11 and came about 6 at night to the Ecu d'or at Chateau, where we lay. 'Tis a poor Villenie, all in ashes, burnt that day 12 month by an Iron Work that took fire, & there being a g^t wind the fire in 2

* Charles de Laistre, after filling many other posts of authority, became Provincial in 1704, Préposé of the Professed House at Paris in 1711, where he became involved in controversy. The titles of pamphlets are given in Sommervogel, iv. 1384.

houres consumed 50 houses, so swiftly, that the goods were burnt, the Towne being mostly covered with Shingle of Oak, cut like Tyles, cald Bardeaus.

Wed. 6 April. We went in the morn to see the Iron Forge which is very fine, all the bellows & Hammers of 900 weight turnd by Water like an overshot Mill. There is a Verriere not far off, but we went not to see it, but took horse about 11, came to Lud about 4 and din'd, and about 6 took horse for La Flesche where we arrived safe about 9, y^e Esq^r safe and well. †

Apr. Thurs. 7. We visited M^{me} de la Morinée, who was again abroad, le President d'Orsey, Mons^r Biré who was abroad but we saw his Lady, D^r Galloy's daughter. And then we went to walk with L^d W. & M^r Browne.

Friday 8. I received a Letter from S^r Henry, M^{rs} Southwell, Nurse and M^r Paston.

Sat. 9. I visited Mad. de Laund, & P. Daily,* Capuchin. The Esq^r had his cough more than 5 days before.

Sund. 10. I writ to S^r Henry and so did y^e Esq^r in y^e same sheet. In y^e evening he was visited by Mons^r S^t Laurens, M^r Petar, and M^r S^t Jean Chevalier.

Monday 11. M^r Simons & M^r Web, M^r Scroop & M^r Morphe † came to Towne. We walkt out to M^d Lavarin in y^e evening. M^r Nelson began to Dance with M^r de Pré.

Tuesd. 12. I visited P. Hescot, M^r Simons, M^r Scroop & all afternoon was with L^d W.

Wed. 13. I writ to M^r Ja. Eyre to Paris. Visited by P. Clement, Capuch.

Thurs. 14. We were at Cleremont, and entertain'd at y^e Curé's by Mons^r Marsan and by M^r Rosesseville together with M^r Farely, L^d W., M^r Webbe & M^r Morphe. And y^e Esq^r & I sup'd at M^{mm} Exempts.

Frid. 15. I walkt in y^e Even in the P. Garden with M^r Farely.

Satur. 16. I writ to br. Tho. Hunter at Bornhem.

Sunday 17. I writ to M^{rs} Southwell, & that evening was invited to supper at the Colledge by y^e Principall Poirier, with M^r Webb, M^r Morfie, M^r Farely & M^r Paien. ‡ The Esq^r sup'd with my L^d W. Before supper we were in the Pensioner's refectory at a Defension held by M^r Ingram against y^e Principal, ag^t [? Vacuñ].

Monday 18. I was with M^r Browne in y^e Morn at Claremont. I received a Letter from M^r Edward Bedingsfeld, and afternoon I bought Mad. Exempt's daughter's hayr for 2 Lewis, & then M^r Farely, M^r Browne, M^r Ronseville & I went to his brother's vineyard to taste wine, & were there treated. In the way I saw people cutting weeds & Grasse in y^e vineyards for y^e Cattle, which dyed almost for Hungar;

* One would expect this to be the Irish name Daly, but the matter remains doubtful.

† Mr. Webbe was tutor to Simons, and the Abbé Morfin (all possible variants of spelling occur) to Scrope. Master Scrope may have been George, son and heir of Robert Scrope of Cockerington (Payne, 162), or Simon Scrope of Danby, who eventually succeeded in 1723.

‡ The supper was evidently given exclusively to Gouverneurs. Mr. Browne, however, was not there.

the weather was so cold that there was no grasse. And a very sickly time. 3 out of one Family dyed in 8 days.

Tuesd. 19 April. I walkt out with M^r Farely & M^r Browne, and sup't with my L^d Walgrave (M^r Simons, M^r Scrope, M^r Webb, M^r Morphe, M^r Aclande, M^r Browne) & M^r Nelson with me, at M^{rs} Exempt's.

Wedn. 20. We walkt out with M^r Farely and M^r Browne, & took leave of M^r Web and M^r Morfy. M^r Simons and M^r Scroop came 10 at Night to take leave by y^e Esq^r, being in bed I saw them not.

Thursd. 21. We took a breakfast in the Morn, & about 10 my L^d, M^r Farely, M^r Nelson & I went with Guns to Bois des Malades, a noble wood belonging to the Peres, about a League from La Flesche to y^e North West, where I drank as good red wine for 3 halfpence a Quart as ever I tasted, & Cyder at 1 Penny. About y^e half way was a pretty village called Verron.

This day the Esq^r shot first a Gun off 3 or 4 times very regularly.

Frid. 22. I received a Letter from M^{rs} Margaret Bedingfeld. Afternoon M^r Ferely, M^r Browne & I walkt to Basouche, a neat scituate village by the Le Loyre, and a g^t many houses all of stone, but the most miserable ruinous one that I ever saw. Scarce a house that is not ready to tumble, or looks as if the people were running away; not a person with a healthfull, jolly look, but clad as if they could not spare for cloaths out of their food. There is a neat outside of a Chateau by y^e river, but as ruinous within as y^e rest of houses. Nothing is neat but y^e Priests' house, which is indeed neat, joly & (almost) stately, the Cure worth about 1000*l*. p. an. And there is a neat Garden, & we were there. Ciuilly entertained with Wine. 'Tis about 4 English miles or a League & $\frac{1}{2}$ from La Flesche.

Sat. 23. We were at Bois des Malades, S^t George's Day where we bought an Excellent Pipe of Wine (2 of our hogsheads) for 23 livres, laid into y^e sellar (The Tax of 18 sous & carriage 40^s payd by y^e seller) so y^t y^e Pint (our Quart) cost not above 1 sol. I visited P. Hestcot & y^e Principal Poirier.

Sunday 24. The Esq^{rs} birthday, and he Received ✠ * . . . I writ to M^{rs} Marg^t Bedingfeld, to Nurs, M^{rs} Smith. At night he gave a Gouté to L^d W.

Aprill 25. S^t Mark $\frac{1}{2}$ congé. M^r Nelson had a Letter from M^r Smith (Stafford) from Brest, & I had one from M^{rs} Frances from Bourbrock. I payd M^r Rousseville for 1 Quarter's board for us, & took his acquittance to y^e 29 Instant.

Tuesd. 26. I was onely in the even with M^r Farely. This day M^r Henry Waldgrave went first to Classe.

Wed. 27. I was visited by Mons^r Ribote, Cadet of a — of this Towne. I writ to M^r Paston. I walkt out to y^e Abbé's a League & $\frac{1}{2}$ off, towards Basuche.

Thurs. 28. This day at Noon & the sun shined, it snowed & was a terrible cold day. We walkt out with M^r Napier,* M^r Preston,† my L^d W. &c.

* This sign presumably stands for Holy Communion.

Frid. 29 April. A bitter cold day with som Rayn. I was to visit P. Clement Cap., & gave him his books he lent me.

Sat. 30. I writ to M^r Ed. Bedingfeld. M^r Farely, M^r Browne & I we were at Mariné in the Evening.

Sund. May 1. S^t Phill & J. I did my ✠‡ at y^e P.J. and was with Père Lynch at y^e Filles Penitentes. Afternoon with L^d W. at y^e Lyon D'or. Mons^r de Pré sup'd with us.

Mond. 2. We intended to visit Madame Lavarin, but we were hindered by the Raine.

Tuesd. 3. It raynd much last night, and all the Morning & Afternoon without Intermission. Invention of y^e H. Crosse; it was a congé. We were visited by the Curé whose name is Mons^r de S——, he was a Councillour, and had divers Children. And when his wife dyed, he made himself Priest. And 4 of his sons enterd into Religion, 3 into Regular houses, the 4th a Secular Priest; & of 3 daughters, 1 became a Nun, at whose profession he sang high Masse. And his Dæcon, Subdiacon & Acolythe were his 3 sons, brothers to y^e Nonne. The Curé is now stone blinde, & has been this 4 year, is 74 years old, yet seems not above 55 (onely for his blindness).

Wed. 4. A very wet day all day. I was visited by P. Clem. Capuchin, but missing me at home, he went to D^r Farely's & there I found him. M^r H. W. was very ill this day of his Physick.

Thursd. 5. Ascension Day. We were afternoon at the Pères, and then walkt out. At Night my L^d W., his broth., M^r Widrington & Governour past the evening with us. A very wet day.

Frid. 6. A very wet day. We visited Madame Lavarin & her Mother the Countesse de Tesse, & were at the President du Roy's. I had a Letter from Sir Hen. B.

Sat. 7. A very wet & cold day. I writ to M^r Hen. Eyre § about his bond which he took from M^r Bed. and about returning me 100 li. Afternoon I visited Mons^r Dursy President, Mons^r —— L'avocat du Roy.

Sond. 8. It rayn'd againe. We were in y^e Evening after a walk at y^e Lyon D'or.

* This Master Napier afterwards (18th June) appears with the second name (and presumably the true name) Neville, and this double name enables us to make a shrewd guess at his identification. It was not uncommon for Catholics to take their mother's name as an alias. It would probably protect them against most informers, but would be intelligible to friends and relatives. Now, Henry Nevill of Holt, co. Leicester, married Margaret Napier of Holywell, Oxon., and they had two sons. George, the elder of these, was afterwards a lunatic; the second was Thomas (C.R.S., i. 137). The boy here mentioned may have been the second son (on whom see Payne, p. 72), or even the elder, if he was then of sane mind.

† This Preston appears afterwards with the second name, presumably the true name, Molineux (June 3, 1702). But without his Christian name it seems difficult to fix his identity among the many young Catholics of that family. Perhaps it was William, son of Richard, the fifth viscount, who died before his father, in 1706, and whose mother was a sister of the Lord Brudenell, whom we shall meet on the 13th of September.

‡ ✠ here stands for Holy Communion.

§ Henry Eyre, presumably the son of Thomas Eyre of Hassop and Mary Bedingfeld. He was "counsellor at law," and was admitted to Gray's Inn, 6th September, 1696 (Payne, Engl. Cath. Nonjurors, p. 34).

Mond. 9 May. Was a wet morn. Afternoon M^r Farely & I were treated with good Red Wine by Mons^r Le hay. I payd my washwoman Mad^m Boular.

Tuesd. 10. Was a Cloudy Morn, but y^e afternoon good. I walkt an hour with M^r Farley & M^r Browne.

Wed. 11. Was a good day till towards even it raynd. I walkt out in the evening.

Thurs. 12. Congé. We were at Créant, a little Village a League off, where is an old Chateau belonging to the Prince of Condé, finely situate by the River. We were entertaind at the Curé's, brother to Mons^r Robiniere (Exempt). The weather now first began to be hott & now I observed first all the walnut trees to be blasted.

Frid. 13. I received a visit from the Advocate du Roy of this Towne La Flesche. I writ to S^r Hen. Bed., & y^e Esq^r also. In y^e even I was with M^r Farely at Mons^r de Hay's.

Sat. 14. The Esq^r writ to his Father in my letter of yesterday which I send to Morrow. A good hot day; we were at Vespers at y^e Pères & the Esq^r at Conf. to P. Lynch.

Sund. 15. Whitsonday. The Esq^r Com. at y^e Jes.

Mond. 16. In the evening at a Comedy where we saw a Man play on the Musick in all Postures & some notable agility of body. I received a Letter from M^r Harnage.

Tuesd. 17. I was at President Dussey's, who offerd to board us for 400*l.* [per] an. a piece. Then with L^d W. we went to visit Marquis Tessé, & after walkt to Mariné.

Wed. 18. I writ to M^r Harnage.

Thursd. 19. We were visited by the 2 young Mes^{rs} Grey * & afternoon we were with the L^d W. a walking.

Frid. 20. I received a Letter from S^r Henry & from M^{rs} Southwell.

Sat. 21. M^r Farely was not well, and the Marquis de Tessé designing to hunt y^e Stag, L^d W. was design'd to go with him, & therefore M^r Farely desired me to go with my L^d in his stead. But we being ready, the Marquis changed his minde. So we went to see Baugé a wald Towne 4 leagues from La Flesche. It is a pretty Vill, old Walls & Gates, 1 Parish Church (S^t Laurens) a neat Hospitall of S^t Joseph for men on one side, and women on y^e other. And out of Towne a neat Convent of Capuchins, in whose Garden under a Quadrant was this significant Motto. Vulnerant omnes, una necat. There is also an old neglected Castle in y^e Towne.

Sund. 22. I writ a Letter to S^r Henry, principally about y^e affair of y^e P[resident] Dur[sey].

Mond. 23. We had an account of K[ing] W[illiam] being desperately sick, and that Jamaco was almost destroyed by an Earthquake. M^r Browne visited us & Doctor B.

Tuesd. 24. We prepared for our Journey to Angers.

* We afterwards hear that their names were William and Edward, and their title Powis (June 1, 1702). They will therefore have been William Herbert, afterwards third Marquis and fourth Lord Powis. Edward was eventually to marry Henrietta, a sister of Lord Waldegrave, and their daughter Barbara was to marry Henry, seventh Lord Herbert of Chisbury, for whom the Earldom of Powis would be renewed after the death of William without issue.

Wed. 25 May. We were ready to take horse by 4 in y^e Morn (with L^d Waldgrave, M^r Widdrington, M^r Farely) but it rayned so we stayed till 5. At Basouche it rayned againe a Shour. Then we past by Durtail, a neat Village & pretty Castle, a very neat Churchyard, 3 Leagues from La Flesche. By 9 we got to Souet, 6 Leagues off, where we stay'd & reposed an hour & $\frac{1}{2}$, then past by Viné, a neat Castle & Park belonging to the Duke of de — and by 12 arrived at Angers y^e Capital of Anjou, a neat City on y^e South of the Mayenne, which receives le Loyre about a League from y^e Towne. Built on a hill mostly Rock of Ardois, where is an old Castle still kept in some repayre, the Ditch the deepest & broadest in France (as said). There we saw the Iron Cage (or Cachot) where y^e Queen of Sicily was 14 years kept prisoner. There are now in the Castle some Prisoners of State, particularly some of the Women accused of Poysoning. The Castle is built on a high rock of Ardois. The streets are narrow, & not very Comodious. There are about 8 Parish Churches, but a great many Convents. The Mail is neat for walking, near a Mile Long. There is a Presidial. The Cathedral is of S^t Maurice, a Noble Structure & high Vaulted Roof, but no Pillars in it. The Dome is of about 230 steps high, and there is one Bell called y^e Great Guilhome, one of the biggest in France. Berengarius, one of the first Sacramentarians, was Arch Diacre here. And to repayre his Error was Instituted the most solemne Procession in all France upon Corpus Xti day, when all the Corps of y^e Citty go in order with Torches from the Cathedrall to S^t Trinity Churchyard, where the Heretick used to Preach, & where is erected a Stone Pulpit about 6 steps from y^e Ground, and a Chappel by it to repose y^e B. Sacrament, while a Sermon is there Preached. We lodged at y^e Grand Lowis, a good house.

Thursd. 26. We were at 7 at Mass at y^e Dominicans, and then went to a house prepared to see y^e Procession which began before 7 with 12 Pageants of History in large Wax Work, but too Romantick for so August a Solemnity. And after them all the bodys of y^e Citty, the Physicians, Prevosty, the Conseillers in scarlet (about 30). Then the Religious orders, then y^e Clergy, then the Venerable under a Dais, on the shoulders of 2 Priests, &c. Their going from & returning to y^e Cathedrall lasted till 2 & $\frac{1}{2}$. Then nere 4 in the afternoon began y^e high Mass, which we heard in the Gallery over the Quire by favour, or else y^e Crowd was so great y^e heat would be In-supportable. At 5 it was finishd, & then we went up into the Dome. We dined with L^d Melford his Lady & 2 Sons & 2 Daughters, M^r Cannon, 2 M^r Littletons, Sir Adam Blayr & his Son, but at y^e Cost of M^r Fagon, an Irish Gent, D^r of y^e Laws, who is marryed to a French Woman & lives there. A most civil, worthy Gent.*

Frid. 27. About 10 we took horse, and went about a League off to y^e Ardoisery, which is a work not much unlike our Coal Mines. There weré about 200 Men at Work, about 16 horses constantly employed by turnes at 3 wheels, one to draw Water out of y^e Pump, & 2 to draw up the Ardois. The work was about 80 foot square, & 130 deep. And there they cut out Tables of y^e Rock which drawn up they split with a Mallet & Chizel to the thinness of a Sous marqué, & then on a block cut them square with ease. The largest squares about the length of our Tyles, & double their breadth, & Sell them at y^e Pitt about 25 Livres the Thousand. Then we went to Pont de Cé (about 1 League to y^e West) which is, in bridge and Island, $\frac{1}{2}$ a League in length. But there are 2 Parishes in 2 of y^e Islands of good bigness. The bridge they say was built by Cæsar, has been noble, now decayed, & almost all y^e Arches covered with Planks. It is built over y^e La Loyre, wh. is bounded on y^e South West side by a very high rock. About a League farther North West at a Land called La Poynt, the River Le Loyre running from La Flesche, Angers &c. meets & joyns La Loyre, & so goes to Nantes. We returned by 4 to Angers, & then went to y^e Fayr kept in the Town house, a Paultry kind of Bawble shops, but the horse & Cow Fayr was very full & Large. We invited M^r Fagon & his Lady to Supper. And S^r Ad. Blayr & his son visited us.

* John Drummond, first Earl of Melford, 1686, is said at this time to have been here in exile from St. Germain. His second wife was Euphemia, daughter of Sir Thomas Wallace of Craigie, and by her he had six sons and several daughters (D.N.B., xvi. 36).

Saturd. 28. We went to Prayers at S^t Maurice, & then visited L^d Melf. & S^r Ad. Bl. And then went to y^e Fayr, and about 11 took horse, got by 3 to Sonnet, where we stayd above an hour. And after we past by Basouche, we visited Abbé Farpan at y^e Abbey of Cré, wh. is a pretty antient Abbey of Benedictines formerly, now reduced to a Sine Cure, & the Abbé lives a good, merry, hospitable life, & treated us civilly; & by 8 we got all well home ✠* where I found 2 Letters, one from M^r Ja. Eyre, and one from M^r Tho. Hunter from Louvaine.

Sond. 29 May. The Esq^r very well after his Journey tho' he rid from Angers & to it, wh. is 10 leagues from hence this last week, & rid about 5 leagues another day to see the Countrey. We walkt out in ye Evening & visited M^r Scroope & M^r Morfé who arrived on Friday.

Mond. 30. M^r Morfee visited us. I went with M^r Farelly to see M^r Hescot by chance; and M^r Hescot had just received a Letter from M^r Plowden, desireing him to tell me he had 373 li. 3 s. 6 den., to pay to my order at sight. So I got F. Mouchet immediately to signe a bill upon him to save the losse that y^e first of July falls on Monday [sic], 10d. per Lewis d'or.

Tues. 31. I writ to M^{rs} Southwell about y^e money afore mentioned.

Wedn. June 1. I writ to M^r Charles Bedingfeld and in the same I writ to Nurse Masterson. M^r Cotton & his Governor M^r ——— came to La Flesche from Angers, & stayed but that night.

Thurs. 2. We visited Mons^r de Lajule, the best Gent in La Flesche.

Frid. 3. We went to y^e Capucins' Garden. I took some Syr. Spin. Cerv.

Sat. 4. Was y^e anniversary of Hen. 4. where in the Jes. Church (founded by him) was a fine Mausolœum, & a Funerall Oration & Requiem, and a solemne procession &c.

Sond. 5 June. Was the first time of P. La Ferte's preaching here, after his disgrace. A most excellent orator.*

Mond. 6. I took again some Syr. Spin. Cerv. which wrought well.

Tuesd. 7. I writ to M^r James Eyre & to M^r Paston, Ben[edictine].

Wed. 8. I was not out but at my Lord's with Abbé —.

Thursd. 9. We visited President D'orsey, but he & his Lady were abroad. We saw his sister & kinswoman. It was a very wet day.

Frid. 10. I received a Letter from Sir H. B. Very wet weather.

Sat. 11. Very wet weather still. We carry'd my Lord &c., to see y^e English Mare, that shew'd many tricks. Among others she knew y^e 24 Letters that were writ in Plates before her, and would shew any letter call'd for, & knew all y^e Cards.

Sond. 12. We were Invited to y^e Ænigmas & affiches at y^e College, where were 3 Pictures handsomely declaim'd on. The first was the Enigma described in these words. [Three lines left blank.] & the Meaning was Locutio. The second picture was of our Saviour in y^e desert serv'd by Angels under a Tree, where was made an Elegant speech in praise of y^e CORTEX and good Cheer. The 3^d was y^e Picture of y^e Annunciation, where was discours'd about Secretum, the use of Silence &c. There were 5 youths declaim'd. It held about 2 heures.

Mond. 13. The Esq^r had many Pimples came out, and we feared the Measles. I shew'd them to D^r G[alloys] and he gave him some Carduns water & Viper powder to fetch them out, if they were anything Inciduous. We heard of y^e Duke of Orleans' death at S^t Clou the 10 Instant.

Tuesd. 14. The last Night & this Morn he took some of y^e Powder to procure a little sweat; but nothing came out. But I kept him from Schole, & the Doctor came morn, noon & night to see him.

June 15, Wed. The D^r came this Morn, and found y^e Esq^r well, no Feavour, so that he concluded all but an Ebullition of blood, so advis'd onely to keep him from evenings walking out & from Milk. I intended to write to S^r Henry, & dated my Letter to-day, & the Esq^r to write also, and both of us writ and sent them.

Thursd. 16. M^r Atland went for Angers. L^d W. &c. accompanied him to Vergier. We visited Mad. de Morinée, and walkt out with M^r Browne.

Frid. 17. I received a Letter from S^r Henry about Pr[es.] Durs[ey].

Sat. 18. M^r Napier (alias Nevel) took his leave of us, & went for Paris. I writ to Louvaine to br. Tho. Hunter, & M^{rs} Frances Bed.

Sund. 19. The Esq^r took Physick. The D^r came afternoon to see him, as did L^d W. &c.

Mond. 20. We walkt in y^e Evening, and that night the Esq^r cough'd exceedingly. I bought my Cloath of M^r Ruseville.

Tuesd. 21. Pr. of Wales birthday, a Congé. The Esq^r writ L^d Walgr.

Wedns. 22. I writ to M^r Eyres & M^r Edw. Bed. in one Letter.

Thurs. 23. Was a schole day, because to Morrow is S^t John's day. We were to see F. Clement Cap. who was going to leave this place to live at Croisic between Nantes & Brest.

* See Jan. 25, above. There is no mention of his troubles before 1701 in Sommervogel.

Frid. 24 June. I received a Letter from S^r Henry with one from my Lady to M^r Nelson with a present.

Sat. 25. We walkt (M^r Br. & M^r Fa) in y^e Preluno.

Sund. 26. We walkt with M^r Scroop.

Mond. 27. We were invited to M^r Ingram's Defension of his Philosophie, & were presented with his & his Socius' Thesis. He defended with great applause. All our English Neighbours were there, & his first opponent was F — an Irish Professor Theol.

Tuesd. 28. Was fast day & the Eue of S^t Peter, the feast of y^e Esqr.'s Regent, & he presented y^e Regent with a neat Bouquet.

Wed. 29. We with my L^d W. walkt to Verron & had a Gouté.

Thursd. 30. I was to visit M^r President D'orsey & agreed with him. M^r Nelson took my Watch & gave me in present but 2 Twenty shillings pieces of Gold with promise if I live to see him in his Estate to give me another Watch.

Frid. July 1. We walkt by y^e River this evening. I received a letter from M^{rs} Frances Bed. who is againe at Dunkerque.

Sat. 2. It thundered in the Morn, yet we had no rayne till a while after. M^r Littleton, Sir Charles' son came to La Flesche & was entertained by L^d W. & visited by us.

Sund. 3. I writ to S^r Henry. M^r Littleton, having seen what y^e Towne afforded, went for Angers at 2 afternoon.

Mond. 4. I received a Letter from Nurse in which was one from M^r Cha[rles],* M^r Martin, and from M^{rs} Margaret to her brother & from N. to him. It came opened. At night with M^r Scroop.

Tuesd. 5. Was a Congé. We we:e in y^e Afternoon with my L^d.

Wed. 6. I took a little Pastill of y^e Apothecary, which was said to be extraordinary, and I did it, in order to see if the Esquire should take it on occasions, and it wrought well, but next day I feared an excoriation, and also the third day, so as by no means I should permit him to take it.

July 7. This day my Lord W., M^r Scroop & his Governor Morfin & we went for diversion to Sablé, a pretty old Ville wal'd round, seated on the River Sart, which runs into Le Loire at Angers. The place is but small. There is an old Castle in it that has been strong, & is very high on a Rock commanding the River but now of no use. This Towne is eminent for the best Leathers in Oyl & Bucks skins. About half a League to the left hand coming home, we were to y^e Abbay of Saint Sairnclaism,† of S^t Bennit's order to see y^e fine antient pieces of Statuary, of which there are several of the Passion &c. These we saw, and kist one of the holy Thornes of our Lord's Crowne. We returned that night.

Frid. 8. I received a Letter from S^r Henry. I visited F. Hescot & M^r Ingram, & President Dorsey.

Sat. 9. I was visited by Abbé Morfin, & Invited to Sup^r next Tuesd., and in the evening I went to see them bleech Wax, but came too late.

* This must be Charles Bedingfeld, and as his letter comes with Nurse Masterson's, and as Marwood too writes to him in same cover as to Nurse, we gather that he lived at or near Oxburgh.

† This is evidently Solesmes, though Marwood missed the name.

Sond. 10 July. We were at y^e Sermon; the Esq^r writ to his grandm[other] & Aunt Ayres.*

Mond. 11. I received a letter from R. P. Geor. Hunter, & I payd the Tayler & M^r Ronseville all bills.

Tuesd. 12. I was invited to sup at Tronsiere with M^r Scroope & M^r Morphy, but refused it for y^e Esq^r's sake, it being so hot, & would be late home.

Wedns. 13. I writ to P. Pr. Hunter & Nurse.

Tuesd. 2. I writ to Sir Hen. Bed., and M^r Nelson writ in y^e same. I sharply demanded of Ab. Villebreuil a little debt he ow'd. The Esq^r & Lord W. playd with our L. Lady.

* The Dowager Lady Bedingfeld died Jan. 14/25, 1703. See 16th February. Aunt Ayres (note the spelling) was Mary Bedingfeld, wife of Thomas Eyre of Hassop.

Wed. 3 Aug. Was a fine day; we walkt in y^e even with L^d W.

Thurs. 4. We went all y^e afternoon a shooting at Biré, L^d W. &c. and Abbé Villebreuille with us. Saw some partridges but shot but one.

Frid. 5. At home all day till after Sup^r.

Sat. 6. It raynd. M^r Ingram went for Paris by Coach.

Sund. 7. I was with P. Lynch. I writ to M^{rs} Southwell. That night supt here Mons^r Aumon & his Lady, that live by Saumur, & invited us to their house. L. W. &c. here till 10.

Mond. 8. Was a wet day. We stird not but to my L^d.

Tues. My L^d & I we went to finde some Partridge at night.

Wed. 10. S^t Laurens. We were in the Morn at y^e Filles Pénitentes, & afternoon at y^e Costeau, kild a Perdreau & a Tourter. This day Mons^r Crochiniere, a Man that had purchased g^t Employes & was Secretary to the King of France, borne in this Towne, & come downe in his coach to see his Mother, made a donation of all his places (but one that he reserv'd to sell, to give the house he went to &c.) left his coach, and having heard Mass at 4 in the Morn, took Post for Paris, to enter into Religion, not acquainting anybody with it, tho' he had his Mother, brother & friends & Servants here. His Father was but an ordinary Gent, but remarkable in all these parts for his care of the Poor, so that he, in a scarcity of bread, has been known to relieve 500 poor in a day (but this was by money he begd for them as well as his own) & 2 dayes in the week he constantly relieved a g^t many. His sons (of which he left 5) are all hopefull and thriving Gent. This was likely to be a very great Man. 'Tis thought his resolution for retiring was either taken up or confirmed by this strange accident. One of his Acquaintance y^t that was growing great in the World, as he was, had bought a Countrey house, made fine additions to it, Furnish't it curiously with fine Paintings, & just finish't it, Takes this Gent. with him to shew it him, & having just shewd him all the beautys of it, fell down dead at his Feet.

Thurs. 11. Was a wet morn. We stir'd not out.

Sat. 10. Mons^r D'Orsey presented M^r Nelson to M^d L'Intendante & her Son who was mightily pleas'd with him. I was at Bois de Giury with L^d W.

Sund. 11. ✠ at the P. Jes. P. Lynch. The Intendant went for Lud this afternoon.

Mond. 12. M^r Nelson composed for his Ascendat. I accompanied L^d W. to meet his Cozen who came not.

Tuesd. 13. The afternoon M^r Nelson had his Congé for Vacation, & we went with my L^d a shooting to Biré, and at our Returne found

* It appears, from what follows, that the prohibition was against accompanying Lord Waldegrave on his summer riding tour. In other respects the Bedingfeld and Waldegrave family parties keep company with one another just as before.

M^r Chr. Walgrave, Lord Brudenal,* his brother & Governor M^r Cuffand arrived.

Wed. 14 Sept. We were all at Mad^m Lavarine's. Walkt & at Biliardes.

Thurs. 15. I was with M^r Nelson to take his leave of his Regent, Mons^r D'orival, who goes for Paris, and gave me a good character of M^r N. & of his merit to y^e 4th Class. Afternoon I was at L^d W. & talkt with M^r Cuffand. And in the Even L^d Brudenal, his brother, M^r Cuffand, L^d W., M^r Widdrington, M^r C. Return'd in the evening by Lashay a fine village, almost ruin'd by y^e Hugonotes leauing it. Pinshé, a fine village, Chateau Griland, a pretty seat.

Sund. 18. M^r Widdrington (& M^r Preston) went for Paris. I, L^d W., M^r Farely, M^r Rebot & Abbé Vilbrule accompanied him to Guéselar where (at y^e 3 Kings) we din'd & at 3 & $\frac{1}{2}$ parted and were at home by 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ tho' 6 good Leagues of France. In the Mid Way is the Fine Abbaye of S^t Martine la Fontaine, one of the most celebrated Nunneries of France.

Mond. 19. We had the News that K[ing] J[ames] dyed the 16 Instant, at about 4 afternoon and that his body was ordered to be deposited with the English Monkes at Paris till he should be buryed with his ancestors.

Tuesd. 20. L^d Walgrave, M^r Farely, L^d Brudenal, and his brother, M^r Cuffand, their Governor, M^r Francis Waldgrave went for Angers to make their Tour. M^r Henry Waldg. left at home. M^r Browne & his 2 Gents, M^r Tho. & M^r Isaac Gage (Dons) gave us a visit, and with them & M^r Hen. Wald. we walkt in the Evening to a Garden where I bought 13 Peches for 4 sous, and saw the largest Palourde (the best sort of Citroul or Courge which we call Pomkin) I ever saw—red streaks with white, & that weighd about 20 pounds, yet valued at about 8 sous.

Wedn. 21. We walkt afternoon with M^r Browne &c., and I took M^r H. Wald. with us. I visited P. Hescote & had some Words with him about y^e Pretence of being shewd y^e Esq^{rs} theme.

§ 8.—THE SECOND YEAR AT LA FLÈCHE

At the beginning of the second year of the Esquire's course at school it may be well to form some idea of the company amid which he lived. It has already been seen that the number of English boys was very considerable, more than twenty in all, besides those who, though only travellers, would in passing have contributed something to the formation of young Henry's mind.

The most constant companion was James, Lord Waldegrave. The families of both belonged to the county of Norfolk.* His great-grand-mother, Anne Paston, was sister of the Esquire's grandmother Margaret. Until the last generation the balance of social prestige had stood even between them. But the Waldegrave heir had married an illegitimate offspring of royalty, and had therefore been "ennobled." Still he remained true to the Stuarts after their fall, and his son James, the present Lord, who had lost his father when he was but four, seems to have been a good fellow, though rather too fond of amusement. We hear a good deal of his prowess in sport, and once he kills a wolf (20th November 1702); but, of course, Marwood was charmed when the Esquire, though some five years his junior, "wiped his eye" when out shooting (8th November 1701).

We cannot but remember the terrible apostasy of his later years, but there is no sign of anything of the sort in the period under our notice. He goes to Mass with the Esquire (8th January 1702), and brings him home a relic as a present (11th September 1702), while Mr. Nelson stands "parrain" to his brother Henry when the latter was confirmed at Mans (11th April 1702). Mr. Farely, his gouverneur (called "Dr." 4th May 1701), was a priest (25th August 1702), and Marwood praised him as "a most obliging gent."

The first English boy to leave school after the arrival of the Esquire was one Smith. His mother was living in the town to look after him, and, woman-like, she once endeavours, but in vain, to make her way into "the PP. side" of the College, i.e. the Fathers' quarters. Colonel Skelton accompanied them. This youth left school to enter, as it seems, into the French navy under the name Stafford (27th January to 31st March 1701). It may not be impossible to identify him, but the use of aliases, and the almost entire absence of Christian names, makes this so difficult that I have had to abandon the investigation, both in this and in many similar cases. Occasionally one can make an identification through the practice of using the mother's name as an alias, as in the case of Thomas Nevill of Holt (28th April 1701). But the prudent editor must resign himself, under these circumstances, to making many confessions of doubt.

An interesting but puzzling pair of brothers are Thomas and Jos. (previously called Isaac) Donne, vere Gage. There are a considerable number of data for their identification (3rd March 1701), and they may be Thomas and William, the sixth and seventh Baronets Gage of Firle, but only on condition that both our baronetages and our Marwood are more fallible than one quite likes to believe. Yet there seem to have been only two other Catholic families of Gage, who could have afforded so expensive an education, those of Hengrave and Harleston (Payne, Catholic Non-jurors, p. 380), and they had then no children to send (John Gage, History of Hengrave, 1822, p. 240).

Another identification impossible, for the want of a Christian name, is "the new-come English gent, who calls himself St. George, brother of Lord Sussex" (12th September 1702; cf. 6th October, 7th November). Thomas Lennard, fourteenth Baron Dacre of the South, had two brothers, both of whom died before him. Which of these two visited La Flèche in 1702, 1703, does not appear. He seems to have been too old to attend the College courses.

We are on firm ground in regard to "the two Greys." Here we have the Christian names, William and Edward, and Powis, the title (1st June 1702). They seem to have been very young, and had a governess, Mlle. Chupot (14th September 1702), as well as a gouverneur, who, as we see (26th December 1701), was Father Thomas Hesketh, an English Jesuit.

William Herbert succeeded in 1745 as third Marquess and fourth Earl of Powis, but died unmarried in 1748. His brother, Lord Edward, in 1734, married Henrietta, the only daughter of our Lord Waldegrave, and died soon after. The title was thus extinct. But the earldom was revived in favour of the husband of Edward's posthumous daughter Barbara—i.e. Henry Lord Herbert of Chisbury.

Lord Brudenal and his brother James, with their gouverneur, Mr. Cuffand, came, under the guidance of Francis (at first called Christopher) Waldegrave, a cousin of Lord James, at the beginning of the long vacation, 13th September 1701, perhaps to see Preston, vere Molyneux, who may have been their cousin (28th April 1701), but they were on their travels, and, though they passed through twice, they did not stay long. This lord apostatised in later years.

Mr. Widdrington was probably Charles, the second brother of the fourth Lord Widdrington, but the absence of the Christian name again prevents our being certain (27th January 1701). The name of his gouverneur is also omitted (5th May 1701).

Mr. Scrope, under the Abbé Morfin (whose name takes every possible shape between that and Murphy), may have belonged to the Danby or to the Cockerington family of that name. In the same way Mr. Hyde, who came on a week's visit only, with Mr. Matson as his gouverneur and Mr. Arundel as his guide (22nd to 29th December 1701), might be Francis or John, the descendants of Lord Cottington, the well-known minister of Charles I.

The mutability of principle among the Lyttletons of Frankley, Worcester (26th May and 2nd July 1701), affords an instructive contrast to the steadfastness of the family we are studying. Sir Charles, the father of the boys whom Marwood met, had played a very distinguished part in the Civil Wars, and at the Revolution held resolutely aloof from King William. But his son Thomas, who may have been at La Flèche with the Esquire in 1702, and who succeeded in 1716, took the oaths, entered Parliament, and became a statesman of some importance. His son George played a part still less worthy of his grandfather, and still more successful from a worldly point of view. He began by throwing up all belief, became a violent opponent of Walpole, and an extravagant partisan of the then Prince of Wales, through whose favour, when on the throne, he became Chancellor of the Exchequer and Baron Lyttleton. By that time he had become a somewhat fanatical Low Churchman, and in this mood we shall meet with him again.

Browne (called Farmer Browne, 10th October 1702, and afterwards Farmer [? Fermor]) and Simons, who were there under tutors called Dod, Webbe, and Bourgeois, as well as Cotton, Atland (otherwise Horsey), Bolser or Butler, Galloway, and Hales, have so far eluded identification. So has Braithwaite, whose career, however, is worth following, as he seems to have been the only instance we meet of a boy who was educationally a failure. He gets into scrapes on every possible occasion, and has eventually to leave under a cloud.

Two older youths, Ingram and Fermor, seem to have been following courses of Philosophy. Note should be paid to the various tutors. On the 17th of April 1701 a supper was given at the College to Marwood, Morfin, Farely, Païen, Webb. Later on a dinner was given to "PP." Lynch, Kirwin, Browne, Hescott (17th March 1702). These seem to be the English priests about the College. But Browne is nowhere distinctly called a priest.

Marwood and the Esquire seem to have met, not unfrequently, with distinguished Frenchmen of all sorts.

They were only twice thrown in with pronounced Jacobites, and that was during their sojourn in May 1701 and October 1702 at Angers, where Lord Melford was living; it is said in exile from St. Germain. With him were his second wife and some of his many children; also some Jacobite friends, Sir Adam Blair and his son, two sons of Sir Charles Lyttleton, Mr. Canon, Mr. Constable, and Mr. Wauchope.

Upon the whole, though we cannot identify half the boys with certainty, we can see that they represented all those grades of social life amid which a boy of good family should be educated.

Another topic deserving of attention is furnished by the long and short tours, generally made on horseback, by little groups of boys with their tutors. The first of these was directed to Angers, for the Fête Dieu, which was kept there, with special solemnity, as an act of reparation for the heresy preached there by Berengarius (24th to 28th May 1701). There was a short ride to Sablé (7th July 1701), to Lud (17th August), but Sir Henry Bedingfeld would not allow his son to join Lord Waldegrave in the long tour from 20th September to 16th October (see Sep. 2 and note). On the 18th of October, the last day of the vacation, there was an expedition to Malicorne.

Next year, 1702, expeditions were made on a larger scale. During the Easter holidays the Waldegraves and Bedingfelds rode to Mont St. Michel in Normandy, a trip of some fourteen days. At Whitsuntide a shorter trip to Saumur, Chinon, Richelieu (3rd to 10th June). In the autumn a visit to a French nobleman, Mons. de la Borde, at La Grifférie (15th to 25th September), and another ride to Angers (10th to 15th October). Cf. p. 159.

Wed. 5. Began a Jubilé. I writ to M^r Morphy & to M^r Paston ab^t M^r Nelson's watch. It snowed and froze today.

Thursd. 6. I had a letter from M^r Paston that he had sent the Watch. M^r Nelson walkt out with his Gun. It snowed & was a bitter Cold day, & a g^t north wind. I re^{cd} M^r Nelson Watch today.

Frid. 7. I was onely wth M^r Farelly being a Tempestuous day.

Sat. 8. Pere Mouchet pay^d me 154 Livres in eleven Lewis d'ors.

Sond. 9. We made our Easter at S^t Thomas.

Mond. 10. L^d Walgrave his brother, M^r Farelly, M^r Nelson & I began our Journey to Mans where we Arrived at Night, lay at ye Grand Place & visited ye Bishop of Ossery M^r ——* who gave us a fine Collation.

Tuesd. 11. After Mass M^r Henry Wal. was Confirmed by ye B. of Os. M^r Nelson was his Parreine; & then we Visited the Bishop of Mans, Mon^{sr} Tressain, who received us kindly shew^d us his Chappel (w^{ch} is a fine Dome & the Modell whence all ye fine Domes of Paris were taken) & we had his Coach to See the rest of ye Towne. We visited the Abbé of S^t Vincent an Antient fabrick, & now New building after a Stately Man^r; the Stair case is very Curious; And the half of ye Fabrick now new built is very Fine. Next ye Priory of Couture where we were treated handsomely by the Interest of L^d Ossery, who lives in one of their houses. And the Pryor Maur Andreu gave us Recommendations to Don Joseph Miniac, Prieur of Mont S^t Michel, and to —— Prieur of ye Benedictines at S^t Malo. We saw also the Seminary a fine new building & had the Bishop of Mans Coach to attend us.

Wed. 12. At 11 in the Morn we set out of Mans for Alençon the first Towne of Normandy where we Arrived at 7 evening, 10 Leagues. Bayted at Beaumont 6 Leagues from Mans.

Thursd. 13. We left Alençon w^{ch} is an Old Ville but has nothing curious in it. The Maison de Guise being an Irregular tho Modern building, & Bayted at Pré 4 Leagues & at Night arrived at Coutern 4 leagues more; w^{ch} is a poor Village & made us a poor Reception.

Frid. 14. We set out in the Morn & by 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ or 1 came to Barenton w^{ch} is 8 Leagues passing by Domfront an old fortified Ville, well Situate on a hill; and after dinner rid 6 Leagues to Ducé, where we were well Lodged & entertained, & went thence to

Sat. 15. Courti, 3 Leagues, where we took a Guide to Mont S^t Michel, nere a League in the Sea, first Visiting the Salines, where they make White Salt by an Infusing fresh Water on a bed of the Sea Sand & then after 10 heures boyling that Water to a White Salt. Two Persons in ye 24 heures will make 5 boiseau, And the Price of One boiseau and a half is pay^d daily to the King, whether they Work or not. So that they Work night & day Never letting the fire out, but ab^t once in 15 dayes for 12 heures. We arrived at Mont S^t Michael ab^t 12 or

* According to Gams, the Bishop of Ossory from 1689 to 1711 was James Phelan.

1 o'clock, & lodged at ye Chapeau Rouge, and were kindly received by D. Jos Miniac, P. Pellis & P. Mercier a most Ingenious Man, who Shew^d us all the Raretyes of the Castle & Convent w^{ch} is situate nere 4 or 500 foot fro the sea, w^{ch} surrounds the Rock at high Water. And has about 70 houses, all Walled in but on the North side where the hill is a Precipice. The Rock is but about $\frac{1}{2}$ a Mile in compass & the Prior is Lord & Cap^t of the Castle, the Place is much Visited by Devout Persons, & we were told that some Lordships ab^t have the Custome that an Heir can't Inherit, till he have Visited S^t Michaels.

Sund. 16 April. Being Easter Day, we Stayd at Mont S^t Michaels, & Saw all that was Rare there, the Treasury of ye Church, the Hall of ye K^{nts} &c. being Curious.

Mond. 17. We set out by 7 in the Morn and came by Pont Orson, ye first towne of Bretaine we came to (ye farthest but Safest Way) to Dole, an Episcopall Seat in Bretagne, but had nothing curious in it, 6 Leagues from Mont S^t Michael, there we dined; And then took horse for S^t Malo, ab^t 5 Leagues more, where we arrived by 6 & $\frac{1}{2}$, and came to the Cheval blanc, where we lodged that night, & then Tuesd. 18. Went to the Licorne to Lodge. Then went to ye Benedictines where we were kindly rec^d by ye Prieur and commended to the Care of Don Nicholas de Hugats, the most obligeing & Intelligent Gent. I ever met wth, who went with us to the Castle to ye Lieut. du Roy, Mon^s de S^{te} Marie, who rec^d us civilly, & gave us his Order in Writing to See all the Fortifications. The Castle is at the Angle of S^t Thomas, new built, Regular & Strong ag^t Bombes; there are 11 Forts ab^t the harbour, most on Rocks in the Sea.

Wed. 19. We took boat wth Don Nicholas, M^r Giraldin M^r Tarire pied noir, M^r Langrely, & went to the Fort of Couché a league & $\frac{1}{2}$ to Sea & is a Wonderful Strong fort on part of a rock & part in the Sea, it has 28 Canons, Walls & Vaults all Bombe proof, the garrison changes every 10 days. 'Tis almost an Oval Figure & is not to be taken but by Starving & the Channel is within Pistol Shot. Afterw^d we were carried to dinner to M^r Giraldines who gave us a Noble Treat, And after Showed us the Old Towne, & New Suburbe on ye other side ye Bay. The Towne is on a Rock a Peninsule w^{ch} we walkt round in $\frac{1}{2}$ an houre, has good houses & high, but the Streets somew^t narrow. It is an Episcopall Seat, the Bishoprick worth 30 Thousand Livres per Ann. At Shutting the Gates at 8 at Night, they turn out 25 g^t Dogs kept on purpose w^{ch} Suffer no Person to come Nere the Gates in the Night. The Works about well planted wth Canon, the proverb there is that S^t Malo is remarkable for 25 Chanoins 25 Chiens & 25 Putaines. There are about 6 score Men of War of the Towne's Mens owne, some of 80 Guns.

Thursd. 20. Ab^t 12, We left S^t Malo & came to Hedé that night 9 Leagues (bayting onely at S^t Pierre a pretty Ville) where we were well lodged & found M^r Macartie (Irlandois) the Curé. And on

Frid. 21. We left Hedé a^{bt} 7 & came to dinner to Rennes the Capitoll of Bretaine (5 Leagues) & a Bishop's Sea, and a Parliam^t. The Towne house a Moderne, neat & Regular building. And the Parliament Chamber & Presidial's extraordinary fine for Payntings, bas fonds on the Ceiling &c. The City Streets are not large. They have many Sedans, but not many Coaches. The Jesuites have a Noble house there & College but have no Pension^{rs}, & there is a Stately Abbaye of Benedictine Nuns &c. There we lay all Night at ye S^t Jean : And a^{bt} 7 next Morn.

Sat. 22 April. We went for Vitré 7 Leagues (passing Gravel 3 Leagues from Rennes, the last towne of Bretagne, where is a Bureau & they Search all that pass) w^{ch} is in Bas Mans a pretty old fortified Ville wth a neglected Castle. And after dinner went to La Valle 7 Leagues farther w^{ch} is a g^t Empory for Linnens & red Marble. We arrived a^{bt} 7 at Night & lay at ye Perle. And on Sunday

Sond. 23. Were at Mass at ye Hospitall, then saw the g^t Church & the Recollects w^{ch} is the finest Church & Cloister there. There we were treated wth good Alicante Wine by M^r Reahgren Irlandois who is employed in the Bureau de Selle. We left this Towne a^{bt} Noon & Bayted at Melé 4 Leagues off, & came at 7 to Sablé 4 Leagues more where we lay at ye \blackcross vert and

Mond. 24. We went to see ye Pierier of Black Marble and thence at 6 at night we arrived Safe \blackcross at La Flesche where we supp^t at Lord W^s \blackcross Tuesd. 25. S^t Marks Day was Congé in ye Morn, so we rested in ye Morn ; & M^r Nelson would go to Classe in the Afternoon, being not ye least fatigued. We Visited P. Hescot M^r Ingram, Browne, Grey, Preston, Gage, President &c. Bearn, Lynch &c.

Wed. 26. We consulted D^r Galloys a^{bt} ye Small Pox w^{ch} was very Rife now, but he said not very Mortall, & he Advised to Burne Geniure in the Chamber & to take a little Ornietan 2 or 3 Morns in ye first of ye Moon. I writ to S^r Hen. B. and M^r Paston Tuesd. 30. I was onely wth M^r Farelly at M^{ad} Lavarines garden.

Wed. 31. In the Even I & M^r Nelson walkt wth L. W.

June 1. Thursd. Congé. After noon we were at my L^d W., & at even walkt towards Biré. I was to see M^r Edward Grey (Powis) who then went Sick into the Infirmary.

Frid. 2. I was to Visit him & he was better. Else I was not abroad but à l'ordinaire.

Sat. 3. Lord W. his brother, M^r Farelly, M^r Th^{os} Gage, M^r Browne, M^r Nelson, M^r Preston (Molineux) & I took horse at 5 in ye Morne for Saumure 11 Leagues. We dined at a Towne 7 Leagues off, Langé, & at 6 arrived at Saumure, & lay at the 3 Mores. The towne is neatly seated at ye foot of a hill of Rock, on the South side of ye La Loyre, has a Noble bridge of $\frac{1}{2}$ a League (divided by 4 Isles) on w^h they take the Evening Ayre.

Sond. 4. Whit Sunday. We were at Masse at the Peres de l'Oratoire, where is a Noble Church & Dome, and a Celebrious Image of Our B. Lady, said to be found in a Rock hard by, where is now a Chappell & a Grot. [In margin—The P.O. have a good Convent at Pont Lury en Perch, where they board and teach and find Cloaths for 200 Livres p^r an. Another at Tiron & S^t Germain.] Afternoon we went to Vespers to ye Abbay of S^t Floraux, a Benedictine Order; built about 700 yeares past. Stately, & well founded, where the Fath^r told me the originall of making Cyder in Africk first by the Manichees, who forbad the drinking Wine. Thence it was brought to Biscaye, thence to Normandy, and thence to England. The Castle of Saumure is finely situate on the high Rock over ye Towne. And the Dehors is well kept, but the Castle decays and serves onely for a Prison of State, wth a Small Guard.

Mond. 5 June. We visited the Towne w^{ch} is small & has a good Wall, but else nothing Noted but for being a Nursery of Heresy, the Hugonots had scholes here, but now all Destroyed. There are 3 Parish Churches (I think in the Towne) the chief S^t Peter, In w^{ch} is an Image of S^t Christopher remarkable for its Monstruous Greatnesse. The Recollects have a Noble Garden & neat house here, & the Curé of S^t Pierre has made himself a fine garden out of the Rock, said to have cost him 10,000 Crownes.

Tuesd. 6. We took horse a^{bt} 6 for Chinon, 4 leagues, but we went a league out of the Way to see the famous Monastery of Nuns called Fons d'Everand (Fons S^t Everadi), founded by a holy man S^t Guillaume (who was never Canonized), and is richly endowed, & has 200 Nuns, & has the Presentation to a^{bt} 6 score benefices, to w^{ch} the Lady Abbess presents (who has 10,000 Livres per an. for her owne Peculiar coiffure) & who is alwaies of the Blood Royall till this present, who is Sister to Madam de Montespaigne,* & was wth g^t difficulty, tho' by the King's Command received Abbesse. 'Tis the head House of the Order subject to no Visitation but the Pope's delegate; is worth 200,000 per an., & has a Convent of Men Adjoining, who are for Curés to all their Order, & Curés at the Disposition of the Lady Abbess. This Monastery was founded by Henry 2nd K. of England who wth his Queen Elen^r & Richard Cœur de Lyon are buryed at the Nort-East corner of the Quire, under a Noble Mausolée. The fathers have a fine Bibliothek at the end of w^{ch} is a Cabinet wth fine Curiosities, amongst w^{ch} a Picketure of 3 Aspects seen 3 different Wayes. About 4 we took horse & at 7 arrived at Chinon, 3 Leagues off, a neat old Towne seated on the north side of the Vienne, where is the Remains of a very Strong Castle where Charles of France kept his Court, when first the Pucelle d'Orleans was brought to him. Here is nothing noted but the Caves under the Rock of the Castle, in w^{ch} we went a^{bt} 180 Paces, but in several turnings there is counted 300 paces. The Water distilles in some Places of the Arch and Petrifies, and by the Candle light looks like a lambris of Diamonds. There I bought a Salmon fresh out of ye River, weighed a^{bt} 10 lb., for 3 Livres 16 Souls. Here the famous Picarre leapt out of the Prison Window and killed himself.

Wed. 7. We took horse after dinner for Richelieu, 4 leagues off, and about 3 leagues off, came to a Fine House of ye Duke of Orleans,

* Mdme. de Montespan was the successor of Mdme. de la Vallière (see January 9, 1700) in the affections of Louis XIV. until the advent of Mdme. de Maintenon.

called Champigny sur Vaud, where is adjoining a Noble Chappel called La Sainte Chapelle, fro' the Many Curious Reliques there kept, all w^{ch} I had toucht by my reliquary. Ab^t 7 we arrived at Richelieu in Poitou, w^{ch} is counted one of the bijoux of France, built by Armand du Plessis, w^{ch} is very curious for the Symetrie & Statelynesse of ye building. The Towne is a long Square a^{bt} 700 paces long, & between 4 & 500 broad, a Noble Ditch and Wall, for Parade not Defence. And the great Street and Towne Gates, running Parellelle to the front of the House, and to the gates of the Park à perte de vue. The house is 3 sides of a long square. And the Stables &c. are of Stately buildings, before the house, but ranging wth the sides of it. The house is Stately for Figures, Paintings &c. Furniture. There is an Agate Table & a S^t Jerome in Pierres de rapport, much taken notice of. There is a Cabinet some pieces of the Rejoyceing the Cardinal made at Lewis 14 birth, Amongst w^{ch} is a Picture of the Court Ladys on horseback for hunting, cost 10,000 Crownes. The Gallery is Noble.

Thurs. 8 June. We saw the house & rid round the Park, w^{ch} is well Stored with Timber & deers.

Frid. 9. We took horse for Chinon where we arrived at 11, & after dinner took horse for Bourgueulle 3 Leagues fro' Chinon, where we passed the La Loyre in a ferry boat, w^{ch} carried the men first, then 5 horses at a time, so that 3 Passages brought our Company. Ab^t 7 we Arrived at Bourgneuil, where is one of the Noblest Monasteries of Benedictines in France, for Jurisdiction but not Wealth, having not above 30,000 Livres per an., of w^{ch} the Abbé has 20,000 for his share. It has about 160 Cures in its Presentation, of all w^{ch} the Abbé has ye first year's income upon Deaths. The Abbé's house is Stately, the gardens noble, by w^{ch} runs a little river, walled with Stone each side, in forme of a Canal of 180 paces long, and Strait & fine Walks by it, and beyond the Garden a Most Majestic Garren, planted in Promenades of Trees, in the Finest Order I Ever Saw, so as that from the Gate you enter, yo^w see the end of 7 Severall Walks ab^t 160 [sic] long, terminated by another Canal, beyond w^{ch} is a Noble Prairie, of ab^t 100 Arpents & beyond that Corne ground of ab^t 180 Arpents, all on a level to the Levée of ye Loyre, all belonging to ye Monastery. We lay there this Night; & on

Sat. 10. Ab^t 8 in the Morne we took horse for La Flèche ab^t 11 Leagues off, came to Moliarne ab^t 4 Leagues where we Dined & thence went to Bougé ab^t 3 Leagues w^{ch} is the longest and easiest way to find, & a^{bt} 8 arrived ✠ at La Fleche &c.

Sond. 11. We went to See M^r Edw. Gray (Powis) who had been at death's dore, but now We found better.

Mond. 12. I was with M^r Farelly & P. Hesketh. M^r H. Wal. taken ill.

Tuesd. 13. Was the Panegyric of Hen. 4 well Spoken by P. Des Gres at ye Colledge. M^r Hen. continued in a feavour.

Wed. 14. After Noon was Congé. My Lord, M^r Browne & M^r Nelson & I, went a Duck Hunting. I writ to S^r Henry by P. Plowden.

Thursd. 15. Was Corpus X^a. We did our Devotions at the Colledge. Afternoon at a Sermon at ye Colledge.

The key to the comprehension of the third year at La Flèche is the academic triumph won at the close of the school year, which is recorded with such keen satisfaction by Marwood on the 20th of August. The road to this success had been carefully laid before. On the 5th of January "Mr. Nelson" had been first imperator in the third class; on the 7th of February he took the first premium for Latin Verse; on the 8th of June he had pronounced a Latin poem with credit; in July he got successfully through the prodigiously long hours for composition; and on the 23rd and 27th of August he had recited some extraordinarily long lessons by heart without a fault or missing a word (see also p. 159).

Marwood had never relaxed in his care over the health and studies of his charge. He will not let him go to parties that may keep him up late, and nurses him through his ailments with unremitting vigilance. When the boy, suffering from overwork, walks in his sleep, or thinks he hears voices, Marwood dissembles in order to calm his mind (. . . & 31st July). We notice also signs of adolescence in "Mr. Nelson." He will not always keep at home after his ailments, as Marwood wishes, but insists on going to school. On one occasion he "takes" Marwood's watch, and promises recompense when he shall come into his property! The cautious tutor marks this with an extra sign in the margin. The boy of fourteen (as we shall soon see) was to come into the property much sooner than either of them dreamed.

Of other events alluded to, the most important of course was the progress of the war. There was indeed "talk of peace" in January, and a Te Deum for the capture of Kehl in April, but the ill effects of war also were being acutely felt. There were uproars among the soldiers in February, and so much insecurity that Marwood dares not send for money, even a comparatively short distance, and "the Prohibition began to take effect." Still, there were plenty of fine shows. Regiments were forming, and a woman is discovered enlisted as a man; and there were reviews and march-pasts. The distress has not become acute yet.

Of domestic events the most important was the departure of Lord Waldegrave (22nd March) and the death of Dame Margaret Paston, Lady Bedingfield (the 16th February). There are not so many tours as last year, but the shorter expeditions and the games are if anything more frequent.

Marwood's miscellaneous gleanings are as usual quaint and interesting. Thus we hear of a pretentious mountebank in June, of a great storm (27th January), after which Marwood gets up a subscription in aid of the sufferers. On the 30th of June a pious lady begs for an odd, but not undeserving charity; and there are also some mysteries—"L. Pet. affaire, 14 January," and on the 10th of February "ye affaire of Mr. Harn."

Mon. Jan. 1, 1703. Mr Nelson's cold was almost gone. We were to Complines at the College. P. Guardian, my L^d &c. & myself, Mr S^t George, whom we found ill of a Cours de Ventre. Mond. 24. M^r Nelson, M^r Ingram & I set out ab^t 7 in the Morn for Rochel. ✠

On inside of Cover of the Diary.

Measured M^r Nelson & he was—

June 13, 1700—4 Foot 5 Inches.
 Nov. 8, 1700—4 Foot 8 & $\frac{1}{4}$.
 March 19, 1701—4 Foot 10 Inch $\frac{1}{4}$.
 March 13, 1703—5 Foot $\frac{1}{3}$ Inch.
 Jan. 2, 1704—5 Foot 2 Inches & $\frac{1}{5}$.
 March 2, 1705—5 Foot 6 inches.

With the 24th September 1703 the MS. ends, and it is clear that the journal was continued in some other manuscript now lost. The title of the prize received for Latin verse on the first of September 1704 shows that "Mr. Nelson" was still at La Flèche at that date, and was then in the second class, and the entries of the height of the Esquire plainly suggest that the journal was continued for at least eighteen months longer, till 1705. If so, the probability is that he stayed on at La Flèche till the end of his school course, though he succeeded, on the death of his father, to the baronetcy on 14th September 1704.

The inscription on the prize book, reproduced in facsimile, is interesting for several reasons. It is one of a series of five still at Oxburgh.

Specially noteworthy is the trace of paper pasted round the edge. This is really the fly-leaf of the volume, which has been pasted down round the edge, so as to conceal the inscription on the inside of the cover. This was presumably done in order to conceal its nature while it was passing the English custom-house. For it must always be remembered that Catholic education, however excellent, was an offence against the then laws of England, punishable with overwhelming penalties.

Medical Details in Marwood's Diary.—It will have been noticed that Marwood was extremely fond of medical details. He takes a professional interest in seeing a man trepanned, sometimes prescribes for others not under his care, and occasionally debates the doctor's decisions or even carries out his own plans against the physician's orders. In his almost maternal care for his charge he has noted every ailment, every remedy, every effect of those remedies. The consequence is that he has sometimes gone into details, especially in regard to aperient medicines, which it would not have been fair to print, as he wrote them, mixed up with other details of school, family, and piety. He would himself have been disgusted with such a proposal. They should either be neglected altogether, or printed separately. I have therefore without hesitation omitted them from the text, and I am further of opinion that they are not worth printing separately, though with text now in print, it will be easy to trace from the MS. the results of the various drugs, the administration of which is regularly noted.

NOTE

ON THE COLLEGE AND THE ENVIRONS OF LA FLÈCHE

The identification of the persons and places mentioned by Marwood in this part of his journal has proved, in the absence of an antiquarian friend on the spot, to be a task of considerable difficulty. A certain amount of information, however, has come to hand, some of it since the journal was in type.

The town of La Flèche itself has had a long and important history. Its great lords played important parts in the wars of mediæval times, and many are the records, chronicles, and histories which have preserved their memories. For us the most notable will be Henry II. and Richard Cœur-de-Lion, the Seventh and Eighth Seigneurs de La Flèche, who were also Kings of England.

Henry II.'s rule there is not without its interest for our subject. It was he who founded the Priory of La Mélinais, which Marwood so frequently mentions, though he nowhere alludes to the object for which it was originally built. Legend has it that the king was hunting there, after the murder of St. Thomas Beckett, and fell in with a hermit, named Regnault, who spoke to his Majesty with such good effect, that Henry promised to establish a house of Augustinian Canons on the spot to atone for his crime. Whatever may be the truth of the story, the fact of the foundation by Henry is not doubtful (Pesche, Dictionnaire de la Sarthe, iv. 73).

The Reformed Canons, whom Marwood knew there, were styled "Genovéfains," and this explains his calling the place "a priory of St. Genevefe." The main part of the income of the house, which had dwindled during the wars of religion, had long since been assigned to the royal college at La Flèche (cf. pp. 113, 115, 116, 120, 152, &c.).

Coming to the history of the College, it is interesting to note the reason of Henri IV. for selecting La Flèche as the site of his foundation. He had been its twenty-first "Seigneur," and it was only a chance that he was not born in the town, as his parents had lived there after their marriage until a month or so before his birth. The ancestral château was incorporated in the College buildings, and, as has been said, his heart was buried there by his special orders, as was that of his queen (p. 94). At the time of the Revolution the treasures, which he and his successors had lavished on this great institution, were scattered, and the heart of the great king was publicly burnt by Représentant Thirion in 1793.* But the horror of that act did not pass quite unpunished. The rising in La Vendée which ensued, rescued La Flèche for a short moment from Republican violence. But with the defeat at Le Mans soon afterwards, the Vendéan cause was lost, and La Flèche fell again into the hands of the Revolutionists. It was some time before the

College was reorganised, but by the year 1808 it was again a military college, having been devoted to that purpose after the suppression of the Jesuits in France in 1762 (A. Lepelletier de la Sarthe, Histoire complète de la Province du Maine, 1861).

Another memory interesting to English people may be mentioned here. David Hume about the year 1732 retired to France for change of air and the opportunity of study, and was recommended, it is said by Jean-Jacques Rousseau, to go to La Flèche, whither in fact he did betake himself about the year 1735. He lived there, at a spot called Yvandeau, and daily visited the Library of the Jesuit College (p. 152) to study, and it is said that he was fond of disputing with the Padres. However this may have been, the result was hardly what they would have desired, for he returned to England in 1737, and there published his very sceptical Treatise on Human Nature (Charles de Montzey, Histoire de La Flèche et de ses Seigneurs, 1877, ii. 155).

The last-quoted author agrees with all others, whom I have seen, in saying that, at the time of Marwood's residence, the College was in the happy condition of having no history. Everything was working regularly.* There do not appear to have been any remarkable geniuses either among the scholars or among their teachers; though the standard both of scholarship and discipline was high.

The scholars had at one time numbered as many as 1000 externs, as well as 300 pensionnaires. The number of the latter kept up, but as schools were opened in neighbouring towns the day-scholars fell off, until at the end of the Jesuit régime in 1762 they numbered only 250 (Montzey, p. 150).

Of the College discipline and education by far the best account is that given by Père Camille de Rochemonteix (Le Collège Henri IV. de La Flèche, 4 vols., 1889). But few points can be touched upon here. The first volume gives the history of the foundation in 1608, and does not touch our period. An illustration, however, is given of a "Mausoleum," erected in honour of Henri IV., such as Marwood saw on the feast of "the Dedicace," the fourth of June, 1701 (p. 104). There are also valuable plans and elevations of the College buildings. We find, moreover, various familiar place-names—Luché, le Mélinais, Bellebranche, Suet—where the P.P.J., as Marwood calls them, had farms or vineyards, or a house of retreat, of which some account is given. In the second volume the more interesting features for us are an account of the discipline kept over the externs (pp. 79–103), and the Ordonnances de Police of 1625 (p. 91), which regulate a number of points—lodgings, drink, wearing arms, selling books and clothes, &c. &c. The various municipal officials of whom Marwood speaks, had their share in maintaining order in the streets and suburbs. At the end of this volume come the minute school accounts of M. d'Ourville from 1755 to 1762, the annual cost being nearly 3000 livres. It is curious to find at the commencement a table registering the boy's growth, drafted just as Marwood has drawn up his.

The third volume treats of the studies of Latin and French, and describes the elaborate system of examinations and prizes. Almost every scholastic term and exercises mentioned by Marwood—the premium, ascendat, Sabatine, theses, defensions, &c.—may be illustrated by the explanations offered here (pp. 1–131). Latin and French plays are also discussed, and the growing frequency of the latter is shown to be a matter of some importance. French had lately begun to oust Latin from its old pride of place as the only language of culture. But the Jesuits had been a little behindhand in the new movement, and were now making an effort to get into line with their competitors. The importance attached to French may perhaps explain why Mr. Nelson was not taught Greek, though Marwood would have preferred him to have been. In the Appendix to this volume (pp. 271-275) the argument is given in full of the tragedy Sigismond, at which Marwood assisted on the 29th of August 1701, though with his usual laxity of spelling he calls it Sigerie. Of the "Interact" Le Poëte, an analysis is given, as well as the full cast of Dramatis Personæ and actors for both performances. We also learn (p. 220) that the composer of the play Filius Prodigus, acted in August 1703, was Père du Cerceau (on whose plays see Sommervogel, ii. pp. 967-981).

The fourth volume describes the theological studies, the distributions of prizes, vacations and voyages. Such journeys as our party made from time to time were also made by other boys of their own rank, and in the Appendix (pp. 414, &c.) an original account is printed, written by one of the pensionnaires, Mons. de Herbais de la Hamayde, who travelled on the 20th of April and the 1st of September 1699, to Richelieu and Bretagne respectively. In his company there were three other pensionnaires, and they went under the guidance of a Jesuit, Père Dechamp, who was on the first occasion accompanied by Père Delmas, on the second by Père Delfosse of Tournay. His story is written with great spirit, and shows that they all enjoyed themselves thoroughly. They did not take exactly the same routes that our party did, though the two stories illustrate each other admirably.

I may add that Father de Rochemonteix, in spite of all his care in collecting, does not seem to have found any single record which gives so complete an account of life at La Flèche as is contained in Marwood's Journal.

Of the Frenchmen of note with whom our party fell in, I have, as the reader has seen, been able to identify but few. With localities I have been but little more fortunate. This is partly due to Marwood's random spelling.* He no doubt generally heard the names spoken, and put them down later on. Thus we find the Abbey of Solesme appears as "Sairnclaism" (p. 106), "Soulhem" (p. 135), and "Sulhem" (p. 149). Other spots he mentions are too small to recognise now, like Le Tripot, which was, I presume, some inn or pleasure-garden. Some place where the Esquire shot his first hare, will have been retired woods, or fields, like Cruzon, whose names are not set down on the maps accessible to me. Nevertheless, by the aid of the Carte topographique de la France, issued by the Ministère de la Guerre in 1832, sheets 92 and 103, at a scale which more or less corresponds with our one mile to an inch, the majority of the place names have been identified, and may be seen on the sketch-map which is here added. Besides Pesche, Dictionnaire de la Sarthe, already quoted, much concise and useful information will be found in François R. F. Marchant de Burbure, Essais Historiques sur la Ville et le Collège de la Flèche, Angers, 1803; Alme Lepelletier, Histoire complète de la province du Maine, Paris, 1861. P. E. Baron du Casse, Le Panthéon Fléchois, Pont-à-Mousson, 1883, treats mainly of the later Military Academy. Jules Clère, Histoire de l'école de la Flèche, La Flèche, 1853. All these volumes are in the British Museum.

* The Marquis Eguilles has kindly pointed out to me, since the preceding pages were printed off, that I have mistaken the name of the drug "Orvietan" or Venice treacle. Marwood doubtless wrote Oruietan, which would be indistinguishable in his hand from Orinetan, and would often look like Orientan. The drug is named from Contugi of Orvieto, its inventor.

SIR HENRY ARUNDELL BEDINGFELD

Born, 1689; succeeded, 1704; died, 1760

I. JACOBITISM

No personal memoirs of this baronet have reached us except the record of his brilliant school course kept by Marwood. In the British Museum, however, a considerable number of his letters have happily survived.

The first two letters are more curious than important. On the 18th of June 1735, he writes to Lord Strafford to say that, "If this sort of snuff pleases your Lordship, I should be very proud of your Lordship's Commands to enquire for more of it." The next, dated at Oxburgh, 8th August 1735, announces that he "has now received one pound of Portugal snuff, which he has ordered to be left at his Lordship's house."

These letters are found among the Additional Manuscripts, vol. 22,221, ff. 158, 160. They indicate, I believe, that the Bedingfelds were interested in the merchant ventures abroad.*

Thus on the 17th of February 1753-4 he wrote to the Duke of Newcastle commending "John Dashwood younger brother of Mr. Dashwood of Eley in Norfolk, who has lost his chief protector Mr. Matthews, late Governor of St. Christopher's." Sir Henry begs that he may be commended to the new Governor. In a postscript he adds that he is "glad to hear that Lord Gage has paid his duty to your Grace. Better (for him) late than never" (Add. MSS. 32,731, f. 193).

In connection with the subject of merchandise, three letters from Edward Bedingfeld to Lord Strafford may be mentioned in the same collection (vol. 31,136, ff. 17, 19, 195), dated at The Hague, 3-13 December 1711. Lord Strafford was then entering the Congress to debate on terms of peace, and Edward Bedingfeld asks him to insist on the restoration of the plunder taken by the Dutch in Barbadoes from a sloop which belonged to British subjects.

The correspondence to be given next affords us some valuable evidence as to the comparatively slight hold that Jacobitism had on the Bedingfeld family, which, we may be sure, was in this fairly representative of other English Catholics. On the one hand, it is impossible to doubt their sympathy with the family, which had lost the throne, not indeed without some fault on their side, but mainly because of their adherence to the Catholic religion. In Marwood's Diary we have seen the respectful way in which the Stuarts are alluded to at various times, without however any trace of enthusiasm in their cause. There were also two Bedingfeld matches with Jacobite families (pp. 235, 236). At Oxburgh, moreover, there are still preserved several interesting Stuart relics; some pictures, and some extremely beautiful and interesting Jacobite glasses, perhaps the most valuable examples of their kind that now exist. (They are figured and described in the Connoisseur for May 1908.)

In 1715 Sir Henry was called upon to register all his property, under the cruel penal laws, 1 George I. 50 and 55. By previous enactments (23 Eliz. c. 1) a Catholic was to forfeit £20 a lunar month for stopping away from the Protestant Church, and this Act was sharpened by the law of 29 Elizabeth, which enabled the crown to seize two-thirds of the recusants' lands in lieu of the monthly fine, while by the law of 11, 12 William, c. 4, every Catholic was disabled from purchasing any lands in this kingdom, and this explicitly, in order "to prevent the growth of Popery." Then by the 50th chapter of 1 George I., a commission was appointed "to inquire of the Estates of certain Traitors and Popish Recusants, and of the Estates given to superstitious uses, in order to raise money out of them," and by the 55th chapter of the same year, all Catholics had to register all their estates, under the severest penalties, in order that the commissioners aforesaid might prey on them with greater facility.

It must have been with a heavy heart that Sir Henry handed over to these harpies the accounts and title-deeds of his estates, but there was of course no escape. The Oxburgh estates were registered as worth £1551, 1s. 2½*d.* per annum, while the manor of Bedingfield in Suffolk, whence the family takes its name, was declared to bring in £21, 18s. 11¼*d.* (J. O. Payne, English Catholic Nonjurors of 1715 (1886), pp. 194, 258). Under the Commonwealth, it may be remembered the rental was declared to be £1638 (above, p. 3).

In the beginning of 1744 it became known that Prince Charles Edward was starting from Rome, and the English Government, with its usual bigotry, issued a Proclamation on the 24th of February "for putting the laws in execution against Papists and Non-Jurors" (a copy in the British Museum, 21. h. 4. 207).

Whatever hopes sanguine exiles abroad may have entertained of possible assistance from the English Catholics at home, I can find no indication that they counted on the Bedingfelds in particular, or on the Catholics of East Anglia in general. More certain still is it, that the Catholics at home, with tangible proofs of the overwhelming power of England ever before their eyes, and in daily contact with its tepidity or aversion in regard to the Stuarts, did not share the illusions to which the exiles were, as they always are, liable.

The following letters show us Sir Henry's position among conflicting claims on his loyalty, and in circumstances full of peril and annoyance. Protestations and professions would have been out of place. He therefore quotes facts only, and draws such conclusions as would be appreciated by such a correspondent as the powerful statesman Thomas Pelham, first Duke of Newcastle.

SIR HENRY ARUNDELL BEDINGFELD TO THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE

29th February 1743-4

Original, British Museum, Additional 32,702, f. 115. It will be noticed that there is no address, and that Sir Henry always uses the words "your Lordship," never "your Grace." It may therefore be that, though among letters sent to the Duke, it was not originally addressed to him, but to some friend who forwarded it to him.

MY LORD,—By the papers this day I find there is a Proclamation come out to putt the Laws in execution against Papists. As I have some reasons to think y^r Lordship can justly answer for my Past behaviour, I hope y^r Lordship will have no difficulty to speake to those in power that I may have a protection from Government. I have taken particular care not onely to give no disgust to, but as farr as in me did lay, to promote its interest. S^r William Gage,* before he took the oaths, had on the like occasion a protection from the Government

* Sir William Gage may perhaps have been a schoolfellow of Sir Henry's at La Flèche (above, p. 117). He "took the oaths" of Supremacy, and abjuration of the Pretender, after which he was elected to Parliament in 1722, and sat for Seaford until his death in 1744 (J. Kirk, Biographies of English Catholics, 1908, p. 94).

sign'd by four of the Privy Councill, & I hope thro y^r Lordship's interest, I may obtaine the like favor for my self & family, horses & arms. It would besides be verry hard that Lady Betty should be deprived of horses to carrye her to Church,* or to visitt her neighbours at a distance & not in a manner suitable to her quality. Y^r Lordship's good nature, will I dare say excuse this trouble in My Lord, y^r Lordship's most obed^t hum^{ble} servant,

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

OXBURGH, 29th feb. 1743.

The next letter shows that the desired "protection" was probably never granted. By October 19, 1745, Charles Edward had landed in Scotland and won the battle of Preston. The road to England lay open before him, though his diminutive army had not yet crossed the frontier—indeed it was not yet certain that the attempt would be made. But anxiety and consternation were everywhere on the increase, and the first impulse of the Protestant extremists was as usual to harry their Catholic fellow-citizens. Sir Henry now appealed to the great lawyer, Philip Yorke Lord Hardwicke, the Lord Chancellor and member of the Council of Regency, while the king was away fighting on the Continent for his native Hanover. Lord Hardwicke had already made the acquaintance of Sir Henry over "the Meriton Case" (see above, p. 15), and in his manuscript notes on Chancery Cases from 1741 to 1742 will be found a long summary of the pleadings (far too complicated to be summarised here), which are dated 14 December 1741 (British Museum, Additional 36,051, p. 128).

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO LORD HARDWICKE

MY LORD,—Nothing but necessity could induce me to trouble y^r Lordship at this juncture, especially when such weighty Affaires must take up so much of y^r Lordship's time.

I am informed that last tewsday, at Lynn sessions, two Gentlemen justices of peace for y^e County, expres'd themselves very warmly against me, as a dangerous person to y^e Government, being early privy to this rebellion, keeping numbers of horses & servants, & sending away ten horses and five servants on friday the 4th instant, thro' Lincoln; & consequently the laws ought to be putt in execution against me in their full force & rigour, & notwthstanding some of y^e Gentlemen were pleas'd to speake in my favor, & amongst other things alledged my subscribing to y^e association, yett orders were given to the Chief Constable to summon me to appear next tewsday att Lynn, & in default thereof I suppose to be prosecuted, perhaps to Conversion.† I have lived here above thirty years,‡ & thanks to ye lenity of y^e Government, wthout ever having had the least molestation given me, w^{ch} makes it more hard that at this time of day, when I will defye the

By an Invitation from Lord Burlington I went wth Lady Betty his sister, on y^e 8th of August to Lonesburgh in Yorkshire. I returned the 31st hether; & since that time neither I, servants nor horses were out of the County, but one night at Brand eight miles off, & one day to waite upon the Duke of Grafton att Euston. This I can prove by a flood of Wittnesses.

I flatter my self that Lord Hobart our Lord Lieutenant, Lord Orford & Lord Leicester can give y^r Lordship such a Character of my Constant behaviour as y^r Lordship will think that such intended rigorous measures, to be carried on against me, ought to meet wth some mitigation; & I have a particular reason to believe that, if his Majestye knew of this proceeding, he would dislike it. I am very sensible that y^r Lordship is fully apprised of ye fatall consequences to a Papist that attends Conversion, & therefore shall say no more, but humbly beg y^r Lordship's assistance.

I am, My Lord, y^r Lordship's most obedient humble servant

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

OXBURGH, Oct^{br} 19th, 1745.

Draft Answer to the above

PO. HO., Oct^r 23, 1745.

SIR,—I received the honour of your letter with much concern to find that, in this time of public Disturbance, any trouble was likely to fall personally upon you. I had allways a very good opinion of your peaceable & dutiful Disposition towards His Majesty & his Government; and in this I am confirmed by the reports which I have constantly heard of your Conduct from all the Lords & Gentlemen of the County of Norfolk, with whom I am acquainted, on this account.

I should have been very glad if the law had put any thing in my power to prevent your receiving any uncourteous Disturbance; but all I could do at present was to speak to your Lord Lieutenant & my Lord Lecester, who I find are in the same way of thinking with my self, & will omit nothing that may depend upon them to show their Friendship to you.

As from your known Character I persuade my Self that the Suspicion on w^{ch} this Proceeding is founded is without any real foundation, so I hope the Justices of ye peace will receive entire satisfaction upon y^t head; & you may be assured that on my part nothing shall be wanting to shew my attention to your [safe]ty, and to testify the personal consideration & Regard [of those] which truly love you.

I am with your Respect &c.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO LORD HARDWICKE

MY LORD,—I return y^r Lordship many thanks for y^e honor of y^r Lordship's letter & am extreamly obliged to y^r Lordship for y^e good opinion you have of my Conduct: it shall be my constant care to deserve y^r Lordship's continuance of it.

S^r Francis Berkley & Mr. Lob, two of his majesties Iustices of y^e

Peace, came this morning to searche for horses & arms: I have no reason to complain of their behaviour.

I beg'd the favor of 'em to take y^e affidavit, herein enclosed, w^{ch} entirely clears me of that report relating to my sending away my horses. I wish the other Gentlemen had been here alsoe, that the other story might alsoe be sett in a true light, w^{ch} is not in my power to doe, but by answering Questions relating thereunto.

I beg leave to subscribe my self w^t the utmost respect

My Lord, your Lordship's most obedient & most humble servant,

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

OXBURGH, 28th Oct^r 1745.

In the month of November 1745 the house of the Jesuit Provincial Father Sheldon, in Wyld Street, was betrayed to the Government by a spy, and the whole of his correspondence was seized, and an analysis was made of it "by Thomas Waite, then Law Clerk," and a copy of these notes, made by John Douglas, is now in Dr. Birch's volume, British Museum, Sloane 4234 (ff. 49-61). There is in all these notes no reference to the political questions of the hour. William Sheldon of Gray's Inn* was told by Douglas (the future Bishop of Salisbury, of whom more presently), that he had himself received the papers for examination, "and found no treason nor anything approaching thereto, but complaints of misconduct and irregularities in some juvenile missionaries." There is, however, one entry under "Foreign Correspondence" in Dr. Birch's copy, which interests us. We read at p. 58, "Two of Sir H. Bedingfelds boys go under the name of Clay at Blandyke," i.e. at St. Omers.

II. SIR HENRY ARUNDELL BEDINGFELD'S CORRESPONDENCE ABOUT ARCHIBALD BOWER

Though as a Catholic Sir Henry Arundell Bedingfeld was precluded by the penal laws from taking his part in political life, an occasion arose in his old age on which he was able to come forward and to do his co-religionists a very substantial service. This was in connection with the detection of Archibald Bower, the apostate Jesuit and Historian of the Popes. Though many English Catholics had ere this gained noteworthy controversial victories over various Protestant assailants of their Church, no Catholic before had overwhelmed his opponent by boldly defying him, as Sir Henry did, to bring a libel action in the civil courts. Another noteworthy feature was the tact with which Sir Henry managed to enlist on his side the services of some of the most eminent literati then in the Anglican Communion.

The Protestant public was still too hostile by far to listen to any exposure of Bower's roguery from a Catholic. He had in fact already been answered by Dr. Alban Butler, the most skilful English Catholic writer, then living, but no one would read the book. Sir Henry was able to beat the enemy clean out of the field by supplementing his challenge to a libel action with powerful pamphlets, written by men to whom the public were ready to listen, in particular by John Douglas, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury, and Dr. Thomas Birch, F.S.A. and Secretary of the Royal Society, a distinguished writer and collector of manuscripts, who bequeathed his library to the British Museum, and with it all his private correspondence upon the controversy. Before we come to this it will be well to premise a certain number of facts about Bower's past history.

Archibald Bower was born at Dundee on or about the 17th of January 1686, and "on the 16th of October, 1702, was received" into Scots College, Douay, and then "became a Jesuit at Rome in 1706" (Scots Colleges,

* J. Kirk, Biographies of English Catholics, 1909, p. 207.

Registers (New Spalding Club), ed. W. Forbes Leith, S.J., 1906, p. 66). In Rome he passed through his studies with considerable credit, and became in time a professor of Scholastic Philosophy at Macerata in the year 1625. Here he was appointed confessor to a certain convent of nuns, and in time contracted a friendship with a certain sister, Suor Francesca Eleonora Buonacorsi, and a serious scandal ensued. Bower was withdrawn from the town by his superiors at the first sign of things being amiss, and when an inquiry was called for by the ecclesiastical authorities, Bower fled, first back to the Scots College at Douay, then to England, where he arrived in July 1726.

By this flight Bower of course gave away entirely his chance of a favourable verdict on his conduct. On the other hand, he succeeded in keeping off a judicial inquiry, and I cannot even find what the specific accusation against him was. I gather that the fault was rather attributed to weakness than to hardened malice, for the most persistent efforts were made by his former Jesuit confères, during the years 1729 to 1734, to induce him to come back. If he would have submitted to an adequate penance, and to being sent to a country where his past was unknown, he would have been given a new start. They cannot therefore have believed him to be an absolute reprobate.

Of course they may have been mistaken. Dr. Birch (below, p. 174), a good judge, took an opposite view. He gives it as his opinion that Bower became at once an unprincipled hypocrite, whose professions varied purely and simply with the interests, or the imagined interests, of the hour; that he was in fact as infamous after his first fall as he was after his second. For my own part I think that Dr. Birch, a Protestant, may have underestimated the sincerity of Bower's passing fits of remorse, and desire to undo the past. Having regard to the whole story, and to certain pieces of evidence (esp. Mrs. Hoyle's Deposition, and the Jesuit Letters of 1729-1734) which Birch did not know of when he wrote, I think Bower was for a long time rather a waverer, who found himself uneasy in the anti-Catholic camp, than a renegade with a conscience confirmed in evil. This degree of dishonesty, it seems to me, will suffice to explain the actions, not all of them evil, which we have now to record.

He obtained his living partly by writing (below, p. 170), partly by teaching, and he was also befriended by some families of importance—v.g. those of Lord Baltimore* and Sir George Lyttelton (both which had lately lapsed from Catholicism), and the Aylmers of Balrath, who were zealous Irish Protestants. The second Lord Aylmer is said to have satisfied himself about Bower's reliability by inquiries, which he himself made in Italy, and he then employed him as tutor to his sons.

Bower's chief protector, however, was Sir George Lyttelton, whom we have alluded to before (p. 117). His grandfather, Sir Charles Lyttelton of Frankley, Worcester, had been consistently a distinguished Cavalier and a firm Jacobite. His sons (or some of them) were Catholics, who had been at school with Sir Henry at La Flèche. But Thomas, the youngest son and heir, took the Oath of Supremacy and entered Parliament, while his son George advanced yet further in the same course. He adopted infidelity à la mode, and devoted himself to promoting the intrigues of the Prince of Wales, who, as he rose to power, rewarded his favourite with such powerful protection that he obtained the highest offices of the State. He became in this very year Chancellor of the Exchequer, and was created a Baron. Though not a literary genius, he was a diligent writer, and having now forsworn the atheism of his youth, was engaged in patriotic and religious writings of a Low Church tendency (pp. 170, 186). He figures constantly in this correspondence as "The Grand Patron" (pp. 183, 185).

* If, as is likely, he was tutor to Henry Calvert, sixth and last Lord Baltimore of Longford, the pupil's chequered career (he was at once a littérateur and a libertine) reflects no credit on the master.

To return to Archibald Bower, according to his own account he was "for the space, I think, of six years, of no particular denomination. At last I conformed to Anglicanism" (Answer to a scurrilous Pamphlet, p. 30). He did not during these years display any violent antagonism to the Catholic Church, though he told romantic, and inconsistent, stories of his escape from the Jesuits and the Inquisition, who were, he said, persecuting him because he had refused to carry out certain cruelties which he had been ordered to execute.

On the other hand, he did not quite lose touch with his whilom religious brethren. In the Registers of the Letters of the Jesuit General to England from 1729 to 1734, there are numerous letters which show that year after year an endeavour was made to bring him to a better state of mind. Then there came a long break, and at last in 1744 things seemed to be taking a real turn for the better. He became acquainted with the charming Father Philip Carteret, and great progress was made towards his complete rehabilitation.* He was absolved, sometimes said mass, and more significant still, handed over to the Jesuit Provincial all his money (for being under a solemn vow of poverty he could not with a good conscience keep it), and received back from them an annual pension on which he was to live, until such time as arrangements could be made for his going abroad, and being received back into the Order. Meanwhile, he was to occupy himself in writing, and books on Church History were lent him for this purpose by the Jesuits.

Unfortunately he did not entirely break with his old Protestant acquaintances, and especially with a certain mysterious "woman," who pressed him for money, though it never transpired who this "unknown" was.†

Under these circumstances he wrote six letters to Father Sheldon the Provincial, petitioning for £500 from his capital, in order to give it to the woman. Finally he alleged that, if he did not receive the £500 at once, he must, however reluctantly, obtain it from Protestants. His request was refused, and he immediately began to publish his History of the Popes, a book full of cavil, abuse, and literary bad faith, but which proved a complete financial success. He had the honour of presenting a volume of it to the King on May the 12th, 1748, received a court pension, and went through the form of marriage with a Mrs. Conor, a well-to-do widow, the grand-daughter of an Anglican Bishop (below, p. 183). Worst of all, he perverted some of his cousins, and caused a relative to be prosecuted by the Scottish Court of Session for allowing a nephew to be sent to the Scots College at Douay (Bower's Affidavit, p. 13; European Magazine, 1794, xxvi. 32).

Much as Catholics might resent his violence and hypocrisy, they were quite unable either to protect themselves or to unmask the traitor. Dr. Alban Butler exposed in 1754 the plagiarisms and literary bad faith in Bower's first two volumes. But the result seemed rather to increase than to diminish the fame of the apostate. Upon the whole, in the then state of public opinion, to keep silence seemed the only prudent course.

But the six letters to Father Sheldon came about the year 1750 into the hands of Sir Henry Bedingfeld; and certainly, if they were proved genuine, the reputation of Bower was ruined. On the other hand, what chance was there of a bigoted public believing their authenticity, which Bower would be sure to deny, and which it would not be easy to prove in a popular way, especially as no priest could give evidence against him, or would dare to make the endeavour. However, an abstract of the letters had better be given at once. They are signed with initials only.

* Father Carteret was chaplain to Sir Henry at Oxburgh from 1742 (and perhaps earlier) till 1746.

† In the long controversy which followed many of Bower's past peccadilloes were detected and denounced, and the curious reader may be referred to Douglas's Complete Confutation, p. 47, for a detailed statement of all that is alleged to have been proved against him. I do not myself think that Douglas's statement is quite convincing, though Bower's own avowals leave no doubt as to his grave want of principle. However this may be, Douglas confesses that he cannot be sure who "the unknown" was, and thinks that Bower, by the continuous use of small exaggerations about her, has outlined a personality which did not exist as described.

1. DEAR SIR,—On this, the last day of my retreat, I have received a letter from Father Carteret in the name of Father General Retz, to ask me what province I like best [in order to go through the trials appointed as conditions for being received back into the Society], but I am leaving the choice entirely to him. “I must also ask you to make over to me part of the sum that is owing to you, which (I find) you cannot easily recover. I should immediately transfer it to the woman, who would in a very short time find means to recover it, and allow me my so much wished-for liberty. This would make me completely happy.” A—D B—R. [No date, but presumably written in June 1746, and addressed in another hand to Father Sheldon, who was then the Jesuit Provincial.]

The disadvantage about this note, when considered as evidence against Bower, is that it needed too much subsidiary evidence. Unless one could produce the woman in question, or prove who she was, an ordinary jury would be likely to regard the whole letter with suspicion. She can hardly have been Bower's future wife, as her first husband was living at the time the letter was written. In short, it was not then possible to determine who “the woman” was. Whoever the unknown may have been, she, so far as the letter tells us, has been asking him for money, and he has been asking Father Sheldon to give him back part of the capital which he had given over for his annuity. He will then pay her off, and be entirely happy and free to live a priestly life. But there had been no clause in Bower's settlement for a possible return of the capital, and so no arrangements had been made for it. It is therefore only as a favour that Bower can request repayment, and only with difficulty that Father Sheldon can make it, a difficulty which, even for Bower's sake, he was in no hurry to overcome.

The second letter, which is briefer, shows that Father Sheldon has answered in the above sense.

2. DEAR SIR,—Since you are in a position to help me, but will not do so, I shall be obliged to apply to Father Retz. A—D B—R. [No date, but endorsed as answered, 17 July 1746.]

The third letter shows that Father Sheldon has answered this with greater strictness, pointing out that if Bower wished to be received back into the Society he must not use a threatening tone towards his Superior.

3. DEAR SIR,—I have received your admonition with gratitude, and will abide by it. But “the woman and child are returned on to my hands,” and whether I like it or not, I am forced to visit her, or to give back the money. A—D B—R. Dated 24 July.

The fourth and fifth letters show us the man still entangled in the complication, and getting less and less able to resist.

4. DEAR SIR,—I still hope to be freed, as soon as you can do what I ask of you. A—D B—R. Richmond, 24 October, 1746.

5. DEAR SIR,—If you would only have lent me the conveyance, it would have done to show to the party I wrote about. Now “I am beginning to despair.” The person who owes you the money will not repay you, I fear, unless forced. A—D B—R. London, 14 March, 1747.

The last two letters give us Bower's way of saying that he intended to break with Father Sheldon and the Jesuits altogether, unless the money was given him. The seventh letter was in fact found later on, but it will be simpler to print it at once in its proper place.

6. DEAR SIR,—I have been unable to hold out any longer, and I have gone back, and accepted the post which my [Protestant] friend has offered me. But “as for the place, it will be a fortnight before the patent is made out,” * and during this time I may still free myself, if you will aid me. A—D B—R.

7. DEAR SIR,—“I have taken a desperate step.” Yet it is not altogether too late. Though I have renewed my word to the woman, I might still fly, if you would aid me, “Ecce ego, mitte me.” A—D B—R, 27 March.

The difficulty, as already explained, now before Sir Henry, was, how far would a British jury, or the highly prejudiced British public opinion of those days, accept these letters, if the woman could not be found? Sir Henry left the management of the case chiefly with Dr. Birch and Mr. Douglas. The former corresponded with Sir Henry, and received from him the letters printed below, and all evidence against Bower, that could be found amongst Catholics. Birch then passed on the information to Douglas, who wrote a series of vigorous and effective pamphlets, which eventually crushed Bower in the eyes of all thinking men, though a certain number of fanatics, especially Sir George Lyttelton, would never give him up. Before we give this correspondence, which will tell us about the course of the controversy, it may be well to print an able letter from Dr. Birch, which gives us its subject with great clearness. It is addressed to Mr. John Davidson of Edinburgh, the Scottish Antiquary, for whom see D.N.B., xiv. 127.

DR. BIRCH TO MR. JOHN DAVIDSON

Sloane 4234, f. 92. Draft, with corrections. Davidson's letter, to which this is an answer, is now fol. 99 of the same volume. The sectional headings are editorial additions.

LONDON, 1. June 1756.

DEAR SIR,—I owe you my sincere thanks for mentioning to me in your letter of the 2nd of last March, received on the 20th, Mrs. Bower's Reflections on me in her Defence of her Husband, and I owe this justice to myself to give you the grounds of my conviction, that he wrote the Letters to Father Sheldon, Provincial of the Jesuits in England, now in Sir Henry Bedingfeld's hands.

§ 1. The Letters were shown to many persons before 1755

That gentleman having been possessed of these letters for five or six years past, showed them to Mr. Garrick amongst others, as long ago as before the late Earl of Burlington's death, which was in December 1753, and the sight and contents of them struck Mr. Garrick so much that he immediately mentioned them to Sir George Lyttelton, who chose to make no farther inquiry about them, as he had upon all former occasions refused to give the least attention to any Representations, which tended to acquaint him with the true character of Mr. Bower.

About March or April 1755 Mr. Hooke,† the Author of the

* No satisfactory explanation of “the patent” has yet been offered. I take it to signify obscurely the prospectus of his History of the Popes. He means that he has it printed, but will keep it back for a fortnight. This was what he actually did. When it was published, it committed him to the Protestant side.

† Nathaniel Hooke, the friend of Pope, &c., published his Roman History, 1738–1741.

Roman History, mentioned the letters at the table of the Earl of Bath,* and told Mr. Douglas,† his Lordship's chaplain, whose curiosity was excited by the account of them, that Sir Henry Bedingfeld would readily shew them to him, which would have been done, if Mr. Douglas had not been soon after carried by his Lordship to Bath. There the letters became the subject of conversation, and Dr. Moss, Rector of St. James's, Westminster, assures me that he had spoken of them in July last to the late Mr. Gilbert West,‡ who said that he would immediately acquaint Mr. Bower that such letters were produced as his. But neither Mr. Bower nor his Friends took any steps to bring into the public Light an affair, which no innocent man could have suffered to continue in obscurity.

§ 2. The Letters are shown to Douglas, Birch, and the Dean of Exeter

Sir H. Bedingfeld, after a long absence from London on account of an Indisposition, returning thither in the latter end of January last, and Mr. Hooke mentioning again to him Mr. Douglas's Desire to see the Letters, Sir Henry immediately consented to it, and accordingly Mr. Douglas saw them on Saturday morning the 31st of that month.

Meeting him that very day, I, who happened never to have heard of the Letters before, had from him a particular account of them, and having long known Mr. Bower's handwriting, received an Invitation on the Wednesday following from Sir H. B., by Mr. Douglas to see them; which I did on Saturday, Febr. 7th, in company with Mr. Douglas and Mr. Andrew Millar,§ the Bookseller, who carried his Receipt Book full of Mr. Bower's Receipts for large sums of Money on account of the Universal History;|| and none of us had the least Doubt, upon the comparison of hands, that the Letters were Mr. Bower's.

Sir H. Bedingfeld being very importunate with me to desire Sir Geo. Lyttleton and his Brother the Dean of Exeter¶ to come to his Lodgings and see the Letters, I delivered his Message to the Dean the next Day; and on the Day following, Monday, Febr. 9th, the Dean went to Sir H. Bedingfeld's and was much confounded at the perusal of them. But Sir Geo. Lyttleton [who, as the Dean foretold, would not give up his best Friend, a title which the Dean condescended to honour Mr. Bower with], when he was shewn the Letters the next Day, appeared unmoved with the Resemblance, which he could not but own, of the handwriting to that of Mr. Bower, declaring that such Similitude of hands was no Evidence, and urging only the Improbabilities of Mr. B.'s writing such Letters.

* Sir William Pulteney, the political adversary of Walpole, was created Earl of Bath in 1742.

§ 3. The Letters are publicly discussed

From that time the Letters became one of the great Topics of Discourse in town [Mr. Bower's Friends and the Friends of Sir G. L. adopted or zealously maintained the Hypothesis of their being forged].* Bower thus supported, publicly advertised (as he safely might) a Reward for discovering the Author of this Forgery. On the other Hand every person acquainted with his handwriting saw the Letters to be genuine ; and some of the greatest Men in the Nation, to whom they were shewn, declared that they had not the least appearance of being forged.

§ 4. The Letters and their number

The Letters are in number six, not five only, as Mr. Bower told the World in his advertisement. They were all written between the middle of 1746 and the latter End of March 174⁶; and turn intirely upon getting back the Money which he had paid to the Jesuits for an Annuity of 7£ per cent. for his Life. This extraordinary Transaction had been kept a profound Secret from his Friends, till he was surprised into a confession of it, upon the Letters beginning to be publicly talked of in London. His Excuse at first was, that he had lent his Money without knowing that it was to Jesuits. But he went farther in his confession afterwards, acknowledging that he knew (what he could not but know) that they were Jesuits, endeavoured to satisfy his lending money to them, by pretending that other Protestants had done the same. But his Case was extremely different from that of all other persons ; for he has for near thirty years past represented himself as in continual Danger of his Life from that Society, which he had abandoned : and therefore it must have been mere madness to have trusted his whole Fortune with a Body of men, who would have a new Inducement to put an End to his Life, being thus tempted to it by Interest, as well as before urged to it by Resentment. So that his lending his money to them for an annuity is a sufficient Confutation of all the tragical Stories, which he has amused many honest believing Protestants with, of the Attempts of the Jesuits against his person.

§ 5. Further evidence about the annuity

The fact of lending the money stands thus in the Books of the late Father Hill, † procurator of the Jesuits.

1741, Aug. 31. Mr. Bower paid to Father Charles Shirburne, ‡ Provincial of the Jesuits for an Annuity of 7£ per cent. for his Life	£1,100
174 ¹ / ₂ , Febr. 27. He paid more on the same terms	150

* This phrase is marked in MS., perhaps for omission.

† Father John Hill, a Montgomeryshire man, died in London in April or May 1751, aged 68 (Foley, vii. 361). The account-books here mentioned are still preserved, and Father Joseph Blackett has kindly shown me the identical entries here referred to.

‡ Father Charles Shireburne belonged to the Shireburnes of Stonyhurst. He had been Provincial from September 1740 till 17 November 1744, and died 17 January 1745. His successor was Father Henry Sheldon, fourth son of Ralph Sheldon of Weston, Worcester, and he held office till October 1751. Father Philip Carteret then succeeded, and had died in the month of March before Dr. Birch's letter was written.

1743, Aug. 6. He paid more on the same terms to commence on the 27th of that month £100

The whole money paid was 1,350

Aug. 27, the three distinct annuities were reduced into one of £94. 10 to be paid half-yearly, for which he had a Bond.

1747, June 20, he was paid £1152, 10s. 1d., after a Deduction made, in Full of the principal of his Bond, which he delivered to Mr. Hill.

I have seen nine of his Receipts of his Annuity, several of them mentioning his receiving it of Mr. Shirburne, who died 5 Jan^{ry} 1743^½, and of his successor Mr. Sheldon, by the hands of Mr. Hill. The last is dated 24 March 1742^½, the day before the Date of his Proposals or preface to the Lives of the Popes.

If it should be alleged that these Receipts are forged as well as the Letters, another Evidence is produced above all suspicion of that kind; the Books of Mr. Wright, the Popish Banker,* containing Entries of the payment of Father Hill's Draughts to Mr. Bower and one of these Draughts.

§ 6. Forgery out of the question

But though a name, and perhaps a Note or Receipt, may be so imitated as to pass for genuine, yet the supposition of Forgery, when applied to six long Letters of a living man, and one whose handwriting is known to many persons, is extremely absurd; and the Attempt of it would be so impracticable as not to be ventured upon by any man, much less undertaken by a considerable Body of men, who could hope for no Advantage from the Success equal to the Hazard and even Certainty of a Detection. And if such a Fraud were possible, it is not to be conceived but that the Forgery would have been of a kind much more dangerous to the person aimed at, than merely to expose him as an Hypocrite and Double-dealer.

§ 7. The result of refusing a trial

It would be tedious to enter into a larger Detail of Facts and Observations on this subject; and it would be unnecessary, as the public is likely to be soon informed of the particulars, if Sir H. B. shall not be able to bring the affair before a Court of Justice, and Mr. Bower shall continue to decline it, as he has lately done by refusing to accept Sir H.'s Challenge to him (in an advertisement in five of the public Papers) to purge himself by Oath, of his having written the Letters in question. The reason which he has assigned in private to his Friends for this Refusal is that such an Oath would be hazardous, unless Sir H. B. will solemnly promise not to produce against him any popish Priests, since not one of that order would scruple perjury for the impeaching his character and the service of their Church. This

* Wright's Bank in Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, continued till the beginning of the nineteenth century, when the business was amalgamated with the Joint Stock Bank. Mr. Jerningham, the previous manager, then came over to the new bank, with all the old books. This explains why the Joint Stock has still such a large Catholic connection. It is very probable that the entries of the payments to Bower might still, if necessary, be verified from the ancient ledgers, still in the bank's possession. These entries are printed in extenso by Douglas in the pamphlets to be named below.

Demand of precluding the only Kind of Evidence to be expected in such a Case, has already lost him some of his most zealous advocates.

§ 8. Seven Objections answered

With regard to Mrs. Bower's Pleas in favour of her Husband, I shall make some Remarks upon them, in the Order in which they stand in your Letter.

1. It is not true that Sir Henry Bedingfeld has given contradictory accounts of the Letters.

2. The Style and Matter of the Letters afford not the least Suspicion of their being forged.

3. The pretended anachronism of mentioning Mr. Bower's connection with his now Wife and her Child before that took place, has no Weight in it. The Letters speak indeed of "a Woman and her Child," but without naming her, or pointing her out, or intimating that the Child was his own by her. They mention likewise that it was her Money which he had lent in his own Name to the Jesuits, and that till they should repay it to him, to enable him to satisfy her and her Relations, to whom it would be improper to shew the Bond, which he had for that Money, he could not be at Liberty to discontinue his former Visits to her, and to follow his Conscience, and to act in the Mission of the Jesuits, as he offered to do, even in England, if his Superiors should have thought him proper for that province. This Pretence of the Money's being the Woman's and not his own, is unquestionably a fiction; since he had at the time of purchasing his Annuity of the Jesuits received of the Proprietors of the Universal History, for his share in it, a sum sufficient for that purchase. Mrs. Bower best knows whether she would be meant by that Woman; but I have so much Charity for her, as I know nothing of her, and so ill an Opinion of him, of whom I know too much, as to be inclined now to think that the whole plea of the Woman and her Child, as well as the Mention in his last Letter of the advantageous Offer then made him by his friends of a retreat place, not named nor described by him, were both of them mere artifices to induce Father Sheldon to return him his Money and to save him from what he calls impending and utter Ruin, by which that Father must understand him to mean the Loss of his soul.

No conclusion can therefore be drawn from these two Circumstances, supposing them ever so false, to prove the Letters forged. For what is so reasonably to be expected as Lies from the Pen as well as the Tongue of a known Lyar, a Character not denied even by his Friends?

4. The alleged Discrepancy in some of the writing from that of Mr. Bower has no foundation; for the only Difference in the form of the d inferred by a Friend of Sir G. L. and Mr. B., who saw the Letters with the former, is confuted by a plain Inspection of those Letters compared with other acknowledged pieces of Mr. Bower's handwriting; * and that Critic of hands had but four Days before unfortunately pronounced one of Mr. Bower's own Receipts in Mr. And. Millar's Book not to be his handwriting.

* Douglas afterwards published a facsimile of one of the letters, and of one of the receipts. If the facsimiles are reliable the identity of the hands cannot be doubted (Complete and Final Detection, 1758, p. 144).

5. As for Sir Henry Bedingfeld's refusal to shew Mr. Bower the Letters, the short answer is that the latter never asked to see the Originals, and only desired Copies of them, which Sir H.'s council advised him not to grant, as the affair might be carried into Westminster Hall.

6. The Friendship continued to be shewn Mr. B. by the Family of Aylmer and by Sir Geo. Lyttelton is of little moment in the Question. For his Dependence on the late Lord Aylmer might prevent him from exposing his true Character at the House of a pious Christian and a zealous Protestant, though he was none the less on his guard, where he had less Restraints on him. And Sir G. L.'s attachment to him still is to be considered, not merely* as the Effect of a disinterested Esteem, but rather of zeal for his own Reputation, and a Reluctance to own himself to have been so long imposed upon by a low Man, who had so little deserved his regard and confidence, pension and place: [and to confess that he had] † imposed a sycophant and flatterer on the World for a good Man; and (which his manuscript had procured him) for a great Writer, in spite of so many Incidents which ought to have undeceived him.

The Improbability of the whole Story of Mr. B.'s Escape from Italy, and his flatly disowning it in November 1750, by a public Advertisement, when it came into print, ‡ and his many Evasions to avoid publishing himself what he had related to such numbers in private Conversation, sunk his Credit with many intelligent and impartial persons, and occasioned a more strict Inquiry into his Character and Conduct, which proved extremely unfavourable to him. And even some of his Friends, who still affect to disbelieve the Letters to be his, have made some remarkable Concessions against him, that he is apt to take Liberties with Truth. That he was till within these few years, since his marriage, abandoned to Lewedness in the lowest Sense of it. That he was a declared Infidel, where such a Declaration would either recommend him or not interfere with his Interest. And that his Conversion to Christianity was of a very late Date [the Date of his Conversion to Christianity was not much prior to that of his Patron's Piece on the Conversion of St. Paul;] § though during all that time of Licentiousness and Impiety when he conversed with Christians and Protestants he pretended to be both. He still maintained, however, a great Intimacy, and trusted his fortune for several Years with that Order of men, of whose Designs against his Life he professed to others to be under constant apprehensions.

Another MS. version of the same romantic story "from the library of Mr. Folkard" is found in Sloane 4234, fol. 62. Another "by Mrs. Cockayne, a young lady of Northumberland," with supplement "from other friends of Mr. Bower, added by Dr. Law, Master of Peter House, Cambridge," is ibid., fol. 23. to be Converts from Popery, and are too often discovered to have left their former Religion for reasons not at all honourable to them. And whatever Resentments the Priests of the Romish Church have against those who abandon it, the Methods of Fraud or Violence are not to be ventured upon by them in a Country like ours, where themselves are so peculiarly obnoxious to the Government and people, and where any such attempt would have no other Effect than exposing themselves to public Vengeance. In the present Case the Jesuits and Priests have, I am well satisfied, had no hand in producing to light Mr. Bower's Letters, but on the contrary have shewn a remarkable Backwardness to supply the Evidence in their power against him, from a just Apprehension of drawing a persecution upon themselves from his powerful Patrons.

§ 9. Conclusion

Upon the whole I am thoroughly persuaded, both from internal and external Evidence of the strongest kind, that the Letters are Mr. Bower's; and the Conclusion which seems to me to result from them, is, that he was not in his heart, at the time of writing them, of any Religion. When he bought his Annuity of the Jesuits, he undoubtedly thought it most for his Interest to court them, if not to return to their Order. But in 1746, after the Close of the Rebellion, when his Patron (who had now quitted the Opposition) had a prospect of being advanced to some considerable post (as he was in 1747 to a Seat at the Treasury-Board), Mr. Bower shifted his Views and grew impatient to recover his Money, before he should publicly break with his old Fraternity by either accepting a place, or taking subscriptions for a Work highly obnoxious to them.

I hope I need not use many Protestations to any person, who knows me, that I am incapable of taking up or propagating a Story to the prejudice of any man, without the fullest Conviction of the Truth of it; or intending any Service to the Church of Rome. Her Cause will indeed receive much more Advantage from the Character of such an Antagonist as Mr. Bower, than that of the Protestants will from his Work, which I know, upon Examination, to be the Product of Plagiarism rather than of real Knowledge of the Subject and proper Industry and Judgement in the Management of it.

I am, with my Compliments to Sir D. Dalrymple,*

Dear Sir,

Your most obedient and most humble Servant

THO. BIRCH.

We have already heard that the first active step in the controversy with Bower was the showing of the letters by Sir Henry to Douglas, and Birch, on the 31st of January and the 7th of February. At Sir Henry's instance Dr. Birch then brought Charles Lyttelton, Dean of Exeter, to see them on the 9th, and on the 10th they were shown to Sir George, Bower's "Grand Patron," who having, at Sir Henry's request, asked Bower whether he owned them, wrote back next day, February 11, that Bower absolutely denied them, and asked for copies, and said that he would advertise a reward of £100 for whoever would expose the forger. This letter, with correspondence of the next two months, was published in Bower's Affidavit, p. 3.

* Sir David Dalrymple, the well-known Scottish judge and writer, was not long after this time created Lord Hailes.

Sir Henry answered, 12th February, hoping that Bower would do what he promised, and trusting that "this little affaire" would not cause ill-feeling between himself and Sir George (ibid., p. 4).

To this the latter answered rather rudely, that he could not possibly consider this "a little affaire." It was an "attack foully made," which would "excite the Indignation of the greater part of mankind, and turn to the confusion of those who have been the contrivers of this infamous forgery." On the same day Bower advertised one hundred pounds reward for a discovery of the forger, and next day, 14th February, wrote to Sir Henry asking for copies of the letters (ibid., pp. 5-6).

Sir Henry, resenting the rude language of Sir George, and the insinuations of Bower, replied at once that he would take counsel's opinion (ibid., p. 7).

This brought down a still more uncourteous letter from Lyttelton, demanding the letters, and asking in imperious tones "whether you have told anybody by whom the forged letters were put into your hands? Why you concealed them so long, and what induced you to show them more publicly now?" Sir Henry responded that such questions would be best answered in Westminster Hall.

This explains the next three letters. Sir Henry believed he "might be attacked at Common Law" for libel, and is asking the opinion of the Lord Chancellor, the greatest lawyer of his age. No note of his answer appears, but it was probably encouraging, and may have contributed a good deal to the perseverance with which a trial in court was requested by the baronet.

British Museum, Additional 35,594, f. 35.

MY LORD,—My Lord Willowby of Parham tells me that y^r Lordship would be glad to see those letters, supposed to be written by Archibald Bower Esq^r, w^{ch} I have & have had some time in my possession. I take the libertye to send them to y^r Lordship, & beg the favor of y^r Lordship to shew them to his Grace the Duke of Argyle; & his Grace will be pleased to read the letter (marked upon the back num^r 2) wth attention. I believe his Grace can explain a passage in it, that will leave no room for doubt, weither those letters are forged or genuine.

I am, My Lord, Your Lordship's most obedient humble servant

I shall take it as a favor if y^r Lordship will please not to lett any copies be taken.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. THOMAS BIRCH

LONDON, 21 February 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, n. 64. Original.

SIR, I beg y^e favor of you, when you see my Lord Willowby, to express to him the obligations I lay under to his Lordship, for the trouble his Lordship has given himself to call so often at my Lodgings, & for w^{ch}, as alsoe for his goodnesse in y^e trouble his Lordship has taken about the letters, I am at a loss for words to explain my gratefull acknowledgments. My complaint will not permitt me to goe into y^e Country this week.

I owne I wish, my Lord Chancellour would examine M^r Millers receipt book, & your receipts, wth the letters, before his Lordship returns them, & I owne if they are forged ones, & forged in order to depreciate the validity of y^e book called The lives of y^e popes, I think the Author of that forgery might have made [one] of greater consequence; & therefore must differ in opinion wth a verry great man that the shewing these letters is a better answer then the Court of Rome can make.

M^r Garrick, I suppose, will tell you something about D^r Browne, & w^{ch} I shall explain to you when I have the honor to see you.

If I am attack'd at Common Law, I am already prepar'd, having retain'd (for that Court) S^r Richard Loyd & M^r Sergeant Prime.

I am S^r, your most obliged hum. Servant,

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

Addressed. To the Reverend Doctor Birch in Essex Street.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO LORD HARDWICKE

LONDON, 22 February 1756.

B.M., Additional 35,594, fol. 36.

MY LORD,—When I had y^e honor to write to y^r Lordship by my Lord Willowby, I was in such a hurry (least his Lordship should be gone to y^e house of Lords) that I forgott to mention to y^r Lordship the reason why I desired y^r Lordship to ask the Duke of Argyle to read the second letter wth attention, & I beg leave now to rectifye that omission.

In that letter it is mentiond, “I have recevd a letter from M^r Carterett in M^r Retz’ name, to ask me what province I like best.*”

I thought that point of to great a moment not to be enquired into, & therefore I ask'd M^r Carterett, weither it was true. He told me it was. I ask'd him besides weither he had acquainted the Duke of Argyle & the Lord Winchelsea (wth both I knew he has had y^e honor of many years acquaintance) wth it. He told me that in the conversation he had wth the last, nothing being mentiond of M^r Bower, he did not mention any thing to his Lordship; but the contrary hapning at the Duke of Argyle's, he told his Grace that he had had a letter from M^r Retzs to that effect, that he either by word of mouth or by letter had acquainted M^r Bower wth it; that he could wth safety take his oath of it, & that there was a gentleman, a member of Parliament, who lives wth him (I suppose M^r Fletcher) present at that time he spoke wth his Grace, & that his Grace said he would call upon me to see those letters.

If y^r Lordship will please to shew this letter to his Grace, (& to nobody else), his Grace will then know upon what part of y^e letter he is desired to reflect upon.

I humbly beg y^r Lordships pardon for giving y^r Lordship the trouble of this letter,

I am, with the utmost respect, my Lord, y^r Lordships most obedient & most humble servant

* In margin, “The generall of ye Jesuits.” This sentence is quoted from the first of the “Six Letters.”

If the Jesuits forged those six letters, I think they will loose the opinion the generality of Mankind conceives of them of being a cunning sett of people.

On the 2nd of March, Bower advertised again that he had asked for copies of the "five" letters, and could not get them, though he knew they were "forgeries, to the prejudice of his character." So Sir Henry continued to expect a summons, but none came. (Bower, Affidavit, p. 8. The original newspaper, The Public Advertiser, is in Sloane 4234, fol. 153.)

In the second letter, it will be noticed that Mr. Garrick was going to tell Dr. Birch something about "Dr. Brown," i.e. John Brown, a well-known, clever but eccentric writer, author of the Essay on Satire, who however eventually committed suicide (D.N.B., vii. 17). He, in company with Garrick, had a long interview with Bower, and on some points they were inclined to favour him. When therefore on the 8th of April a letter appeared in the Evening Advertiser over the initials J. B., and strongly in Bower's favour (Affidavit, p. 8; Sloane 4234, 156: Original), Sir Henry attributed it to Brown, but in this he was mistaken, as the sequel will show.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

13 April, 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, n. 66.

S^r,—I wrote yesterday to M^r Douglas, my thoughts about a letter in Y^e Evening Advertiser of y^e 8th ins^t. I think it is pitty that so good a pen, should not be employed upon a better subject, at least should not be more attentif to truth & avoid scurrility.

I mentiond in my letter my thoughts of letting it be advertised, that upon M^r Bower^s taking his oath in a publick court, according to his advertisement,* he should have a cotype of y^r letters, but upon reflection, I desire that may be entirely layd aside. For, as I am fully convinced in my owne Conscience that the letters are genuine, I cannot, neither in conscience nor honor, take any step to entice a man to be perjured, & I have (God forgive me) a verry indifferent opinion of him, so farr as to think he would goe any length^s he could wth safety or secrecy.

As I think the writer reflects pretty much upon y^r Clergy, as well as upon ours, I think it would not be improper to consult those of y^e Reverend Bench who think M^r B. guilty. (M^r Douglas writes me word, that the Bishops of Norwich & Worster are of that opinion,) what kind of answer should be return'd. For my part, I would [have] inserted (by way of Postscript) something to this purpose—

"That the gentleman in whose Custody those letters are, is in y^e "Country but has read the scurrilous letter, & full of falshoods—that "he despises such a way of proceeding, as he would publicly by name,
 "the Author, if he knew him—that he had verry good reasons at first
 "to believe the letters were genuine, & has heard of none, to make him "alter his opinion, therefore is determined to take y^e first opportunity,
 "to have y^e opinion of a Court of Justice about y^e validity of them,
 "that the nation may see who is y^e impostor, & who has been imposed

* The meaning is, as will appear from the sequel, "If Bower will appear in a public court and depose that what he has advertised is true, then he shall have," &c.

I must leave it to my friends to word it properly, but I would not have anything advertised any other way, then by way of Postscript, to what you, & y^r friends thinks proper in your owne justification to publish, & I will pay all y^e expence.

If D^r B[rown] be y^e Author of this letter, it plainly shews, that my servant faithfully related to me y^e message he left wth him, & that he has grosly imposed upon M^r Garrick, by contradicting of it, as I have it under M^r Garricks hand at London. Pray tell this to M^r Garrick from me, that I think he is not well used in this affaire by his friend.

My health is but verry indifferent, & has been worse this last fortnight, but I am flatterd by the faculty, that it should soon find a great amendment.

I am S^r, your most obliged hum. Servant

OXBURGH, NORFOLK (by Stoake bagg),
April 13th 1756.

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

I must beg of my friends to procure me as many Witnesses to prove B.^s hand writing, as it^s possible. The more we have (I value no expence) the more weight it will carrye, but I would have none, but credible and fair ones; Mr. C[arteret] would have appeared in Court to support upon oath what he told the D[uke] of A[rgyle], if his Grace should have required it.

What does the writer [J. B.] mean, by “hon^{ble} names amongst the dead as well as amongst the living” that have been slander’d?

There are here two points of importance: the letter suspected to have been written by Brown, and giving up the idea of challenging Bower to confirm his assertions by his oath.

The first point fell out better than Sir Henry feared. Dr. Birch wrote to Brown, who answered on the 15th of April from Prior Park, where he was staying with Warburton, that he had not written the letter in the Evening Advertiser, and that both he and Garrick, though not yet convinced in the matter of the Letters, were at a loss to conceive what the security was, which Bower could have accepted for his pension, and asked Birch if he could tell them (Original, Sloane 4234, fol. 84). Birch, no doubt, told him in reply that Bower had accepted the good faith of the very Jesuits who he now professed to believe had always been intent on taking his life (see above, p. 171). To Sir Henry, Dr. Birch would have been able to give a satisfactory answer on this point.

On the second point, the refusal of Sir Henry to challenge Bower’s oath, both Douglas and Birch were disappointed. Both thought (erroneously, as the event proved) that Bower would have shirked the challenge, and Birch had heard that Bower was saying, “If they will not believe my denials, neither will they believe my oath.”

Douglas told Birch on the 16th of April that Sir Henry was back in his lodgings in Piccadilly, and expected “a crowded levee” to inspect the celebrated letters, and Dr. Birch might bring any one he liked between ten and twelve o’clock. (Originals, Sloane 4234, ff. 82, 83.)

After this a lull in this curious conflict seems to have occurred from the 18th of April to the 18th of May, at the end of which time we find that Sir Henry had waived his objection to the challenge, and in the Evening Advertiser for that day a notice from him appeared stating that after Bower’s advertisements he could expect nothing less than an action for slander.

Now, however, as no action was brought, if Bower would take an oath in court to the truth of his own advertisements, he should receive copies of the letters. To this Bower answered by another advertisement in the same paper for the Saturday, May '22, declaring that he would even himself publish the letters, if he might have the copies. (Originals, Sloane 4234, ff. 158, 160; Affidavit, pp. 9, 10.)

Sir Henry was afterwards informed that Bower, in spite of this answer, was still "determined not to take the oath," until he casually heard the "opinion of a great lawyer" that there was no danger of a prosecution for perjury upon a "voluntary" oath. So he had recourse to Sir George Lyttelton to have a form of oath drawn in the strongest possible terms (p. 185). This form he carried to Westminster Hall on the last day of May, and made an "affidavit" to its truth. A copy of this document was thereupon sent to the baronet, who after looking into its validity sent Bower the copies of the six letters on the 5th of June.

Bower hereupon published his Affidavit in answer to the false accusations brought against him by the Papists. As the title indicates, Bower "put the whole affaire upon a point of Religion" (p. 185). It was a trick of the Jesuits, he said, made in order to sully the fame of the historian of the Popes, and his pamphlet, as we shall see, proved a considerable success. He did not himself print the Six Letters, but he promised to do so, when he had made further inquiries into their origin.

All this convinced Sir Henry and his advisers that they too must take the public into their confidence, and they were fortunately able at this very juncture to discover some circumstantial evidence of the highest importance. On the very day that Bower made his affidavit the baronet sent the following billet to Dr. Birch (Sloane 4300, n. 223):—

If Dr Birch can wait upon Sr Henry B. to Wyld Street Tomorrow evening, between six & seven, Sir Henry will call upon him then, being vastly desirous that the intended visit should be as soon as possible. Mr Douglas will accompany Sr H.

Monday. 3 o'clock.

The intended visit was to Mrs. Hoyles, a convert to Catholicism. Strange as it may seem, she had been moved to this step by conversations with Bower, who had visited her at Wild Street as early as 1727 or 1728. This kindly good woman, seeing Bower in a state of doubt and fluctuation, advised him to read Anglican divines, upon which he spoke so forcibly about the rise of Protestantism, that she was herself upset. Bower himself pointed out a priest (one of his old confrères) passing in the street, telling her that he could solve all her doubts. Finally, about the year 1636, she was received into the Church. Then with female diplomacy she praised the Anglicans in her husband's presence before Bower, and induced a controversy between them, in which her husband was so thoroughly worsted that he too became a Catholic. It was only after her conversion by the Jesuit whom Bower had pointed out, that Father Richard Parkinson, for that was his name (see Foley, vii. 570) told her that Bower himself was a priest. After this Bower disappeared from her ken for some time, and when he returned, he seemed sad, and said he had been ill. She asked if she might bring in Father Carteret, of whose virtues Bower had himself spoken to her in previous years. Bower consented, Carteret came, and there ensued that period of conversion, real, half-real, or fictitious, which came to an end, as we have heard, with the Six Letters.

This story was taken down by Douglas on the day above assigned, and his MS. is at folio 41 of Dr. Birch's oft-quoted volume, Sloane 4234 (printed in full, Six Letters, p. 74). After leaving Mrs. Hoyle in Great Wild Street, they turned into Little Wild Street to take down the evidence of Mr. Horne. He had been surgeon to the Empress of Russia. He used to live with Father Carteret, and remembered meeting Bower, at Carteret's house, during the period of his conversion (Sloane MS., ibid.; Six Letters, p. 82). Mr. Gay's evidence was perhaps obtained separately. He had once been a servant of the Jesuits, when they lodged "at Mrs. Fleetwood's" in Little Wild Street. He was very old, and not very clear, but stated that he had actually served Bower's Mass, at the time of his reconciliation.

The next letter shows us Sir Henry returned to Oxburgh, but still diligent in collecting information. Douglas is writing his answer to the Affidavit, but his chaplaincy to Lord Bath causes delays.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

17 June 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, n. 69.

DEAR SIR,—As I have not heard anything from M^r Douglas, since I left London, I conclude he has made wth L^d Bath, a little tour in y^e Country.

I recevd last weck a letter from an acquaintance of mine, an English Gentleman now at Dublin, but who will be back here by Michelmas, that a Reverend Prelate of the Church of England* told him, that he had it from M^r B——s owne mouth, that the Grand Duke of Tuscany being acquainted wth his family, sent for him into Italy, when he was but five years old, and bred him up in his dominions. Now this gentleman that writes this account, can and will attest, that he was at Rome when M^r B. came first into Italy, & that he might be then about 18 years of age, & that he could not then speake one word of Italian w^{ch} I think wth his great parts he certainly must have done, had he been twelwe years, in y^e Grand Duke's dominions. I immediately answered his letter, and beg'd the favor of him, to gett that fact attested under y^e Bishop's owne hand. If I succeed, I will forewar'd it to you.

The oath Mr. B has publish'd, as by him taken, has done him all the service, here in y^e Country, he could wish & expect, & I suppose is attended wth the same success in town

I am S^r your Most Obed^t hum^b Servant

OXBURGH, June 17th 1756.

DR. BIRCH TO SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD

26 June 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, f. 82. Draft.

SIR,—I have delay'd acknowledging your Favour of the [? 17th] inst, till I should have an opportunity of communicating it to M^r Douglas, who has for this fortnight past been much out of town, & told me on thursday that he is to go this Day with Lord Bath to Cheltenham for six Weeks.

He intends to make some use of the Information of your Dublyn Friend, which is a new proof of the falsity & inconsistency of the Tales, which M^r B. has so long been imposing upon the honest & credulous.

This Affidavit has turn'd the scale for the present in his favour among those who are unacquainted with the facts against him, & who will undoubtedly change their Opinion when they come to see things represented in their full and proper Light.

* This was the Bishop of Waterford. See p. 185.

M^r Andrew Millar the Bookseller is inform'd that M^r B. is in the press, probably with the six letters and some general remarks on them.* But I am persuaded that he will be very cautious of entering in particulars in which he might expect to be contradicted, and that he will not appear in print at all on [that] question, if he were sure that nothing would be published on the other side.

His letters to M^r Carteret, if they are to be secured, will be a decisive blow against him. I hope the country air has fully restored your health, and am Sir &c.

On the 29th of June, Douglas's pamphlet entitled Six Letters from A—d B—r to M^r. Sheldon were published. Dr. Birch's copy of it, with his note of the date, is in the British Museum, 699, e. 1. Sir Henry, as was but natural, looked first to the weak points. He thinks that by waiting longer they might have had Bower's promised comments on the Six Letters, but in truth Remarks on the Six Letters did not appear till January 6, 1757. Sir Henry also objected to the publication of the statement by the Jesuit Procurator, Father John Poyntz, at p. 65, as to the payments made by the Jesuits to Bower. Douglas had spoken of him under so slight a disguise, that other priests who had evidence to give would be scared.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

3 July 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, n. 72.

SIR,—I came hither the beginning of this week to trye the benefit of bathing in salt water, but not meeting wth any encouragement, I shall return to Oxburgh this evening. I received last thursday a pamphlett printed by one Morgan, but as there was no letter wth it, nor no name of y^e author, I must be at a loss to know from whence it came.

As M^r Bower had advertised this day sennight that he would publish (the) letters wth notes etc. etc. after a Second Swearing, I should have thought it much more prudent of (y^e) publisher, to have staid a little longer, to have (seen) what inconsistencies the gentleman would have printed, w^{ch} he will now artfully contrive to (avoid).

I am sorry the letter is printed sign'd P—z wth some remarks. First no such thing ought in my opinion to have been done wthout his consent: & I fear it will be a total hindrance to my friends, in y^e prosecution of their endeavours, to procure me the other letters, so long expected & so long wish'd for, as they find their transactions (& what they are) are made publick.

I have been promis'd Doctor Law's account (w^{ch} he sent you) from M^r Bower's owne mouth,† but have yett heard nothing of it.

I am S^r, y^r Obed^t hum. Servant

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

I should be curious to know, what are the sentiments about this pamphlett, in a certain house in Ormond Street.‡

Mrs. Conors husband died in 1746. Might not M^r B., who then lived in y^e house many years (have) conceived hopes of marrying her.* If so, that plainly shews why he wanted y^e principall money, for an annuity & from such a Corner, would not answer the Gentleman's purpose. He married her, Dec. 1749. It is reported that her husband kept a Madam & who went into deep mourning at his death.

* As appears from the sequel he was printing an Appendix to his Affidavit.

‡ The inference is that Sir George Lyttelton is intended.

M^{rs} Conor (according to y^e reports I have heard) has y^e interest for life of £4000.

DR. BIRCH TO SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD

LONDON, 10 July 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, fol. 81. Draft.

SIR,—My absence from London prevented my receiving your Letter of the 3rd instant till the 8th in the Evening & acknowledging it till this post.

M^r Douglas, who went to Cheltenham with Lord Bath this day fortnight & is to stay there about 10 Days longer, order'd the Six Letters, &c., to be sent to you. He was at too great a Distance from London to direct that the publication of that pamphlet should be suspended till after that of Bower should appear.

But the Event has shown that the anticipation has had no ill Consequence, since B. has made no alteration in his piece, which had been some days printed off, & only added the postscript, which has convinc'd the public that he has nothing to oppose to the system of facts urg'd against him. The other pamphlet [i.e. the Six Letters] of which almost the [entire impression of 1500 is already sold, has indeed had great success in proving the charges alleged in regard to him undoubtedly], and some of his former friends have totally abandon'd his Cause.

I am impatient to know the present opinion of his great patron.

I wish the Letter of M^r P[oyntz] had been suppressed, especially if the printing it should be followed by the Refusal to communicate [to us] B.^s [letters] to M^r Carteret.

I am with the sincerest Wishes for your health

Sr Your most ob. & most humble servant.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

ONBURGH, 12 July 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, n. 74.

DEAR SIR,—This morning I was favor'd wth y^r letter, & am very glad to hear there has been so great a demand for y^e Pamphlet, if any Reverend Prelate or Divine of y^e Church of England would now openly take y^e affaire in hand & print something to w^{ch} he would affix his name, it would entirely drive Bower out of his last entrenchments, w^{ch} is that strong one of religion, & upon w^{ch} I dare say he will build his whole strength in his reply, & I cannot but persuade my self that out of so many great & eminent persons of y^e sacred Character, that are entirely persuaded of y^e validity of y^e facts alledged against M^r B., some one will have Courage enough to sett his name to a work, & w^{ch} would give the famous gentleman his Coup de grace.

There is another letter from y^e same person to father Sheldon, not

* In his references to this matter Bower's words are obscure, and not very trustworthy. He seems to say that Mrs. Conor's husband was not dead in 1746, and that the only lady he was intimate with in that year was a certain Mrs. Hamilton. See above, p. 167.

yett in my possession, more pathetick then any we have yett read, & attended wth a verry particular Circumstance. A gentleman* writes to me from abroad, that about y^e year 1746 or 1747, M^r B^r came to him & desired him to write to father Sheldon in his behalf, w^{ch} he refused doing, saying he must write himself. Upon w^{ch} M^r B^r wrote a letter in y^e gentleman^s owne Chamber before him, & in y^e most moveing terms, wth this remarkable expression out of y^e 6th Chap. of ye Prophet Isā—Ecce ego, mitte me—He gave the gentleman the letter to read, & desired him to forward it to M^r Sheldon. I have wrote to y^e Gentleman to beg y^e favour of him to confirm this by an affadavit, & if there be any protestant Gentlemen in y^e town where he is, to beg y^e favor of them to be present & to attest it alsoe.

I have wrote excuses to M^r P[oyntz] about y^e printed letter, & about the Subsequent lines, w^{ch} in my opinion is y^e worst of all as it describes the person. Who knows what length^s revenge may make some great persons take? As M^r P[oyntz] is a verry sensible & good natur'd man, I make no doubt, but he will excuse it, but you knew, there are others to manege as well as him, I will leave nothing unturn'd to gett the letters of M^r B^r to M^r C[arteret], & also this famous above mention'd one.

Reading over M^r Bower^s narrative, in w^{ch} my letter of y^e 4th of June is printed, According to that I wrote nonsense & looking over y^e Cotype, by good luck taken by Councillor M—— Clarke and attested by him, I find M^r B. has converted the abreviation I generally make of y^e word "and," in this manner, "&," into y^e word "so" & has added in y^e 3^d line, after y^e word "you," another comma. If you think proper, I should be glad that an advertisement to y^e following effect (& w^{ch} I hope you will draw up, and signe Oxburgh June 12th 1756, H.B.) be putt in y^e Daily Publick Advertiser; London, and the Whitehall Evening Posts & Evening Advertiser.

"M^r Bower is desired to examine S^r H. Bedingfeld^s original letter " of y^e (4th) of June, wth the printed one in his narrative page 18, for he " believes there is a mistake of y^e printer, by putting in y^e 2^d line the " word "so" instead of "&" (y^e abreviation of and) & alsoe another " comma added in y^e 3^d line after y^e word you—for in the Cotype of that " letter taken & attested by Councillour M——, Clark, the word "so" " is not in y^e whole letter, & it is wrote "&" as by my advert, &c., " ready for you.

"S^r H. Bedingfeld must alsoe take notice of a strong falsification " of a word in a R^t Hon^{ble} Gentleman^s letter, to him, & now before him " in all M^r Bower^s printed (but unrecorded) oath^s, & w^{ch} he should " alsoe have imputed to y^e mistake of y^e press, had it not been inserted " in y^e unattested cotype (M^r Bower favored him wth) of his oath, & de- " livered to him y^e 2^d of June, by M^r Durance of y^e pay office to y^e " Horse Guards—Oxb. June 12th 1756."

What ever the expence comes to, you will please to pay for it, & I will take care to reimburse you.

I cannot account for one thing in y^e postcript of M^r Bower^s narrative. It is dated y^e 30th of June, & he says, since y^e foregoing sheets were sent to y^e press—by w^{ch} every body must conclude that his 2^d oath taken before M^r Fielding & printed in that narrative must have been sent to y^e press, & yett that oath, was taken y^e 30th of June—y^e same day as y^e postscript was printed.

* Father Nathaniel Elliot (see below, p. 187). He was Socius to the Provincial at the time the Six Letters were written, and was Rector of the English College, Rome, in 1756. For the Ecce Ego, or Seventh Letter, see above, p. 169.

If you knew y^e Bishop of Waterford in Ireland, he can certifie to you, that M^r Bower told him y^e story of y^e Great Duke of Tuscany sending for him at 5 years old, on account of being acquainted wth his family etc. etc.

M^r Bower^s oath & putting y^e whole affaire upon a point of Religion, has carried every thing before him in this Country, I have wrote to Morgan to send me a dozen Pamphletts down, & I hope to doe some good by them to open præjudiced persons eyes. One Clergyman is already entirely satisfied, by reading that w^{ch} was sent me, & I hope he will convince others of their wrong præjudice^s.

Before I left London I wrote to Lord Willoughby, but have heard nothing from his Lordship. Some people think M^r B^r is gone down to y^e country to consult his grand Patron.*

I believe upon enquiry, you will find that when M^r B. published his advertisement in answer to my last (to w^{ch} if you remember you added a postscript to refute his evasions) he was then determin'd not to take his oath. Two days afterwards a gentleman told a very eminent Physician, a great friend of M^r B^rs that there was no danger of a prosecution upon a voluntary oath, as a great Lawyer (I doe not mean y^e Attorney General) told him & who is alsoe a very great friend of M^r B^r. Then he went to his Grand Patron & told him he was ready to take it & in y^e strongest manner that could be drawn up—you know y^e person that drew it, by what he himself told you.

I am Dear S^r, y^r most obliged hum. Servant

OXBURGH, July 12th 1756.

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

I hear that M^r Dodesly^s Shop applauds y^e Pamphlett. L^d De L. W^r [De la Warre] has told a certain Duke, (since y^e Pamphlett came out) what he mentioned to me from B^r about y^e inquisition, & said that M^r B. had represented it to him in so favorable a light, that he was astonish'd to y^e greatest degree.

You will please to lock up safely, the enclosed cotype of my letter.

LONDON, 15 July 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, f. 76. Draft.

Upon a thorough consideration of the particulars of your advertisement, propos'd in your Letter, which I received yesterday, I cannot but be of opinion, that they are not important enough for the public Attention, which is already fix'd upon much more mighty Charges on M^r A. B., who has convinc'd the World by the postscript to his pamphlet, that he is neither prepar'd nor dispos'd to give any other Answer to them.

Above a fortnight is now elaps'd without his attempting to invalidate one Fact in the pieces against him; the consequence of which is that he has scarce a friend left, but who has read it. The Word left at his Lodgeings is that he is gone into the Country, & S^r Geo— L.— has order'd, that no more of the proof-sheets of his own *Life of K.— H.— ii shall be sent to him. If he should hereafter receive assurance enough to venture upon any attempt to vindicate th—, I hope you will be furnish'd with new Evidence to [convict] him; tho' almost every body at present seems satisfied with what has been already exhibited.

M^r Cogher in Pater Noster Row is meant by J. M. He will soon call for a new Edition of the Six Letters. I am &c.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

ONBURGH, 7 October 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4234, no. 77.

DEAR SIR,—An officer of y^e Navy told me y^e other day, he was wth my Lord Anson a few months agoe, when a Physician applied to his Lordship, to be employed on board the fleet, having an infallible cure for y^e scurvy, & that two Lieutenants of Men [of] Warr, w^{ch} he named, were cured by him, having tried other Doctors to no purpose. I have not the honor to be knewn enough to his Lordship, to adress myself to his Lordship for directions, to find out this Physician, who is a regular practioner [sic], therefore shall take it, as a particular favor, if you will desire my Lord Royston to speake to my Lord Anson about it.

The miserable situation, I am in, at present, is a sufficient excuse to one of y^r compassionate disposition for the libertye I take, & the trouble I gave you, & therefore am verry willing to believe you will forgive both.

I saw about a fortnight agoe, L. de La Warr at Euston, his Lordship said he was at first surprised to see himself hinted at, in a certain Pamphlett, about the Inquisition—but he reflected, he said, that one day this winter in y^e house of Lords, Lord Macklesfield, Lord Willoughby, & L^d Royston ask't him about a conversation he had wth M^r Bower upon that subject. He said he had told one of y^e Bishops of it some years agoe, & repeated it to their Lordships. He forgetts entirely that he told me of it. He is entirely convinced, & is surprised others are not, but wants that some person of note should examine M^{rs} Hoyles whose deposition seems to have had great weight wth his Lordship.

Having in a some degree gott the better of y^e Chief Opposer for giving further evidence, I am in daily expectation of receiving from Liege, the famous letter, of Ecce ego mitte me, & I am verry positif, if it is extant, I shall have it. I alsoe expect daily M^r E[lliott]'s affidavit, about that verry same letter, at whose lodgings it was wrote, given to him to read, to direct & to send to M^r S[heldon], though I must owne it is more for our private satisfaction, then for any necessity. Everybody & from all y^e Countries I have any correspondence wth, seem to agree in one verdict—Perjury—

I am Dear Sir, y^r most obed^t hum^{ble} Servant

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

OXBURGH, 5 November 1756.

B.M., Sloane 4300, n. 224.

DEAR SIR,—I am to return you thanks for y^r favor of y^{rs} of y^e 2^d ins^t. & alsoe for y^e trouble you have had to enquire of L^d Anson, the name of y^e Physician, & w^{ch} his Lordship has forgott, but Admirall Layton sent me an account of him last Post. Thank God, the præscription w^{ch} D^r Broxham gave to Major Boggust seventeen years agoe & w^{ch} cured him in a case similar to mine (onely worse) gives me great hopes of y^e same effect upon me, since what I have already taken, has visibly alter'd every complaint for y^e better.

I hope the celebrated M^r Bower will keep all his employments, Salaries or Pension, if that depends upon the resignation of those truly Great, & Noble Persons; the onely Protector^s of y^e Grand Patron of that infamous hippocrite.

I fear the contents of my letter of y^e 26th of Oct^{er} to D^r Douglass has given him some displeasure, since he has not favor'd me wth an Answer. All that I desired was to postpone every thing relating to me, & to those concern'd about C——ts letters, till it is determin'd wether, (if they be not burn't according to M——r^{py} advice) they will be delivered to me or not, as well as ye other letter—(Ecce ego mitte me). Until M^r Ell——ts affidavitt arrives, w^{ch} not onely relates to y^e last letter, but has a declaration annexed to it (I suppose from Macerata) that B. never was Councillour there—these & other facts, w^{ch} may be gather'd up, & perhaps M^r F[lee]t[woo]d's affidavit * of his having heard B——rs mass, will be subject enough, for a reply, or for a fresh attack—

Two other reasons have great weight wth me. First, I never would have my name mention'd in any case when I had not, actualy, in hand facts to support it: 2^d, as y^e Parliament will soon meet, some peavish person might attempt to putt in execution what M^r Bower^s Country Neighbour hinted at in his excellent Pamphlett, & w^{ch} seems to be renew'd by a paragraf in y^e postscript of y^e White hall Evening Post of y^e 2 ins^t—all y^e blame (from all our people) will fall upon me, if any such thing should happen—

I am, D^r S^r, y^r most obliged, hum. Servant

H. BEDINGFELD.

I have taken the liberty to send you this day a hare, by y^e Coney Carts.

Bower published on the 6th of January 1757, the first part of his reply, entitled, Remarks on the Six Letters, the second part appeared on the 10th of February.

* Bower's letters to Carteret, and this affidavit, do not seem to be mentioned in the subsequent controversy, but a letter was discovered from Carteret to Mrs. Hoyle, with a friendly commendation to Bower, and dated 27 July 1741. Another letter, undated, but some years later, desired her to give "my kind services to Mr. Bower and Mr. Hill, as if they were named" (Complete and Final Detection, p. 106). The conclusion to be deduced from these sentences is extremely strong. For Mrs. Fleetwood, see p. 181.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

OXBURGH, 14 January 1757.

B.M., Sloane 4300, n. 226.

DEAR SIR,—I received last post the favor of y^r letter, wth y^r opinion of M^r Bowers last performance, w^{ch} I make no doubt, will be that of y^e unbiass'd learned—I wish I had seen it, but nobody yett, has had thoughts of sending it. Was I at present in town, I could mention an affaire, that would strike terror, into M^r B., & his advocates. Perhaps it may be as serviceable to keep it, till our answers from Macerata come about that romantick affaire.

I wrote to M^r Douglass of y^e 7th to desire he would make my excuses for not having complied wth y^r intention about my letter to you, & of w^{ch} my indisposition upon y^e roade prevented me from having timely notice, & as my disobedience to y^r Commands, proceeded from an allmost impossibility to obey them, I flatter myself you will have the goodness to forgive it. I have wrote four letters to M^r D. since I came down, but have had no answer^s, & had I not been favor'd wth y^r opinion about Bower^s last pamphlett, this profound silence & not sending it, would have made me (& justly) conclude that the Publick was entirely satisfied of y^e gentleman^s innocence.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

OXBURGH, 15 January 1757.

B.M., Sloane 4300, n. 227.

OXBURGH, Jan. 15th 1757.

SIR,—I have read over & over M^r Bower's præface to his defence, & the oftener I read it, the more I approve of it. The stile is taking, w^{ch} makes me doubt, it is not all his owne; but the many quibbles &c. &c. and inconsistencies are certainly worthy of y^e Author, & unworthy of notice.

The points he has in view, are to shew the bond from the Provinciall (if any) unnecessary, the readiness M^r Hill shewd in the repayment of y^e money (w^{ch}, if true, would give a very just suspicion of y^e validity of y^e letters) & that the depositions of the Jesuits, tho' in y^e most solemn manner, are not to be regarded. His arguments or rather disertation to shew that [no] such bond was necessary, as it was or could be of no force, might perhaps prævail in a Catholic Country, but I am sure would not in Westminster Hall. I doubt very much wether he could have succeeded in Westminster hall, to break the bargain he had made wth the Jesuits, & if that be y^e Case, Equity makes the other reciprocal.

As to y^e ready compliance of M^r Hill in y^e repayment of y^e money, that bold & false assertion, may verry likely goe down wth those unacquainted wth the rulles of y^e Jesuits, & by the rules of his owne order (w^{ch} I am willing to believe he had then forgotten, as he has in other places of his performance, & wth makes me suspect it comes from another pen) M^r Hill could not have disposed of y^e money, either by receiving it, or repaying it, even if it had been his owne, wth out y^e express leave of his Superior, w^{ch} in y^e first case was M^r Sherburne & in y^e latter M^r Sheldon.

My circumstances never permitted me to be acquainted wth the Stocks, I therefore owne my ignorance in these matters—but if the word transfer has no other meaning, than that M^r Hill assigned over his stock to M^r Bower by changing one name to another, I suppose when y^e money was repaid, that Stock or Security was retransferd (I doe not know weether Mr. Bower will allow of that word) from Mr. Bower to M^r Hill in y^e same manner as the transfer—but I doe not find any anecdote of so materiall a transaction. Sure he has not served father Hill wth his transfer, in y^e same manner he served father Stratton wth his rider—& as to y^e deposition or affidavit of Jesuits, tho I ought to pay a great regard to M^r Bower's judgment, yett I must think it is not superior to y^e laws of y^e land.

I am sorry he forgott to mention y^e reason, he was so frightn'd at Calais, w^{ch} (by way of amendment from y^e first story) was occasion'd by seeing two Jesuits attended by Sbirres, in that garrisoned town, in search for one of their owne deserters, & as I believe such a thing never happen'd before, his fright was much more justifiable.

Another Story was also forgot, and that was as some streets in Macerata are extremely narrow, a Lady or Nun (I really forget which) made use of a plank to travel from her window three story high to that of her gallant, but whether she made use of her feet or her b—ks, I refer myself to Mr. Bower: Sure the ladies in Macerata and Mr. Bower's horse will make a fine figure in history and both worthy of Mr. Hogarth's pencil.

I believe when M^r Bower accused, to every body that I have heard of, the Jesuits, of that villainous design to kidnap him, he then abjured in his heart, that foul slander & Calumny he bestowed upon them, & now, that he has reason to think he is in their power, he like a true Stock Jobber, transfers it, upon y^e poor harmless mendicant friars.

He says he abjured in his heart the pope's unlimited Supremacy, & for four years at least, severall times, publickly swore the acknowledging it, bound to do soe; every time he made his vows, & the last time even added, by oath, an obedience to his Hollinesse—repeated it alsoe as Chancellour of y^e inquisition, & all this by a bull of Pius quartus—to justifie himself of such a step, w^{ch} some people, & I think very justly, may call unchristian.

He would fain make a similar case wth the jansenits and y^e Gallican church—I owne the learned Bossuett makes it an article of faith, the Supremacy of y^e pope, as does the Council of Trent, but y^e Council of Trent is received in france wth restriction & verry justly in regard to y^e plenitude, or rather latitude of y^e popes Supremacy, therefore they can perform all the ceremonies belonging to their church wth out incurring censure, nor has there been any Papall decree against them upon that account, nor will he find anything mention'd in the five positions of Jansenius condemn'd as hæreticall, of y^e popes Supremacy, so that the Jansenits, are condemn'd for holding other tenetts.

For my part I should not be surprised to hear that in France they have erected the statue of Mr. Bower, for by his mental abjuration, he has broach'd a doctrine, w^{ch} will reconcile all their religious disputes, & make them unanimous. They have onely to follow the example Mr. Bower has so gloriously given—they may receive the bull Unigenitus & swear to it, in its full extent, & att the same time abjure it, in their hearts. If he has really propogated this doctrine upon that account, one may safely say, he is now as much a Frenchman in disguise as he was a Jesuit in disguise the last four years he was in Italy—I hope you doe not think I justifie mentall reservation—I doe assure you, I abhor both.

We had this day in Ipswich & Norwich newspapers an account of y^e French king receiving a stab, but not a mortall one, between his ribs, by y^e hand of one, dress't in a Clergyman's habbitt. This calls to mind some verses made some years agoe at Paris, & w^{ch} If you have mislaid, for I dare say you had them, I have here transcribed—

Deux Henriens ont immoles nos braves ayeux—L'un a la liberté, L'autre a nos Dieux—ils nous animent, Louis, au mesme entreprise,
Craignes, Louis, notre juste ressentiment,
Craignes notre desespoir—la noblesse a des Guises,
Paris des Ravillac^s, le Clergé des Clement^s.

I beg the favor of you to present my humble respects to my Lord & Lady Hardwick, & give her Ladyship the enclosed, w^{ch} is a piece of nun's cutt paper, but not by y^e hand, of Francesca Eleonara Buonacarsi—I believe it will match that, I had y^e honor to send her Ladyship above two years agoe—I hope to be in town next Thursday, & for y^e pleasure of personally assuring you how much I am, S^r, your most hum. Servant

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

Lord Leicester I hear has putt of for some short time, his going up to London.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

En route for OXBURGH, 5 February 1757.

B.M., Sloane 4300, n. 250. This is a copy by Birch, the original must have been sent on to Douglas, who quotes it in his next pamphlet.

SIR,—I can safely declare now, as I have often done, that my conduct in regard to the affair of M^r Bower has been strictly honest & totally disinterested: and tho I hear there are some persons, who seem to be of a different opinion, thir treatment being of such a nature, & coming from such a quarter is beneath my Resentment, & only the Object of my contempt. Had the affair come into Westminster Hall (the most proper place in my Opinion for discovering either Impostures or Forgeries) I should then have produced Witnesses, as I can now, of some surprising & interesting facts.

One of these Witnesses, if called upon before proper Judges, would have deposed upon Oath, what he has frequently & very lately told me and others in conversation, that he received from M^r A. B.'s own hand a Letter to send to Father Sheldon, & that another Letter was left by M^r B. with one M^r [? Havard], (I suppose his Landlord) to be given him, both which Letters he sent & directed them to Father Sheldon under the feigned name of Elliot Brown's & that some person on seeing these two Letters in my Custody, owns the Direction to be of his own hand-writing. M^r Bower will easily recollect the gentleman's name, when I mention it is the same who lent him Baronius & other Books, when he began (or at least pretended to begin) his History of the Popes.

There is another person whom I could have produced as a Witness who introduced M^r B. to Father Shirburn, then provincial of the Jesuits, was present when M^r B. made a very handsome and well worded Apology for his past conduct; remember his being kindly received & offering his money for an annuity for which affair M^r Shirburn refer'd him to M^r Hill.

Having at last within these few months got into my possession another Letter sign'd A. B. (I suppose Abraham Broomstick) dated the 27th of March 1747 & which was two days after a certain preface was sent to the press & which any body may see, without the assistance of an [?] Ananias that it was certainly written by the same hand as the other six. I can add, Sir, in support of its authority that I have also an affidavit of the person, in whose room that Letter was written, who saw the unfortunate gentleman write it, received it from him to read & to send to Father Sheldon. This affidavit also informs me that M^r B. & M^r Sheldon had Transactions together, & that the very person who makes the affidavit was employed by both of them in those transactions.

Nothing I think shews more the weakness of the Cause, which the unfortunate Gentleman attempts to defend, than his declaring, that Popish evidence in this case ought not to have any weight or any way be regarded. Such an assertion so contrary to the Law & practice of this Kingdom seems to border a little upon presumption. If M^r Bower is innocent, why will he not try the Validity of the Letter in that very Court, [in which] he so solemnly has sworn them to be forged. For my part I am sure that nothing but Fraud, Perjury & Injustice can fear to face that august Tribunal especially whilst that noble & eminent person* presides in it, whose Decrees will always be deem'd Oracles of Equity & Justice. But as I despair seeing this matter canvassed in its proper place I would not conceal any longer from you the above facts, which I believe you will think like me are pretty strong. I leave you at liberty to make what use you may think proper of them, tho I cannot help being of opinion, that there has been already a great deal more publish'd than what was needful to prove the authenticity of the Letters.

I return you many thanks for sending the paper parcell to my Lady Hardwicke. My Lord, upon whom I waited last tuesday, told me her Ladyship had received it.

The Roads are so very bad & so very jumbling that I shall not be able to reach Oxburgh till this evening.

I was taken last night with a shivering fit something like that of an

That the Certificate from the notary of the Inquisition declares that Mr. B. never was a Counsellour of it.* Yet for farther satisfaction M^r Bowers Description of that abominable Tribunal and his escape is sent . . . for a Dominican Fryer to carry it and explain it to the present Inquisition of Macerata so I hope in about three months we shall receive some authentic accounts from thence.

This is the last of Sir Henry's letters sending evidence about Bower. The controversy, however, was by no means over yet. Douglas on the 5th of January had published a very telling pamphlet, Bower and Tillmont Compared. This was an exposure of the shameful way in which Bower had taken over from the French writer both quotations, notes, references, and other paraphernalia of learning, and this not only without acknowledgment, but under the profession that he was drawing direct from the ancient Fathers. The same exposure had in fact been made before by Alban Butler. But what no one had attended to, when coming from a Catholic pen, was seen to have irresistible force, when coming from a writer who had the ear of the public. Bower answered immediately on the 21st of January, with his Reply to Bower and Tillmont Compared, full as usual of vigorous repartee of a personal character but with practically no defence to the main charges.

On the 12th of March, Douglas answered with A full Confutation of the facts contained in Mr. Bower's three Defences, a strong and clearly written statement, showing that while the facts against the ex-Jesuit were constantly increasing, he had in effect no means of answering, except by evasion and invective. Bower answered in his old style with A Reply to a Scurillous libel intituled a full confutation, &c., on the 24th of June.

Douglas's next and last pamphlet was the Complete and Final Detection of Archibald Bower, published 23rd February 1758. Bower had a pamphlet ready, and published it next day, February the 24th, entitled, Some remarkable facts relating to the Jesuits with regard to Mr. Bower by a Clergyman of the Church of England, a sort of red herring to draw across the line followed by Douglas. But the public was now tired of him, and this tract, as also his One remarkable fact more, fell flat.

Though we have often heard Sir Henry say that more than enough had been said in order to prove Bower's guilt, not a word too much had been written to attain a more important point, to break down, even in a single case, the inveterate obstinacy of so many English fanatics, who thought that by giving up their faith in Bower they were giving a victory to Rome. Many letters in his defence were written to the Gentleman's Magazine after Bower's death, and Bower's friends, knowing their public, were not afraid to erect over his grave a monument with the following inscription:—

Here lie the remains of Archibald Bower, author of the History of the Popes, a man exemplary for every social virtue, justly esteemed by all who knew him for his strict honesty and integrity, and a sincere Christian. He died Sep. 3, 1766, aged 80.

False witnesses rose up against him, and laid to his charge things that he knew not. They conspired together and laid their net to destroy him guiltless. The very objects came together against him, they gaped upon him with their mouths. They sharpened their tongues like a serpent, working deceitfully. They compassed him about with words of malice and hatred, and fought against him without a cause.

* This is printed in the Complete and Final Detection, p. 145.

He endured these reproaches with fortitude, suffering wrongfully.

MISCELLANEOUS LETTERS

The tone of the following letter suggests unmistakably that the Baronet is trying to recover some gaming debts.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE

ONBURGH, 17 September 1758.

B.M., Additional 32,884, f. 38.

MY LORD,—As his Grace the D. of Devonshire* is not in town, I take liberty to apply to y^r Grace, for what was due last Lady Day was twelfmonth. An unlucky accident, of a Corn Merchant breaking, considerably in my debt, is y^e cause of my giving y^r Grace the trouble of this letter, & w^{ch} I make no doubt but y^r Grace's compassionate nature will excuse. I hear our friend Southcote † has had a bad relapse at his house in Cambridgeshire, & as soon as he can wth safety bare y^e journey, will return to Wooburne.

I believe I shall be obliged to be in town in a few days, when, wth y^r Grace's leave, I shall pay my respects to y^r Grace.

I am, My Lord, y^r Grace's most obed^t hum^{ble} servant,

ONBURGH, 6 November 1758.

B.M., Additional 31,067, f. 115.

MY LORD,—I have taken the liberty to send y^r Grace this day, (by the Lynn Coach) all the Game our guns could procure last Saturday; a verry poor days sport, consisting onely of a brace of Pheasants three brace of Patridges & five brace of Snipes.

Our farmers are in great hopes, considering the vast crops of Barley here in Norfolk & I believe all over England, that if y^r Grace will take off y^e Injunction layd upon the distellers, & permitt them to distill Barley, that would be of great service to the farmers & I believe to y^e revenue of the Crown.

I am, My Lord, y^r Grace's most obliged & most obed^t hum^{ble} Servant,

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

ONBURGH, 6th Nov^{br} 1758.

* For the relationship with the Duke of Devonshire, see below, "Sir Richard's Memoranda," n. 23.

† This was Philip Southcote of Woburn, youngest son of Sir Edward Southcote (see above, p. 77), who did not rally, but died on the 25th of the same month of September (J. Morris, Troubles of Our Catholic Forefathers, i. 366). For some further details about him, see Kirk, Biographies of English Catholics, p. 215.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO DR. BIRCH

OXBURGH, 18 November 1758.

B.M., Sloane 4300, f. 233.

OXBURGH, Nov^r 18th 1758.

REVEREND SIR,—I was very glad to find by y^r letter of y^e 11th ins^t that the Hare I sent you proved a good one, I hope that I sent to M^r Millar the same time, alsoe answered my intentions—

I hear M^r Bower is ready for the press.* I believe any body wth. out the Spirit of Prophecy, may safely fortell that the Phampllett will be cramm'd wth scurrility & falsehoods, & till he will bring convincing proofs, that the 28th of Nov^{br} is prior to y^e 6th & 13th of y^e same month, I shall not, & I hope nobody else will, vouchafe even to give an answer either verbally or otherwayse.

My neighbour M^r Spellman (alass once a good papist) has gained great honor by his translation of Dionysius.†

I am, Reverend Sir, your most hum. Servant

H. BEDINGFELD.

I beg my compliments to M^r Millar.

SIR HENRY BEDINGFELD TO THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE

OXBURGH, 22 October 1759.

B.M., Additional 32,897, f. 300.

MY LORD,—By a letter I received lately from the Duke of Devonshire, I find myself obliged to give y^r Grace the trouble of a letter, to return y^r Grace my hum^{ble} thanks for this last favor.

My state of health being verry bad, I am advised to goe to Bath, for w^{ch} place I sett out to-morrow, when I return to London shall take the liberty, to acknowledge y^r Grace's favors, wth my hum^{ble} thanks, by waiting upon y^r Grace.

I am, My Lord, y^r Grace's most obed^t hum^{ble} Servant,

HENRY BEDINGFELD.

OXBURGH, 22^d Oct. 1759.

III. ACCOUNTS FOR THE EDUCATION OF RICHARD AND EDWARD BEDINGFELD, 1737-1747

These items are picked out from the day-books kept by the London Procurator of St. Omers College, and which are now preserved at 31 Farm Street. The first of these begins 12 November 1724, the second begins 23 June 1738. The money received was, as a rule, passed on to St. Omers; but sometimes the Procurator buys various articles in London for boys at St. Omers, and miscellaneous objects. These miscellaneous expenses have been extracted and printed, when they regarded the Bedingfelds; nor have I confined myself to the Bedingfelds of Oxburgh, but have also included Father

* Perhaps this was the One fact more (see p. 192).

† Edward Yallop of High House near Rougham, Norfolk, adopted in later life the surname of his grandmother, Dorothy Spelman, who married Sir Robert Yallop of Bowthorpe. Dorothy was a Catholic, as appears from J. O. Payne, English Catholic Nonjurors of 1715, p. 193. Edward published in 1758 The Roman Antiquities of Dionysius Halicarnassus. This work was criticised by Nathaniel Hook, mentioned above; which led to a reply, by Spelman, and further controversy lasting for some years.—D.N.B., liii. 328.

Anthony Bedingfeld, whom Foley believes to have belonged to the Testerton family (Records, vii. 45), and Mr. Charles Bedingfeld, perhaps the Franciscan (p. 241 n.).

The identification of the Bedingfeld boys, under the name of Clay, is due to the note by Dr. Birch (above, p. 165). Blandyke is the code term for St. Omers, being in reality the name of its country farm.

SIR RICHARD BEDINGFELD, FOURTH BARONET

Born, 14 September 1726; succeeded, 15 July 1760; died, 27 March 1795

WE have already heard something about Richard Bedingfeld's school-days from the accounts on the previous page. The first entry among the Expensa, 31 August 1738, for "little Bedingfeld"—six pair of gloves at one shilling apiece, and knife, fork, and penknife at eightpence each, are so cheap, that one regretfully suspects they were intended for presents! Evidently five cheap snuff-boxes for his younger brother Edward must have been for distribution (see also 27 Jan. 1744). A little later Sir Henry gave his children a better outfit, silver cups and spoons, and private knives and forks (Dec. 1740), at the cost of £7, 17s. Gingerbread and holiday jaunts were not forgotten, and their aunt Margaret sent them handsome tips of a guinea each, and next year two dials. Richard was musical, and took violin lessons, his instrument having cost £1, 14s. 6d. One of them seems to have had a serious attack of illness in 1740, for Sir Henry gives £5 in consideration of the extra charges. As there are no further disbursements on the score of ill-health, we hope that there were no more troubles of moment. In 1745 we notice that Richard has a room to himself, perhaps a sign of adolescence. They seem to have left in 1746. But according to no. 3 below, they did not return till 1748, so we gather that they went to some other school, perhaps to La Flèche again, or to Angers, whither Sir Richard sent his own son later on.

Fifteen months after the death of his father, Sir Richard married Mary Browne, daughter of the sixth Viscount Montague of Cowdray (no. 19, below). There is at the British Museum a letter from him to John Caryl of Ladyholt, Sussex, dated Cowdray, the 13th of October: "Lady Bedingfeld joins with me in return of thanks for your obliging congratulations on our marriage" (Additional MSS., 28,234, fol. 360). Their married life was unfortunately very short, and she died soon after the birth of her first child (below, nn. 30, 31). According to the family tradition, this loss so overwhelmed her husband that he retired to Oxburgh, and gave up society except for yearly visits to Cowdray. In his later years he used to spend the winter months at Bury St. Edmunds. He died 27 March 1795, and was buried at Oxburgh.

It is curious that both he and his brother Edward should have written memoranda between in their old age, without there being any apparent connection between the two.

I. MEMORANDUM BOOK OF SIR RICHARD BEDINGFELD

Small quarto note-book, dark paper sides. Sir Richard's autograph. The entries are generally made consecutively, not noted down from time to time as they occurred (but see nn. 15, 104). The numbers prefixed to the memoranda are the Editor's additions.

The memoranda, as we might have expected from one so devoted to Oxburgh, all relate either to the family or to the Hall, or to local events or celebrities. The unity of ideas is so marked that it may be well to classify them at once, as they constantly illustrate one another.

SIR RICHARD BEDINGFELD.
Fourth Baronet, 1726-1795.

SIR RICHARD BEDINGFELD.
Fifth Baronet, 1767-1829.

LADY CHARLOTTE BEDINGFELD.
d. 1854.

Family History.

His father, Sir Henry Arundell, 18 ; his mother, Lady Elizabeth (Boyle) and her relatives, 5, 7, 8, 23, 73, 80 ; his aunt Margaret (Lady Jerningham), 11.

Sir Richard, 3, 12, 19, 30, 31, 54, 102, 105, 108, 147, 148 ; his wife and her family (Viscounts Montague of Cowdray), 19, 21, 30, 33, 61, 101, 105, 115, 133, 154, 155, 157 ; his brother Edward and his family, 2, 9, 13, 14, 15, 17, 20, 22, 25, 32, 36, 39, 98, 114, 121, 128, 132, 141, 159 ; his sister Elizabeth (Biddulph) and family, 4, 21, 24, 100, 126 ; his son Richard, 30, 37, goes to old Hall, 44, robbed, 47, ill, 65, 72, first kill, 82, goes to Liège, 88, 89, returns for vacation, 95, 97, visited by his father, 102, 105, given a horse, 106, 147, to Anger, 110, to Brussels, 112, home, 116, on Grand Jury, 147, to Bath, 148, tour in North, 160.

Oxburgh Hall and property, 1, 38, 41, 43, 46, 49, 62, 68, 69, 70, 71, 79, 85, 93, 94, 107, 119, 138, 140, 143, 149, 153, 158 ; chaplain and chapel, 104, 110, 111, 118, 149.

Sport and horses, 48, 50, 51, 53, 56, 58, 64, 66, 70, 81, 82, 84, 135, 139, 146, 150, 151, 152.

Obits of neighbours or connections, 6, 16, 27, 42, 57, 60, 63, 76, 78, 83, 91, 92, 99, 100, 103, 107, 113, 120, 125, 130, 133, 134, 136, 137, 142, 144, 145, 156.

Miscellaneous : marriages, births, local events, &c., 35, 40, 45, 54, 55, 67, 74, 75, 77, 90, 117, 121, 122, 123, 124, 127, 129, 149.

These memoranda, so far as they go, confirm the family tradition that Sir Richard, after his wife's death, lived almost entirely at Oxburgh, always however remaining most affectionately united to his wife's family. His chief interest, we also see, is centred in his son. He has him home for vacations from abroad, an unusual course for those days, and he goes twice to visit him at Liège. On one important point these memoranda correct an unfavourable idea, which was once current at Oxburgh, and has been mentioned by Miss Stone in her otherwise admirable essay, "A House and its Story" (The Messenger, New York, Sept. 1906, p. 250). Sir Richard, so ran the tradition, was thinking of pulling down the towers and filling up the moat, when death intervened and saved these glories of the house. This rumour presumably had its origin in the regrets, which every one must feel, for the "pulling down y^e old Hall" (n. 43), whether that was justifiable or not. In fact we see here (nn. 143, 153) that his last undertaking for Oxburgh was to buy 300 yards of iron chain wherewith to rail in the moat. This chain was hung upon oak posts, and a good deal of time was spent in getting them ready and put into position. It was evidently in his mind to preserve and embellish the moat, not to destroy it.

The more important points from the history of the English Catholics are the taking "the oath to the Government," 21 July 1778. This was the first Emancipation Act, which, without repealing the old penal laws, gave exemption from them (such as we have heard Sir Henry Arundell ask for, above, p. 163) to those who would take an oath "to the Government" (see n. 59 and note). This comparatively slight measure of relief was so much resented by the more fanatical section of the Protestants that they were eventually followed by the "Gordon Riots" (see n. 77).

Meanwhile the French Revolution was on the point of breaking out. The Jesuits had already been suppressed by the Bourbons throughout their dominions in 1767, the prelude of greater disasters to follow. St. Omers College had then been taken from the Society, and the Padri had emigrated, first to Bruges till 1763, then to Liège, where young Richard was put under their tuition in 1781. In 1786 the boy is sent to "the Academy of Anger" (n. 110), of which mention was made by Marwood. But no sooner has he got there than the French monarchy fell, and anarchy began to take its place. So Richard is recalled to Brussels, and there, somewhat hastily it would seem, wound up his education. The last entry describes him making a tour in the North (i.e. in the north of England and in Scotland), instead of on the Continent, and the explanation of this no doubt is that the revolution was now spreading beyond the borders of France. Belgium had been overrun; Sister Mary Bedingfeld, the Benedictine nun, had had to fly from Ghent (n. 159). The Tasburghs had lent their house at Bodney to the "French nuns of Montargie" (n. 147), and a collection was made all over England for the exiled French priests (n. 149). This was probably the first occasion that Oxburgh Chapel (then a room under the roof, running eastwards from the towers) would have figured in the public papers, side by side with the Anglican churches. Chapels had become licit (upon registration) by Mr. Mitford's "Catholic Dissenters' Relief Bill" of 1791. By this Bill, too, Catholics had become capable of serving on juries; and in n. 147 we see Sir Richard and his son (honoris causa, we may suppose) nominated for the local grand jury in 1793. The Baronet does not record his having taken the oath of 1791, but his brother Edward has done so.

* The Gordon Riots. See p. 199.

† Thomas Angier was then either a master at Liège College or going through his Divinity there. Later on we shall find him chaplain at Oxburgh. We must suppose that he had come back to England, either for a holiday or to fetch Master Bedingfeld. As we find that Francis Angier entered Liège on the same day as Richard Bedingfeld (see below, p. 211), the inference that he joined the party at Norwich can hardly be thought doubtful. See also n. 120.

The Abbess's Discours, when her convent was opened by force, has been printed (British Museum, F.R. 1475). The choice of Bodney as their place of refuge was perhaps determined by the presence in their community of Anne Swinburne of Capheaton, the sister of Mary, wife of Edward Bedingfeld. See The Lait's Directory for 1793 sqq. for an interesting advertisement of their school. For a printed account of their migrations down to their settlement at Princethorpe, see Ampleforth Journal, Dec. 1905, xi. ii. pp. 192-204. See below, p. 243.

* A full account of this migration will be found in the Annals of the English Benedictines of Ghent, 1904, pp. 80-100. Dame Benedicta Bedingfeld came with the second party, and her stay at Norwich was perhaps not long. It is not recorded in the Annals, which mentions her as staying at “the Maynes,” until the convent was opened at Preston in 1795. Dame Benedicta, who became the fourteenth abbess in 1809, had made all arrangements for the removal of nuns to Caverswall Castle, when she died 27 March 1811. Her portrait is given at p. 98, and her signature at p. 205 of the Annals.

III. ACCOUNTS FOR THE EDUCATION OF RICHARD, AFTERWARDS
FIFTH BARONET

From the Ledger now at 31 Farm Street, pp. 74, 75. This volume does not belong to the series of Day-books from which the last accounts were published, and this is why the account is drawn up in a different way, though I am still not able to balance them.

We may notice the rise of prices. In the accounts of 1738 the annual pension was £25, now it is 32 guineas, and soon after was £50. It may also be noted that the next entry in the Ledger is that for Francis Angier (cf. p. 204), who is taken at half pension. But as his account was not paid through the London Procurator, it does not appear how long he continued at College.

IV. SIR RICHARD'S FUNERAL

OXBURGH, April 3rd, 1795.

DEAR FATHER,—Sir Richard has desired me to inform you that yesterday, the Funeral Service having been previously performed by M^r Angier, betwixt 12 & 1 o'clock, his Father was buried in the Chapel of the Family, in the Church of this Place. The Funeral was attended from the House to the Church by six of the principal Gentlemen of the neighbourhood as Pall Bearers: followed by me as chief mourner. The Servants & the Tenants all in mourning. Your Brother's generosity to the Poor was at all times most conspicuous, but never more so than during the late severe season. It is therefore needless to add that numbers of them attended & testified their grief at his loss. My cousin (Sir Richard) found it impossible for him to be present, & locked himself in his Room. His Father was buried at a little distance to the left of Sir Henry. My cousin had some Reason to think that he had left a will, but none has, as yet, been found. . . . I was much obliged to M^r White for making the Service in the Church as short as possible. . . . All the servants in the House have been put into mourning but I think M^r Crow of Swaffham has been rather extravagant (he had the furnishing of many things) in one article as the Housekeeper said this morning, that the maids' Cloaks, would she imagined, come to above forty shillings. I easily conceive how much the loss of your Brother must affect you, but I hope you will keep up your spirits. . . . I desire my love to my Mother & Sisters, & remain,

Dear Father, your affec. son,

J. BEDINGFELD.

VII

CATHOLIC BAPTISMAL REGISTER OF OXBURGH

Large folio (14½ × 9½ inches), bound in green, back damaged.

THIS volume contains baptisms from 29 March 1791 to 23 January 1882; and beginning at the other end, burials from 1883 to the present time. The water-mark in the paper is, "R. Glover 1795." The first entries have evidently been fair copied by the Rev. John Sanderson, from some original which has now perished. The first twelve entries were then signed by Father Angier, S.J., who survived till 1837 (see Foley, vii. 13); the next seven are signed by the Rev. John Paterson. The entry for 5 September 1803 (the baptism of Charles Richard Bedingfeld at Yarmouth) is on a slip of paper pasted in. The entry (24 January 1805, the baptism of Edward Richard Bedingfeld) is the autograph of the Rev. Edward Beaumont.

After the hand of the Rev. John Sanderson come entries by Peter James de la Bissache, Pastor, from 1 November 1811 to March 26, 1815. Then Joseph de Pierreville, Pastor (2 Dec. 1815 to 10 October 1825). Then "Le Roux, prêtre, chaplain of Sir Ric^d Bedenfield" (21 March 1825 to 20 "juillet," 1828). Sam^l Roch, Pastor (September 7, 1828, to 27 December 1831). All these entries are in English.

John Gasgoine, M.A. (April 1832 to 12 June 1844) returns to Latin. He has made the following entry about the present Oxburgh Chapel: "The first stone of the new Chapel at Oxburgh was laid on the 6th August, 1835. It was opened on Sunday 10th July 1836, and was dedicated to the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin, and to St Margaret Queen of Scotland. It was built at the sole expence of Sir Henry & Lady Bedingfeld."

In January 1835 one entry by [?] Anth^v M. Dermott M: Ap—
William Gubbins, 1844-1847.

Stephen Longman.—2 May 1547—8 May 1871.

Then a few entries "a me A. Walshe."

From April to July 1871.—Gregorius Palmieri, O.S.B., S. Pauli extra muros, monachus,—ab episcopo delegatus.

Then two entries by E. Walshe.

Then till the end of the volume, 23 January 1882, William H. Bodley, the brother of the late well-known architect.

Sir William Jerningham B^t. on the 14th of Aug^t 1809

The Chapel of Cossey, of which he was the pious Founder, was consecrated by the Right Rev: D^r John Milner on the 21st of Aug^t, & the Day following he was interred in the New Family Vault under the Altar. His solemn Obsequies were performed by his Lordship, who likewise pronounced his funeral Oration, & an excellent one it was, redounding to the Credit both of the Preacher & of the Deceased.

This Tablet is erected by his widow, Alice, daughter of Sir H. Paston Bedingfeld, 7th Baronet of Oxburgh.

§ III.—NOTES ON THE PEDIGREE OF BEDINGFELD OF OXBURGH FROM THE TIME OF SIR HENRY THE CAVALIER

A. The Various Branches of the Bedingfeld Family.

The family, which now bears the name of Bedingfeld (Bedingfield), a parish in North Suffolk (Hoxne hundred), have certainly been lords of the manor of that name since a very remote period, and the Oxburgh, or main stem of the race, still retains that honour. The family pedigree, which claims one unbroken succession since the Conquest, is acknowledged to be of authority, though for some remote periods it cannot be confirmed from independent sources. Before treating of the Oxburgh stem, for the period which has actually been under our consideration, it may not be amiss to say a word or two upon the chief branches, of which mention will be found in the "Visitations."

The chief division dates from the fifteenth century, when Sir Edmund Bedingfeld married Margaret, heiress of Sir Thomas Tuddenham, who brought him estates in Oxburgh and much other property in Norfolk. On this his descendants eventually settled, leaving Bedingfeld to the heirs of James, his younger brother, whose grandson Thomas, marrying Joan Bosard, became possessed of Ditchingham, which then became the chief seat of his branch of the family, the neighbouring church of Hedsham (3 miles NW. of Bungay) being full of their monuments. Their pedigree may be found in the various editions of Burke's Landed Gentry. Perhaps the most distinguished names of this line are three knights—Sir Thomas (1593?–1661), Sir Henry (1633–1667), and Sir Robert. The first eventually purchased from his elder brother Philip the manor of Darsham in Suffolk, which Dorothy Southwell had brought with her hand to his father Thomas (b. 1553); but his issue died out in the next generation. Sir Thomas sided with the Parliament in the contest with King Charles. He refused to defend Sir Edward Herbert, who was impeached by the Commons for his share in the attempt to arrest the Five Members; and for this refusal Thomas was himself committed for contempt by the House of Lords. However, he was on the winning side, and eventually was appointed a Commissioner of the Great Seal, and a Judge of Common Pleas in 1648. His two nephews, Sir Henry and Sir Robert, came into prominence later. Sir Henry was a lawyer like his uncle, and became Lord Chief Justice in 1683. Sir Robert was Lord Mayor of London in 1707. This branch of the family seem to have been Protestants; but Charles Bonaventure Bedingfeld, the Franciscan (1698–1782), a convert from Protestantism, was probably the fifth son of Philip Bedingfeld and Elizabeth Strode, in the next generation of this same family.

Returning now to the main line, a somewhat important branch was settled in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries at Quidenham in Norfolk. It began with Peter Bedingfeld, fourth son of Sir Edmund, Knight of the Bath; and it seems to have ceased with Philip Bedingfeld, who was a staunch Recusant in the time of Elizabeth, and who, for that or other reasons, had to part with the property in 1572. In the Armada year he, by right of birth and descent the lord of the manor, the squire and magnate of the village, was, for his adherence to his father's creed, confined in the house of the local parson until he should conform, an indignity which, according to the ideas of that time and place, would have been unspeakably bitter.

To return once more to the main stem. The age of Sir Henry, the well-known Councillor of Queen Mary, covered a period in which many new families were established, and it is only natural for us to find the Bedingfeld "tree" now putting forth some strong and vigorous branches. Thus his brother Anthony was given the manor of Holme Hale, which had come to the Bedingfelds from the Jennies, and he married Elizabeth Danyel, who brought him Bures Hall in the same neighbourhood. A marriage with the heiress of Thomas Townsend of Testerton, in the next generation, added that manor to their estates. After keeping for six generations in this locality, the direct line ended in an heiress, Dorothy. But she, by marrying Francis Bedingfeld of Redlingfield, preserved the property for her kin and name. Not, however, for long. Her three children were childless; Francis, her heir, sold Testerton to John Curties, Hale Manor to Henry Ibbot of Swaffham, and Bures Hall to the Eyres. Eventually Father Anthony Bedingfeld, S.J. (see above, p. 195, and Foley, vii. 45), the eldest son, but as a priest not left heir to the estates, was left the sole survivor, and he died at Liège in 1752.

The Bedingfelds of Redlingfield, of whom we have just made mention, sprang from Nicholas (? John), son of Sir Henry, the Privy Councillor. They were established first at Gisingham in Suffolk, and afterwards at Snatshough (or Snatsborough) and at Redlingfield. The Civil War, crushing though it was to Catholics at home, was, in this way, favourable to the English convents on the Continent, that it reduced almost to a vanishing point the chances of a Catholic girl finding an honourable home, profession, or livelihood in England. With this in mind we can understand the perhaps unique occurrence which befell this family, viz. that the daughters, to the large number of eleven, all became nuns. Moreover, one of them was a widow, whose daughter had entered before her (see below, p. 240). As we have seen, this family eventually ended in Father Anthony, S.J. Redlingfield had been sold in 1748 (Foley, v. 568).

B. Bedingfelds of Oxburgh.

1. The Descendants of Sir Henry the Cavalier by his Second Wife.

[1] FRANCES, born on "New Year's Even's Eve," 1610. Godparents—Sir Robert Wind [? Windsor], the Lady Mondford, and Mrs. Jerningham (ante, p. 14, and note).

Foley adds: "Married Michael Timperley of Hintlesham, Esq.; died in 1653; had a daughter professed at Pontoise, O.S.B. (Dame Justina), on January 8, 1660, aged 21; died April 27, 1684, aged 45 (Pontoise MS.); and two others professed at the Blue Nuns, Paris—Elizabeth, who died in 1703, aged 74; and Frances, professed on her death-bed, Nov. 19, 1661, aged 26" (Records of the Blue Nuns).

Elizabeth Timperley, daughter of Nicholas Timperley of Hintlesham, married Thomas Townsend of Testerton, and their only child, Dorothy, married Thomas Bedingfeld of Holme Hale (see above, p. 232). Sir Henry's uncle Anthony, of Scots Hall [? Snatshough], had previously married a Lucy Timperley of the same family.

In the Papers of the Committee for Compounding (Calendar, pp. 2133, 2134) there is a somewhat complicated petition of Michael Timperley, who, 15 June 1653, after the death of his wife, requests that Sir Henry and Henry Bedingfeld may be ordered to produce the deeds of sale of certain properties, in which his wife had an interest.

[3] EDMUND, Canon of Lierre, baptized 14 Aug. 1615 (ante, p. 14); died 2 Sept. 1680. His monument still exists in the Collegiate Church of St. Gomarre, see above, p. 82. He had been chaplain to the English Carmelite nuns at Lierre. His portrait is at Oxburgh, another at Darlington. He studied at St. Omers and Seville; visited Rome, when he dined at the English Hospice on September 24, 1644, together with "the Earl of Banbury, who was about to leave Rome," and Mr. Haggerston—Foley, vi. 626. He wrote two books, for which see Gillow, i. 165; Foley, v. 573.

[4] WILLIAM, born 31 December 1616; baptized 23 January 1617 (above, p. 14). He is said to have been trained to arms on the Continent under the Duke of Guise, and to have become a "Captain of the Guards." Captain William Bedingfeld "of Ashill" was sent up prisoner to London, 3 October 1655, as has been already mentioned above, p. 3. He died "28 January 1685," i.e. 1686, and is, I believe, buried in St. Giles's, Norwich. Foley found among the papers belonging to the Jesuits of this district, a note of certain masses to be said annually by the Fathers, who had received the benefaction of a farm valued at £100 from "Susan, wife of Captain William Bedingfeld, brother of Sir Henry Bedingfeld of Beck Hall." No further details. (H. Foley, Records S.J., v. 568 n.)

[5] JANE, born 26 April, baptized 22 May 1618 (above, p. 14). Married Richard Martin of Long Melford before the year 1634, between which time and 1647 she had ten children, of whom, however, four died infants, and she herself died after giving birth to her only daughter, Jane, 28 June 1647 (Wotton, Baronetage, iv. 522). In some editions of the Bedingfeld pedigree, however, it is stated that it was Anne who married Richard Martin, and Jane is given as the wife of Colonel Price, e.g. in Playfair's Baronetage, and the otherwise excellent pedigree printed by the Norfolk Archæological Society, Norf. Arch., vol. i. p. 157.

In the church at Oxburgh there is a monument to "Jane, the wife of Richard Martin, who departed this life the first day of February 1706. Requiescat in Pace." But the date (which would have made her eighty-eight years old and leave no room for Martin of Long Melford's second wife) shows this was a different person.

[6] ELIZABETH, was baptized 8 November 1619 (p. 14), and married William Cobbe of Sandringham (see Sandringham Past and Present, by Mrs. Herbert Jones), a colonel in the King's army, who died 1665. Elizabeth Cobbe died 1698, according to the family pedigree, but Foley, vi. 508, Addendum, says: "Buried at St. Giles, Norwich, 1684. She had two daughters, Carmelites at Lierre, professed together 2 February 1671; Mary (aged 22) died between 1709 and 1714, and Anne (aged 20) died August 10, 1690."

[7] MARIE. Baptized 10 May 1621 (ante, p. 14). There can be no doubt that she married Robert Apreece of Washingley (as the family pedigree states), and after his death Humphrey Orme. For there is among the papers of the Committee for Compounding (Calendar, p. 1778) a petition from her, 22 November 1647, begging to compound for the estates of her late husband, Robert of Washingley, who has left an infant son, Robert. This child eventually recovered the family property, and his line was afterwards given a baronetage, now extinct. The last survivor, I am told, bequeathed everything to the London Hospital. A Mary Apreece of this family married Richard Washington of York, who has been believed to be an ancestor of George Washington, the first President U.S.A., but this theory is now given up.

A more certain title to honour was the happy confession of his faith, which brought about Colonel Apreece's death. Bishop Challoner writes:—

"1644. This year, as Mr. Austin writes (under the name of William Birchley) in his Christian Moderator (1652) was Mr. Price, a Catholic gentleman, murdered at Lincoln in hatred of his religion. The story he relates thus: 'I remember an officer of my acquaintance, under the Earl of Manchester, told me that at their taking of Lincoln from the Cavaliers, in the year 1644, he was an eye-witness of this tragedy. The next day after the Town was taken, some of our (the parliament) common soldiers, in cold blood, meeting with Mr. Price of Washingley, in Huntingdonshire, a papist, asked him, "Art thou Price the Papist?" "I am," said he, "Price the Roman Catholic"; whereupon one of them instantly shot him dead."

This death fulfils all the conditions of true martyrdom, and the cause of his Beatification has therefore been admitted, and he is styled "Venerable" in the Decree of 1886 (see Pollen, Acts of English Martyrs, p. 382).

[8] JOHN, baptized 10 November 1624 (ante, p. 14). Foley describes him as "unmarried." The second baronet says, "My uncle John died 16 February 1685," and the Oxburgh register gives "John Bedingfield, Esq., [buried] Feb. 19, 1685" (i.e. 1686). Marwood gives his anniversary as the 18th.

There is at Oxburgh a picture of a young man in armour, which is reproduced by Miss Stone in her article in The Messenger of New York (September, 1906), with this inscription: "John Bedingfeld. Killed at the battle of Worcester, Aged 16." There is evidently some mistake here. John would have been 26 in 1651, the date of the battle, and he was not killed, but lived on, as we see, for over thirty-four years.

[9] ANNE. Her father gives no date for birth or baptism, but as he puts her name last on the second list, we may conjecture that she was younger than John. Her godparents were "My Daughter Beding. and Mr. William Paston."—"My Daughter Beding." may conceivably have been his own eldest daughter, but it would be more probably Mary Brooksby, the wife of his eldest son Thomas, if he was already married.

Besides this, there must have been one other son, and one daughter, for the monument speaks of "5 Sonnes and 6 Daughters."

2. Family of Sir Henry, the First Baronet.

He married Margaret, only daughter of Edward Paston of Horton, Gloucester, and in a petition dated 3 October 1655, he says he has "a wife and 9 small children" dependent on him. The votive picture shows three sons and five daughters, so one must have died young.

[1] HENRY, the second baronet. See p. 35.

[2] ELIZABETH, born 21 December 1636 (p. 22), married Thomas Wheatenhall of East Peckham, Kent, whose first wife, Lady Catherine Talbot, died 6 July 1656 (p. 90, n.). In the family pedigree she is marked as dying without issue, but she certainly had an heir, Henry, and was presumably also the mother of various daughters, nuns (p. 90, n.). Her brother has left out a figure from the date of her death, "My sister Wheatinhall died 24 Feb. 166—," which is confusing. Presumably he means some time before 1685, the next date clearly noted, certainly before 1698, the date of writing (above, p. 37).

[3] FRANCES married Richard Caryll of Harting, Sussex. A full description of the family will be found in Max de Trenqualeon, West Grinstead et les Caryll (1893), ii. 40, 97, &c. He was the younger brother of John, the secretary of King James II. at St. Germain, and created by him Lord Durford (ob. 1711). The second son was Peter, a Benedictine, the third Richard, on whom it consequently fell to make the best fight he could for the family estates, when William of Orange confiscated his elder brother's property. Frances and Richard had five children, whose descendants may be seen in Trenqualéon's second pedigree. He also gives at p. 97 a reproduction of their monumental inscription, which is here printed, p. 230. She died 4 September 1704, in the 69th year of her age.

[4] MARY married Thomas Eyre of Hassop, co. Derby, and Eastwell in Leicestershire. An account of this family will be found in J. Nichols, History and Antiquities of the County of Leicester, vol. iv. pt. i. p. 398, and ii. 167. As has been said, this family eventually purchased Bures Hall from Francis Bedingfeld, and there are a number of Eyre monuments in Holme Hale Church (see Blomefield). Mary was Thomas's second wife, and he had by her (besides one son by his first wife) ten children, several of whom were of some importance in the Catholic community of their day (Kirk, Biographies of English Catholics, pp. 71-73). Two of her daughters were nuns at Lierre (see p. 45 above). Henry, "counsellor at law," the eldest son, is mentioned by Marwood, p. 101; his monument is in Holme Hale Church. James Eyre (fourth son), a doctor, has also been mentioned, pp. 86, 88, &c. The third son, Francis (living in 1700), was also an M.D. Thomas and William (the second and fifth) were priests. Mary died in 1710, aged 67, and her monumental inscription has been given above, p. 230.

[5] ANNE, in religion Sister Anne of the Angels, professed 1670, died 18 February 1701, in the 50th year of her age. See above, p. 95.

[6] MARGARET, in religion Mother Margaret of Jesus, Carmelite nun of Lierre, of whom above, pp. 45, &c. Professed 1673, died 1714.

[7] JOHN, born 1651 (?), J.P. for Norfolk. This, I suppose, was during the reign of James II., who sometimes used his royal prerogative to dispense Catholics from the Test Oath, which had been devised to keep them out from this and other posts of trust. He enjoyed, during the life of his mother, the estate of Ashill Holt (p. 37), and I also find him described as of Coulsey Wood, Stoke Ash. He married Dorothy, daughter of John Ramsey (alias Dicks) of Wickmore, by whom he had two sons and two daughters, John (ob. 1729), Henry (ob. 1738), Frances (ob. 1718), Mary (ob. 1719). John died at Wickmore, 9 August 1693, ætatis 42 (?).

[8] EDWARD. "Edward Bedingfeld, 3rd son of Henry Bedingfeld of Oxburgh, Norfolk, knight (sic)—[Admitted] 27 April [1667]" (Registers of Admissions to Gray's Inn, ed. Foster). There are fifteen other Bedingfelds mentioned in this register, but none of them from Oxburgh. Mr. Foster adds this note—"Called to the bar 10-11 November 1688, on the recommendation of King James II., as signified by the Lord Chancellor, 25 June 1688 O.S. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas and youngest sister of Sir Clement Fisher, bart., of Packington, co. Warwick. His daughter Mary (ob. 1761) married, in 1721, Sir John Swinburne, bart," and their daughter Mary married another Edward Bedingfeld, who will appear in the next generation but one of the Oxburgh family (see p. 236).

This Edward is often mentioned in Marwood's Diary. Being perhaps the only Catholic then at the bar, it was natural that he should be often employed by Catholics, though not by them only (see p. 161). He was left the (? life interest) of the "Shingham" estates (p. 37). He was alive in 1711 (see p. 161).

3. The Family of Sir Henry, the Second Baronet.

He married, first, 20 December 1666, Anne Howard, daughter of Viscount Andover, afterwards Earl of Suffolk and Berkshire, but she died without issue, 19 September 1682, aged 32 years. She is mentioned with praise in the life of her cousin Mary Howard, by Alban Butler (Gillow, iii. p. 435).

They were educated together as children, and Mary eventually entered among the Poor Clares at Rouen (ob. 1735).

He married, secondly, Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Sir John Arundell of Lanherne. She died 13 April 1690, in her 35th year. Her children were—

[1] ELIZABETH, born in London, 26 February 1686 (see p. 36, for godparents), died at Brussels, 24 December 1699 (above, p. 55).

[2] MARGARET, born in London, 3 March 1687, married, in 1704, Sir John Jerminingham, 4th bart., who died without issue in his 55th year, and is buried in Bath Abbey, 17 June 1737. She survived till 1756, when she died at Winchester, but was buried (23 Dec.) with her husband.

[3] FRANCES, born in London, 14 November 1687 (p. 36). Married Sir Francis Anderton, last baronet of Lostock, whose estates were confiscated after the rising of 1715. She died without issue (? 1722).

[4] HENRY ARUNDELL, see pp. 161, &c.

4. The Family of Sir Henry Arundell, the Third Baronet.

Sir Henry married Lady Elizabeth Boyle, daughter of Charles, Earl of Burlington. She died 28 November, 1757, in the 63rd year of her age.

Their children were (see p. 242)—

[1] RICHARD, born dead, 28 May 1720.

[2] EDWARD, born 28 August 1721, died soon after.

[3] ELIZABETH, born 7 November 1722, died at Bristol 18 July 1763. She married (11 June 1749) Charles Biddulph of Burton, Sussex, who died 13 May 1784. They had issue (a) John, heir, ob. 1835 s.p., leaving Burton to George Anthony Wright. (b) Charles (living in 1817). (c) Thomas, ob. s.p. 1789. (d) Mary. Charles Biddulph married as his second wife Frances Apollonia, daughter of Sir B. Doughty of Snarford Hall, Lincoln, widow of Henry Wells (Berry, Sussex Genealogies, 219; ante, p. 201, n. 24).

[4] HENRY, born 27 October 1723, baptized at Chiswick, died at Norwich Grammar School, 6 September 1732.

[5] CHARLES, born 17 October 1724, buried at Oxburgh, 4 December 1724.

[6] MARY, born 27 September 1725, buried at Oxburgh, 20 April 1726.

[7] RICHARD, the fourth baronet (1726–1795).

[8] EDWARD, born 2 February 1730, educated at St. Omers under the name of Clay (p. 165), settled at York and married, 21 March 1754, Mary, daughter of Sir John Swinburne of Capheaton (see pp. 208, &c.). Their ten children were—(a) John, b. 26 Dec. 1754, he joined the Royal Navy. (b) Mary, 15 May 1756, became a nun at Ghent, whose flight is mentioned above (p. 208, n. 159). (c) Anne, b. 21 March 1758, m. Thomas Waterton of Walton Hall. Their son Charles was the celebrated naturalist. (d) Thomas, b. 18 February 1760, educated at Liège, entered Lincoln's Inn, and became a conveyancer, for no Catholic could yet be called to the bar. He also wrote poetry of considerable merit. His life in the Dict. Nat. Biog. iv. 113. Ob. 5 Nov. 1789. See p. 206, n. 128. (e) Edward, b. 13 February 1762; school at Liège; afterwards became partner in the house of the Martins at Malaga. See pp. 205–207, nn. 114, 121, 142. Edward, ob. 1802. (f) Anthony, b. at Bath, 7 Feb. 1764, ob. 31 May following. (g) Peter, b. 29 June 1765, ob. at Malaga. (h) Frances, b. 22 March 1768. (i) Helen, b. 26 March 1770. (j) Isabella, b. 29 August 1771.

5. The Family of Sir Richard, the Fourth Baronet.

He married Mary Browne, daughter of Anthony, Viscount Montagué. She died 17 September 1767 (see p. 201, n. 31), leaving issue, Richard, the fifth baronet, born at Bath, 23 August 1767 (see pp. 198–208, n. 30, &c.).

6. The Family of Sir Richard Bedingfeld, the Fifth Baronet.

He married Charlotte Georgiana, only daughter of Sir William Jerningham, Bart., of Costessy. She obtained the precedence of a baron's daughter after her brother George became Lord Stafford, and was appointed Woman of the Bedchamber to Queen Adelaide, many of whose letters to her are preserved at Oxburgh. Lady Charlotte was a lady of remarkable talents, both as an artist and as a letter-writer. Of her letters many are preserved, and have been published by E. Castle, The Jerningham Letters, 1780-1843; Excerpts from the Correspondence and Diaries of the Hon. Lady Jerningham and her Daughter, Lady Bedingfeld, 2 vols., 1896. Another selection has been published since in A House of Letters. She eventually retired to the convent at Hammersmith, and died 29 July 1854 (p. 227). He died 22 November 1829 (p. 244).

Their children were—

[1] FRANCES, born 19 and baptized 25 April 1796 (p. 214); married William, 11th Baron Petre, and died in childbirth, leaving two sons and two daughters.

[2] MATILDA, born 8 April, and baptized at Oxburgh, 10 April 1797 (above, p. 214). Married George Stanley Cary of Follaton, Devon, and had seven children, whose issue is still living. Matilda died 28 January 1881.

[3] AGNES MARY, born at Oxburgh, 31 August 1798, and baptized there on the same day, married Thomas Molyneux Seel of Bolton Park, Lancs.

[4] HENRY RICHARD, the sixth baronet, born 10 May 1800, and baptized same day at Oxburgh (p. 216); and buried there.

[5] CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH, born 9 January 1802, and baptized at Oxburgh the same day. She became a nun at Bruges, where she lived for nearly fifty years.

[6] CHARLES RICHARD, born at Yarmouth, 5 September 1803, and baptized there the same day. He married Miss Waterton, who, however, only lived a few months. Charles entered the Austrian Army, ob. s.p.

[7] EDWARD RICHARD, born at Norwich, 20 January 1805 (p. 217), and baptized on the 24th. He was a midshipman on H.M.S. Spartiate, but fell overboard on the night of the 2nd October 1823, and was never heard of again.

[8] FELIX was in the Colonial Civil Service, and lived at Mauritius, &c. ob. s.p. His wife Mary, daughter of Admiral Chad, is still living.

7. The Family of Sir Henry Richard Paston-Bedingfeld, Sixth Baronet.

He married, 30 August 1826, Margaret, daughter of Edward Paston of Appleton, the last of the Pastons of Paston, and afterwards, 16 April 1830, assumed the additional name and arms of Paston. He was declared by the Committee of Privileges of the House of Lords to be one of the co-heirs of the barony of Grandison. He died 4 February 1862, and is buried at Oxburgh; she died 30 January 1887, and is also buried there. Issue:—

[1] HENRY GEORGE, the 7th baronet, born at Norwich, 10 May 1830, married Augusta, only child and heiress of Edward Clavering of Callaly, Northumberland; died 18 January 1902.

Sons living—(1) HENRY EDWARD, the present baronet, b. 29 Aug. 1860; m. Sybil, dau. of Henry Lyne Stephens, and has issue, Margaret Mary, b. 24 Ap. 1905; Henry Stephen Augustus, b. 5 June 1906. (2) Henry Richard Clavering. (3) Charles. (4) Edward Arthur, ob. 1878. (5) William. (6) Frank. (7) Hubert. Daughters—(1) Alice, m. (a) James Lacon Hammet, Vice-Admiral (ob. 1905), has issue—Cecil Ferdinand James and Violet Irene May; m. (b) Clement La Primaudaye, Commander R.N.—(2), (3) Mary Maud & Edith Mary, Nuns of the Congregation of the Holy Child. (4) Augusta, died young.

A. Religious and Sacerdotal Vocations in the Bedingfeld Family.

These notes are written in a lady's hand, in a small paper note-book, without name of author or date. It will be noticed that Mary Bedingfeld, professed at Ghent in 1775 (above, p. 210), and whose flight to England in 1794 is mentioned by Sir Richard, is not alluded to here, the latest date explicitly mentioned being 1782. It would not be very difficult, nowadays, to extend the lists here given to twice or thrice their length.

From the book of the Commemoration of the deceased Religious, who were professed in the Monastery of the Immaculate Conception of the glorious Virgin Mary, Mother of God, of the Holy Order of St. Benedict in Ghent.

Anno Domini 1636 the 14th of December, Dame Thecla Bedingfield* most happily departed from this, to a better world in the 6th year and a half after her holy Profession, her most remarkable virtues were meekness, peace, fortitude, patience.

Dame Thecla called Phillipa at holy Baptism was daughter to Francis Bedingfield Esq^r, born at Redlingfield in Suffolk, came to the trial of holy Religion about the age of 19 or 20. She was of a pure sanguine complexion, very straight and proper of personage, and lovely in corporal features, but concerning that which is much more prizable, she was of a rare interiour temper, having a gracious sweet & most meek disposition, And withal of a great courage in suffering, enduring much with invincible patience. Amongst others in this kind by the surgeons incisions. Once her knee was cut and sliced into sippits. She had always a great confidence in Almighty God and in her last sickness was overheard to ask herself, "How comes my good God to give me so much of his favour I having deserved so very little at his hands?" To which she again answered, "The attending to myself and meddling with nobody else, doth give me this Serenity," and that she would warrant all those who were eminent in this practice, that they would enjoy great peace of mind at their deaths.

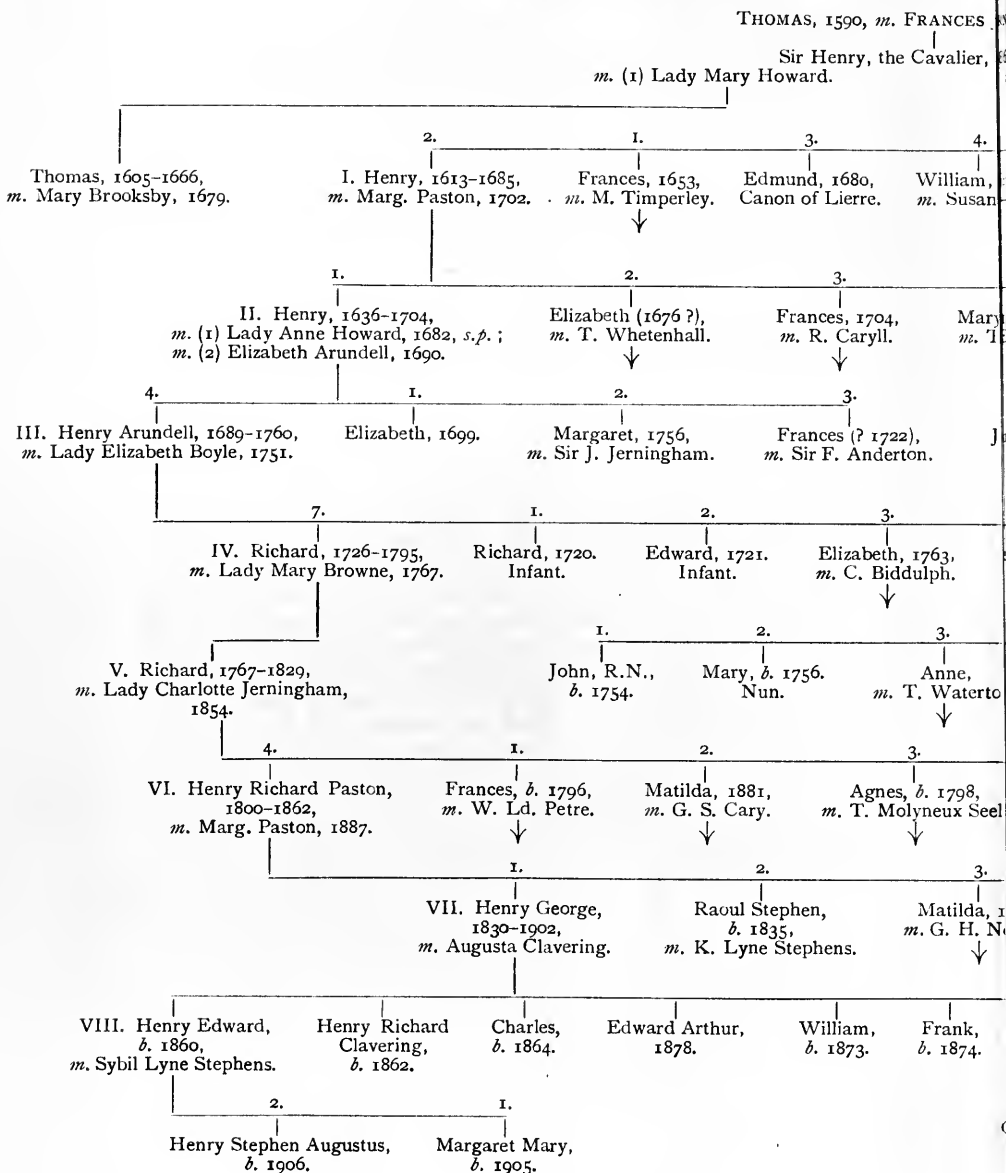

After the happy decease of our dear & Rev^d Dame Hieronimia Waldegrave this our beloved Sister in Xt, Dame Thecla, was by the Convent's Election chosen to succeed her in Infirmary Office, which she performed with great satisfaction, recreating the sick with such innocent and pleasant conversation, that it was an excellent divertissement to see her mix mirth and piety with such a dexterous facility. She had been likely, if God had preserved her health and life, to have exhibited very good assistance to the whole Community in the well discharging of any Office, especially being so free from any passion; but the divine Majesty was pleased to call this his dear Spouse in the prime of her youth to himself by a consumptive fever, which was most vehement towards the end. Tollerating this her last sickness according to her wonted sweetness, peace, and patience, receiving most piously and in her perfect senses all the rites of the Holy Church, after that having again Absolution & the assistance of all the devout prayers commonly said for those in their last Agony, she fell into a slumber at that very time translated from death to life and happily slept in our Lord, within the Octave of his glorious Mother's Immaculate Conception, leaving the whole convent most sensible of our loss. She was so grateful to every one and truly beloved of all for her virtuous life, innocent, sweet and gentle disposition.

Anno Domini 1637, Feb: 1st.

Dame Eugenia Bedingfield* most happily departed this life, having been professed the 26 June 1633. Her most notable virtues were a singular devotion to our B^d Lady and a great desire of self contempt etc.

Our dear Sister in Christ Dame Eugenia, in baptism was called Margaret, daughter to Tho^s Bedingfield gent: commonly called Captain Bedingfield. She entered very young to the trial of holy Religion; after her profession she was much employed in humble Offices having charge of the Cellar a long time together, which she performed not only laboriously but also very cleanly and exactly. She had many interiour difficulties and trials, in the midst of which she was ever most punctual in her examins, and was observed to be always more than ordinary serious at those times. She bore a great respect to her (even immediate) superiors and loved them entirely. She often affirmed that she hated to think that any one should value or esteem her, for she never had done ought that deserved estimation. Her frequent petition to Almighty God was to die. At last she told one in confidence a little before (or in) her last Sickness, that our Lord had granted her long request. She died of a Consumption, being strengthened with all the last Sacraments, happily expiring upon the eve of the B^d Virgin's Purification, to whom she had been singularly devoted, and had reposed a great confidence in her, as the Mother of mercy and advocate with her Blessed Son sweet Jesus.

In the year of our Lord 1642, on the 20th of February, most happily departed this life Sister Thecla† Bedingfield; her most notable Virtues were Humility and Sincerity.

Sister Thecla, in Baptism called Margaret, daughter to Mathew Bedingfield Gent: She came to Religion about the age of 16; her complexion pure fair, her constitution sickly, having past a year scholar she very joyfully received the Holy Habit going on in the trial of Religion with courage and zeal, being Consumptive holding out as long as possible without going to the Infirmary, for she would not yield nor shrink under the burden of her Cross, but did all those humble Offices wherein the Novices were tried for the exercise of humility and mortification without a desire of being exempted. She was of a Candid and down right plain dealing humour, not at all moved by human respects, and had a great contempt of the world even from her tender years, never giving way to be set vainly out by curling her hair and the like, but always when she was called to be dressed in that sort, like her other sister, she would weep most bitterly, and beg with many tears to be excused. This resolute spirit in point of virtue she maintained in Religion. In time of her last sickness, being sent to the Infirmary she behaved herself very religiously and was most willing to Die; humbly begging to be admitted to make her Vows of holy Religion, which she obtained and did perform them very piously, receiving devoutly also all the last sacraments; having all the rites and prayers done for her, she was bid to repose, and in that disposition slept in our Lord most quietly without any other sign, so that those who were kneeling in prayer about her did not perceive when she Died.

* She is 14th in the list of professed printed in the Annals of Ghent, p. 197.

† Thecla (olim Margaret) Bedingfeld is No. 41 in the list of professed of Ghent (Annals, p. 198). Her sister Mary was also a Benedictine nun, who died abbess at Brussels, 21st April 1665 (Foley, ibid.).

10. Magdaline, a Carmelite Nun.
11. Mary, Abbess of the Austin Nuns at Bruges.

Names of other members of the Bedingfield family who have joined the Religious Orders.

Lucy—4th Prioress of the English Theresians at Antwerpe. She died of the small-pox the 6th january 1650—aged 36, in the 1st year of her Government.

* This very remarkable generation of nuns is more fully described in Foley, v. 568-582, with the assistance of the Bruges MSS. According to him the order of the sisters should be: (1) Helena, (2) Margaret, (3) Philippa, (4) Elizabeth, here omitted, (5) Winefrid, (6) Catherine, (7) Frances, (8) Grace, (9) Magdalen, (10) Anne, (11) Mary, of Liège. The second Mary here mentioned, of Bruges, was a niece, the only daughter of the eldest son John. Elizabeth, who is omitted above, married Sir Alexander Hamilton Knight. He died after two years, and the widow entered the Austin nuns at Bruges. Her only daughter had entered before her, and was her Novice Mistress. Foley prints eulogies of Margaret and Anne (see 3 and 9 above) from the Chronicles of the Poor Clares, as well as of Frances and Winefrid, nuns of the Original Institute of Mary, from Leitner, and the Annals of St. Mary's Convent, York.

Mary—second Superior of the English Franciscan Nuns at Rouen. After governing the House eleven years, she died the 6th March 1670.

Anthony Bedingfield S.J. born 28th of October 1697: entered the Noviceship of the Jesuits at the early age of 17, and died at Liège 2^d June, 1752.

Bonaventure Bedingfield O.S.F.—Exprovincial—died in S^t Bonaventure's Convent at Douay 5th June 1782—aged 84.*

B. Letters from Dame Margaret Bedingfeld.

It may be well to mention here that there are, besides the letter quoted at p. 20, two other letters from Dame Margaret to Lady Yarmouth in other volumes at the British Museum. The first, dated from Beck Hall, 25 July 1675, describes her pleasure at a visit to Oxnead. "A terrestrial paradise! 'Miss' and my cosen Thomas are both prettier than I can expresse; nor did I ever in my life find anything in poetry or painting half so fine as what I saw that day at your Ladyship's house." The second letter, dated 13 March [? 1676] "salutes the Ld. Lieutenant of Norfolk." On the 23rd of August [1676] a letter from Sir Henry, the second baronet, dated "Oxborow." Lord Yarmouth, it seems, had been robbed, perhaps with violence, so the letter concludes with the prayer, "The diuell take him who designs my Lord Yarmouth mischief—is y^e daylie prayer of, My Lord, your obed. Kinsman, Henry Bedingfeld, Junior" (MS. from Roydon Hall, Additional 36,988, ff. 104, 106, 123).

C. From Mrs. Raoul Bedingfeld's Collection.

The following extracts are all taken from a large volume of notes on the family, bound in black.

1. The following paper, in M^r Marwood's hand, is at Oxburgh.

6. Abstract of the Will of Father Thomas Hawkins, S.J.

This will was made during the suppression of the Society, which may perhaps have influenced its terms. The original is preserved at Stonyhurst.

Bequeaths to Sir Richard Bedingfeld his horse & accoutrements, & his snuff box given him by Lady Montague. To Master Bedingfeld all his fishing tackle.

“Whereas M^{rs} Agnes Buckley has had a great deal of trouble with me for some years, & has attended me very assiduously in the doctoring of my sore leg; I give her my watch, seals &c. belonging to it. I give her also my linen apparel viz. shirts, handkerchiefs, stockings &c. also my flower pots & all my glass and crockery ware.” Residue to Re^{vd} M^r Thomas Angier of Norwich (sole executor in trust for M^{rs} Norfolk).* 11 Aug. 1783. Signed & sealed. ii. 116.

7. A Letter from Charlotte (Jerningham), Lady Bedingfeld.

June 1797. I was this morning at Bodney (the Convent) † for the first time since my Poor Aunt's Death, after my visit I sent my carriage on under pretence of walking some part of the way, but in reality to look for her grave in the neighbouring Church Yard. Do you remember the Church? It stands in a ruinous state on a hill not far from the convent. . . . A few scattered trees shade the base of the mount, and one solitary cottage, the sole remaining of the village, stands near the top. I directed my steps to the north side of the Church where the earth newly sodded up immediately showed me the Place where the cold remains of this revered Relation lie. Four nuns have died since their arrival at Bodney, they are buried in a Row, a piece of wood over each with the Initials of their name & O.S.B., R.I.P. . . . I could have stood for hours musing over these simple memorials of those who were born to Riches & Grandeur, but who preferred a Life of meek Retirement, & now sleep in peace under the green sod surrounded by lowly Peasants. "How the rank grass waves o'er the cheerless ground."

[This old tree used to be near the Sluice on the east wing, where the beech tree now is ; it was blown down in a gale in 1852.]

8. Yarmouth.

When Nelson came to Yarmouth in 1801 with the Fleet, Sir Richard, who was then living there on the South Deans (which can always be recognised by the "battlemented" garden wall erected by Lady Charlotte in imitation of Oxburgh!) presented a gold Cup at the races.

9. Reminiscences of Sir Richard, the Fifth Baronet.

The "good Sir Richard" died of an apoplectic stroke at Windsor, at the White Hart Inn in 1829. There are two old women living at Oxburgh (& perhaps more) who remember him, old M^{rs} Bennet & M^{rs} Lambert. The latter is over 90, M^{rs} Bennet is 85. The latter remembers Sir Richard's coffin being moved from the Bedingfeld Chapel in the parish Church to the private chapel built by his son, the 6th Bart. in 1835. A letter written by Charlotte Lady Bedingfeld to her son Sir Henry in 1839, evidently alludes to this.

"Your letter of yesterday, my dear Henry, overcame me very much, but the feeling that remains, is one of great comfort! Your act of filial piety seems to smooth my path to the tomb, and as you & yours advance on, you will rejoice in what you have done! I should like to know the day & the hour. I feel, as it were, a weight off my mind, for I had not courage to talk over the subject, & my thoughts knew not where to go. R.I.P."

10. The Restoration of Oxburgh.

Sir Henry Bedingfeld found his ancestral home in a terribly dilapidated state, when he succeeded in 1829, but almost immediately began the improvements. He set his heart upon restoring the place, & sacrificed all his time, money & amusements to this object. Oxburgh would certainly have become a ruin, but for his efforts. His ambition was to restore it to its former glories as much as possible. In all this, he was ably seconded by his wife, who became as enthusiastic in the cause as Sir Henry himself. They commenced by employing Buckler, the celebrated architect, who had built the present Costessey Hall. Gothic windows were put in to the North front, to replace the modern sash windows, & gothic chimneys took the place of the square modern ones. In the general decay of the place, the ground surrounding the moat was used by cattle who came to drink, & cottages were dotted about in the Park. Sir Henry restored the outside wall of the moat, & with the assistance of a clever Scotch gardener, called Anderson, the present fine Terrace was made & the French garden on the east side of the mansion. The Towers & the roof were releaded. The Chapel then consisted of two Cottages in the village, & Sir Henry built the present Chapel in the grounds, from designs by Pugin. This Chapel was finished in 1837. Sir Henry also built the present Presbytery, the Chaplains having formerly lived in the house now known as the "Bedingfeld Arms," in Oxburgh village. By dint of money payments & legal means Sir Henry got rid of the cottages in the Park & turned the Ferry Road further from the House. He collected abroad a very large amount of old carved oak & had it converted into panellings etc., & the present north Dining Room & Staircase were principally constructed by him. The beautiful carved oak & painted "Triptych" over the altar in the Chapel was brought from Bruges by Sir Henry, who had thoroughly artistic tastes. At a later period, just before his death, Sir Henry built the present S.E. Tower, entirely from his own designs. He also built the two pretty lodges, one on the Stoke Road, & the other at the Chinese Gate, besides the Keeper's Lodges in Oxburgh Wood & at the Hythe (but the latter was taken from him, as it had been built on Charity land by mistake). In the year of his 2nd son's birth, he planted the "Warren Hills" which now form the continuation of the Oxburgh Wood.

MONMOUTHSHIRE RECUSANTS, 1719

CONTRIBUTED BY JOHN HOBSON MATTHEWS

THE Process Book of the Quarter Sessions of the Peace holden in and for the County of Monmouth in 1719 is in the Usk Sessions House. It is a long folio paper book, bound in calf.

The names printed in roman letters, immediately under the place-names, are those against whom proceedings were to be taken in 1719. Those following in italics were added later, probably in the two or three following years. The district covers only about half the county, and does not include the town of Monmouth. The long list of convicted recusants printed in Cath. Rec. Soc. vol. vi. contains no names belonging to this county; so this may be held to be supplementary, although of a later period.

OBITUARY NOTES OF ABBESS NEWSHAM OF ST. CLARE'S ABBEY, DARLINGTON

THE present Lady Abbess of St. Clare's Abbey, Darlington, obliged me with the loan of a letter to Frances, in religion Mother Mary Agnes Newsham, from her mother. Born 4 Oct. 1812, she died 16 Oct. 1889, having been abbess twenty years. She was the only child of John Newsham (brother of Monsignor Charles Newsham, D.D., the former distinguished President of Ushaw College), a farmer at Everingham and land-steward to Mr. Marmaduke William Constable-Maxwell and Sarah, dau. of Thomas Smith, a freeholder of Howden and farmer at Everingham, by Mary, dau. of Robert Wilson, a farmer, and Anne _____, his wife. John Newsham d. 10 June 1814, and his widow subsequently mar. William Lambert, also a farmer, the last name on the list; the initials "S. L." being thus accounted for as Sarah Lambert.

The letter shows that the future abbess had applied to her mother for the dates of the deaths of her relatives that she might keep their obits regularly.

Such obituaries are not only interesting and of genealogical value, but are specially appropriate with the registers of Everingham in which so many of the names appear.

The paper is endorsed in pencil "Mother M. Agnes Newsham's relations." I am indebted to my cousin, Miss Mary Agnes Smith, cousin of Abbess Newsham, for particulars of the persons named. Some of the names appear also in the registers of the neighbouring mission of Holme on Spalding Moor (Cath. Rec. Soc., iv.). J. S. H.

Ann Wilson Died 12th of July 1759, she was my Grandmother, a Convert from Quakerism.

Sarah Whitaker,* on 15 of July 1779, my Aunt, my Mother's sister.

Robert Wilson, on 24 of October 1791, my Grandfather, he was a Convert.

John Newsham, on 10 of June 1814, your dear Father.

Elizabeth Norriss,† on 13 of July 1824, my Aunt, my Mother's sister.

Stephen Easingwood, 18 of February 1826, your Uncle,‡ he was a convert.

Mary Smith,§ 16 of June 1832, my Mother.

Rachel Smith,|| 6 of Nov^r 1836, your Aunt.

Thomas Smith, 22 of Nov^r 1837, your Grandfather.

* Daughter of Robert Wilson.

† Daughter of Robert Wilson.

‡ Uncle by marriage to Ellen, dau. of Thomas Smith.

§ Daughter of Robert Wilson and wife of Thomas Smith.

|| Rachel, dau. of John Dunwell, farmer of Harswell, who in 1807 voted for the County in right of his freehold at Kirk Deighton. She was a convert, and the first wife of John, only son of Thomas Smith.

Ellen Easingwood,* 13 of March 1848, Everilda's Mother, a Convert.

Rev^d Mathew Newsham, 20 of May 1848.

Rev^d Thomas Smith,† 5 of June 1850, your Cousin.

Robert Smith,‡ 15 of July 1851, your Cousin.

Edward Joseph Smith,§ 25 of February 1857, your Cousin.

William Lambert, 20 Jan^{ry} 1858.

Dear Frances, I hope I have not transgresst by sending this in lent; I should not have sent this now, only your Cousin Ellen's Anniversary is on Thursday.|| Mass will be said for her on Friday; adue, all is well, kind regards to Rev^d Mother Abbess.¶

S. L. [Sarah Lambert]

* Ellen Lofthouse, who mar. Thomas, son of Stephen Easingwood by Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Smith. She had five children—Stephen, Edgar, Alfred, Everilda, and Joseph.

† A deacon mentioned in C.R.S., iv.

‡ A brother of the previous one.

§ Another brother.

|| Ellen Easingwood's anniversary is given on 13 March, which in 1862 occurs on a Thursday. This supplies the date of the latter, within a few days. Mrs. Lambert's mortuary cards show that she died on 23 January 1869, aged 82.

¶ Miss Elizabeth Leadbitter was Abbess from 1856 till her death on 23 Dec. 1868.

NO. IV

EVERINGHAM PAPISTS, 1767

THIS list of "Papists" was printed in the Northern Genealogist, iii. 6-8, from returns made to the Archbishop of York. The place where deposited is not given, but in a later part of the same volume other returns are described as "In the possession of the Archbishop of York at Bishopthorpe." It was therefore doubtless made there by the late Mr. Alfred Gibbons, a notable genealogist and antiquary, the editor of the publication. It gives some idea of the Catholics resident in the parish of Everingham at the time, and useful information which does not appear in the registers.

NO. V

CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF ST. MARY'S DOMESTIC CHAPEL, EVERINGHAM PARK, YORKSHIRE

CONTRIBUTED BY JOSEPH STANISLAUS HANSON

THE Register Book, now at Somerset House, and numbered "York 105" outside, and "44 York" inside, is a folio paper one, vellum bound, of about 360 pages, of which only 46 at the front, one of confirmations about two-thirds of the way through, and four of marriages and deaths at the end, reversed, are used. It is in good condition, and has been copied by me, by permission of the Registrar-General. My thanks are also due to Mr. A. R. Bellingham, Superintendent of Records, and his staff for their attention. The blank-form certificate is filled in as follows in italics:—

The annexed or accompanying Book is the original Register Book of Baptisms which has been kept for the Roman Catholic Chapel called S^t Mary's, n^r Pocklington, situate in the Parish of Everingham in the County of York founded about the year a Domestic Chapel from the reign of Edward the 6th. A public Church opened in 1839. The Book sent has been from time to time in the custody of the Clergymen for the time being, of the Chapel; it is sent to the Commissioners from the immediate custody of the Clergyman of S^t Mary's Church in the Parish of Everingham who has kept it since 1814 as the appointed Pastor of the place.

Signed the seventee[n]th day of October 1840.

Matthew Newsham, Clergyman or Officiating Minister.

Another set of Registers, in the possession of the late Lord Herries, has been compared with those at Somerset House. They differ in some respects, and end in 1800. They are evidently older, being written on six and a half sheets of paper folding 10½ x 6 inches; the half sheet containing pages 1 and 2 being loose, the rest sewn together. They are written on all the twenty-six pages, and there are no signatures on the first eight, but on the ninth and following, "T. G.," "T. Gur.," or the fuller "T. Gurnall" appear. The only description at the head is "Begun by John Bennet Minister. 1771." The particulars are slightly different, and inversions of phrase, the first reading, "Baptised John Dolman of Pocklington Son to W^m and Elizabeth Dolman. Godfather was Robert Dolman. Godmother was N. Dolman Grandmother. April y^e 1st."

As in this case and others there are additions to and variations from the Somerset House registers; being of more or less importance, these have been added in italics within circular brackets, as "(at Everingham)", "(Nancy)" in the second baptism. The three particulars are not divided, the first consisting of one baptism, two marriages, and one death. For many reasons it seemed preferable to print from one register—the most extensive.

It has been matter for regret that these registers could not be printed during the lifetime of the late Lord Herries, our first President, who took great interest in them, as evinced by his lending his own copy, to say nothing of his accepting the office of first President, when the Society consisted of only seventy members. As late as 16 April 1908, his Lordship wrote to the contributor of this paper:—

"I am glad to hear so good an account of the progress of the Record Society. My sister wrote to me the other day that she met in York a few weeks ago an old lady, Miss Hunter, aged 87. The old lady used to live near here [Everingham Park], & she said her grandfather, named Chambers, used to ride over here for Mass every Sunday from Cranswick. It is at least 16 miles from here. On looking over an old baptismal register of F^r Gurnall's, I see in 1776 he baptised at Cranswick the infant son of Thomas & E. Chambers, & in 1779 he baptised there another son. It is rather an interesting corroboration of her story!"

Mr. Gillow, the Hon. Recorder, has added the following particulars of the mission, the missionaries, and its supporters in the past.—J. S. H.

The manor of Everingham, in that parish, in the division of Holme-Beacon, East Riding of Yorkshire, three miles WNW. of Market-Weighton, was carried by Barbara, daughter and heiress of Sir John Sothill, to her husband Sir Marmaduke Constable, of Flamborough, whose descendants made Everingham their principal residence till the family became extinct in the male line upon the death of Sir Marmaduke Constable, 4th Bart., in July 1746, aged 64. The estates then devolved upon his great-nephew William, 2nd son of Sir Carnaby Haggerston, Bart., and grandson of Sir Marmaduke's sister Anne, wife of William Haggerston, son of Sir Thomas Haggerston, of Haggerston Castle, co. Northumberland, Bart. William Haggerston assumed the additional name of Constable, and married, Oct. 17, 1758, Lady Winefride Maxwell, only surviving daughter and heiress of John, Lord Maxwell, who had assumed the title of Earl of Nithsdale upon the decease, in 1744, of his father, the attainted 5th Earl of Nithsdale and 9th Baron Herries. Upon his marriage Mr. Haggerston-Constable assumed the additional name of Maxwell. The Scottish barony of Herries descended to the late Marmaduke Haggerston-Constable-Maxwell as 12th Lord Herries, who was created Baron Herries in the United Kingdom in 1884. The Scottish barony is now held by his elder daughter, Gwendolen, Duchess of Norfolk.

During the reign of Elizabeth the Constables temporised in matters of religion, but in the early years of the reign of James I. nearly all the family were reconciled to the ancient faith, some by the Rev. James Sharpe alias Pollard, a priest who came to the mission in Yorkshire from the English College at Valladolid in 1604, was banished in 1607, and subsequently became a Jesuit, and others by Fr. Richard Holby alias Fetherston, S.J., including the head of the family, Sir Philip Constable, Knt., whose conversion seems to have taken place after the rest of his family, about 1612. After this it is most probable that the chapel at Everingham was regularly served by a priest.

From this period the family suffered intensely for their faith, both in fine and imprisonment, and many of them devoted their lives to the service of the Church as priests and nuns. Sir Philip died July 14, 1619. Two of his sons entered the English College at Rome, Henry and William. The former had been reconciled by Fr. Sharpe, and was admitted into the college under the alias of Robinson in 1611, being then 24 years of age. He was ordained priest in 1618, came to the mission in 1619, and no doubt would occasionally say Mass at Everingham. William also assumed the alias of Robinson upon entering the college in 1613 at the age of 23. He left in 1613, but remained in Rome, and it is questionable if he became a priest. Their nephew Robert, son of Sir Marmaduke Constable who died in 1632, at the age of 19 entered the college at Rome in 1616 under the alias of Salvin, subsequently became a Jesuit, and served the mission in Yorkshire and Lincolnshire for fourteen years, dying at Liège in 1678. He also used the alias of Tyrwhitt, the name of his paternal grandmother, the wife of Sir Philip Constable. His elder brother Sir Philip, and his younger brothers Michael and Marmaduke took an active part in defence of their sovereign. Lieut.-Col. Michael, educated at Rome, was slain at Hopton Heath; and Captain Marmaduke, standard-bearer to the Earl of Lindsay, lost his life at the battle of Edgehill. Sir Philip was created a baronet by Charles I. in 1642, and on account of his loyalty and faith his property was sequestrated by the Commonwealth and sold under the Act for the Sale of Delinquents' Estates. The baronet lived to see the Restoration, dying Feb. 25, 1664. Two of his younger sons and a daughter, Barbara, joined the Benedictine Order. Dom Philip Constable, alias More, was a convictor at the English College at Rome, and left in 1643 to serve in the royal army. After the decline of the royal cause he went to Douay College to resume his studies for the Church, and took the oath there in 1648. Eventually he joined the Benedictines and was professed at St. Gregory's in 1660, came to the mission in the north, probably at times serving at Everingham, and died in 1680. The other brother, Dom Thomas Augustine Constable, born at Eagle Castle, a residence belonging to his father in Lincolnshire, was professed at St. Gregory's in 1649, likewise came to the mission in the north, and no doubt occasionally said Mass at Everingham before his transference to the south in 1677 and his death in 1712. Other priests in the family who most likely occasionally served here were FF. Marmaduke, John, and Robert Constable, S.J., who died respectively in 1750, 1740, and 1739. It is probable that shortly before the death of the first baronet, in 1664, he obtained as his chaplain—

Rev. Robert Dolman, a young priest ordained at Rome in 1658, who left the English College for the mission in 1660. He was the eldest son of Philip Dolman and his wife, a daughter of Sir Walter Vavasour, of Hazlewood Castle, co. York, Bart., and he was born about 1633. His grandparents were Sir Robert Dolman, of Pocklington, and his wife Eleanor, daughter of Sir William Mallory, of Studley. Little of his missionary career is known, save that he was chaplain to Sir Philip's son and successor, Sir Marmaduke Constable, the second baronet. A priest named "Bankes" is said to have been chaplain at Everingham a little later. The name was evidently an alias, and may be identified with—

Rev. Nicholas Metcalfe alias Bankes, ordained priest at the English College at Lisbon, whence he set out for the English mission, Aug. 16, 1674. He probably adopted his alias after his uncle or relative, the Rev. Peter Metcalfe, third son of Anthony Metcalfe, gent., of Stanwick parish, by Ellen, daughter of Robert Lambert, of Oulton, Esq., who went to Douay College under the alias of "Bankes," thence left with the first colony for the college at Lisbon in 1628, where he used the alias of Nelson; was there ordained priest in 1633, returned to Douay, and thence came to England in 1634, finally dying in Holborn, London, Dec. 26, 1671. Mr. Nicholas Metcalfe was on the roll of the northern infirm clergy fund between 1674 and 1691.

Dom John Bede Potts, O.S.B., born in Northumberland, probably at Trew hitt, in the parish of Rothbury, in 1674, was professed at the English Benedictine Abbey at Lambspring, May 21, 1691, and after being cellerarius, came over to the mission in 1701. He was for some little time in York, and subsequently removed to Whenby, where he appears to have been in 1715. Two years later, in 1717, he appears as chaplain at Everingham, and under the Act of 1 George I. cap. 55, to oblige Papists to register their names and real estates, returned an annuity of £10 out of Rothbury, "settled and confirmed to me for life by Act of Parliament passed in the reign of her late Majesty." The family had associations with Rothbury from an early period, and was well connected. One of them, of Trew hitt, married Ursula, daughter of Alexander Selby, of Biddleston Hall, Esq., by Joan, daughter of Sir Ephraim Widdrington, Knt., of Ritton. Dom Bede Potts was probably his grandson, as likewise William Potts, of Castleheads, co. Cumberland, gent., who as a Catholic non-juror in 1717 registered property at Rothbury of the annual value of £124. William's wife was Anne Charlton, of the Hesleyside family, and his son George, born in 1699, after studying at Douay went to the college at Rome in 1716, but left without taking the oath in 1719, and returned to England. Another member of the family, the Rev. Luke Potts alias Cooper, son of George Potts and his wife Mary Robinson, was born at Throckley, in Northumberland, in 1717, was ordained priest at Douay, March 21, 1744, and left the college for the English mission, Aug. 2, 1745. He was placed at Ugthorpe, but on Dec. 16th, during the persecution following on the raid of Prince Charles Edward in that year, he was arrested on suspicion of being a priest, and committed to York Castle. In 1750 he was placed in charge of Thropton, in the parish of Rothbury, where he died, Aug. 16, 1787. His relative, the Rev. Henry Joseph Potts, born Aug. 16, 1772, son of John Potts, and his wife Anne Storey, of Dancing Hall, co. Northumberland, was ordained priest at Lisbon, Dec. 16, 1795, left the college for England Sept. 12, 1798, and died at his home, Dec. 4, 1800.

In June 1728, Bishop Williams, V.A.—N.D., made his visitation at Everingham, and gave confirmation to forty-four persons in the chapel, Dom Bede Potts being in charge of the mission. Shortly afterwards Sir Marmaduke Constable went abroad, and during the time that he was residing on the Continent, between 1730 and 1740, kept up an interesting correspondence with his good chaplain at home, which is still preserved at Everingham. Dom Bede was appointed Definitor of the Province in 1721, and received the titular dignity of Cathedral Prior of Durham in 1733. He continued to serve Everingham mission until his death, which occurred on June 21, 1743, at the age of 69. His patron, Sir Marmaduke Constable, 4th and last Bart., survived but three years, dying abroad in 1746.

Dom William Laurence Hardesty, O.S.B., is the next chaplain on record. He was born in Middlesex in 1714. He had three paternal uncles priests—John, born 1681, who became a Jesuit, and died in 1752; William, born 1683, who was ordained priest and came to the mission from Douay in 1711, and died at Carlton Hall, Yorkshire, in 1766; and Thomas, born 1686, who was professed a Benedictine under the name of Adrian, and died at Lambspring in 1761. They were sons of William Hardesty, of Norwood, co. Surrey, Esq., by Mary, daughter of Thomas Tempest, of Roundhay Hall, co. York, Esq., and relict of William Hargreaves, of Carlton, co. York, Esq. All three used their mother's name as an alias when they went to college, and they appear to have been born in Yorkshire. William, the nephew, followed his uncle Dom Thomas Adrian to Lambspring, where he was professed, April 15, 1732. After his ordination in 1738, he came to the mission in Northumberland or Durham, whence he was transferred to Easingwold in Yorkshire, where Snow, in his Benedictine Necrology, places him between 1743-54, and then at Grantham before coming to Everingham. Notwithstanding, there is evidence of his serving Everingham in 1751. Ten years later, in 1761, he left Everingham for Spetchley Hall, co. Worcester, the seat of the Berkeleys, and finally returned to his monastery at Lambspring, where he died, Feb. 18, 1787, aged 72.

Fr. Francis (alias John Walter) Fleetwood, S.J., would appear to have come to Everingham about 1755, for in the "Papist Returns" made to the Archbishop of York in 1767 he is declared to be of the age of 63, and to have been resident with Mr. William Haggerston-Constable for the previous twelve years. Mr. Fleetwood was born in London, March 9, 1699, being the son of a gentleman in attendance on the exiled royal family at the court of St. Germain, where he was brought up. His father was a member of the ancient Catholic family of baronets seated at Calwich Hall in Staffordshire. From St. Germain Francis Fleetwood was sent in 1719 to the English College at Valladolid, where he assumed the name of John Walter Fleetwood. Soon after his ordination he came to England, and about 1726 was appointed head-master of Twyford School, near Winchester. Under his direction this celebrated school, where Alexander Pope, the poet, had been a student, passed through its most prosperous years. About 1732 Mr. Fleetwood resigned his charge, to the great loss of the school, and left Twyford for the mission at Paynsley Hall, co. Stafford, a seat of Lord Langdale. Thence he went to Liège to become a Jesuit, and joined the Society on June 30, 1735. Subsequently he returned to the mission in the London district, apparently came to Everingham in 1755, and probably stayed till 1771, when he retired to Liège, where he died, July 10, 1774, aged 75.

Dom John Placid Bennet, O.S.B., came to Everingham early in 1771, and commenced the registers in March of that year. He was born in Lancashire in 1741, and was professed at the English monastery at Dieulward in 1758, became subprior, and left for the English mission in 1771. In 1773 he returned his congregation at Everingham as numbering seventy communicants. He remained here till the end of 1779, or beginning of 1780, when he left for Paris to be chaplain to the English Benedictine nuns, an office which he retained till the following year. He then returned to the mission, and was at Lanherne in Cornwall, a seat of the Arundell family, from 1781-3; Linley, co. Salop, the seat of the Lacons, from 1783 till his removal to Beckford, co. Gloucester, the seat of the Wakemans, where he stayed till 1792; Hindley, near Wigan, in Lancashire, 1792-3; and finally at Liverpool, 1793, till his death, March 1, 1795, aged 53.

Dom Thomas Jerome Marsh, O.S.B., came to Everingham in 1780, but only stayed a short time. He was a native of Hindley, co. Lancaster, born in 1743, was professed at Dieulward in 1761, was subprior, and then came to the mission at Aberford, co. York, in 1780. In that year he came here, but shortly afterwards was recalled to Dieulward, and filled the office of prior from 1781 till 1785. He then returned to the mission, and served Tone Hall, Northumberland, the seat of the Hodgson family, 1785-7; Beaufront, in the same county, the seat of the Erringtons, 1787-8; Stockeld Park, Yorkshire, the seat of the Middletons, 1788-9; Lawkland Hall, in the same county, the seat of the Inglebys, 1789-90; Swinburne Castle, Northumberland, the seat of the Riddells, 1790-5; Holme Hall, Yorks, the former seat of the Lords Langdale and then of Lord Stourton, from 1795 till his death, Feb. 16, 1798, aged 55.

Dom Thomas Adrian Gurnal, O.S.B., came to Everingham in 1781. He was a native of London, born in 1742, professed at Lambspring in 1763, and ordained priest in 1767. He came to the mission in Northumberland in 1774, and served Capheaton Hall, the seat of Sir Edward Swinburne, 5th Bart., Beaufront, 1774-80, and Hesleyside, the seat of the Charltons, 1780-1, after which he came to Everingham, and remained till his death, Jan. 5, 1811, aged 68. He was Definitor of the Province in 1800, and held the titular dignity of Prior of Worcester from 1802.

Dom Edward Alban Clarkson, O.S.B., for a time served Everingham from Holme Hall after Fr. Gurnal's death. He was born at Goosnargh, Lancashire, in 1766, professed at Lambspring in 1787, and came to the mission at Holme Hall in 1798, retaining the chaplaincy till his death, July 16, 1815, aged 49, and was there buried.

Dom Stephen Hodgson, O.S.B., became chaplain at Everingham in 1811 and remained till 1813. He was born at Pontop Hall, Durham, in 1763, and after studying at St. Gregory's, Douay, and at Lambspring, where he was ordained in 1788, he came to the English mission, and was at Follyfoot, Yorkshire, 1791-5, Lawkland Hall, 1798-1800, Netherton, Lancashire, 1800-4, Foxcote, Warwickshire, the seat of the Cannings, 1804-11, in which latter year he came here. He did not stay very long, however, for about the end of 1813 he removed to Woolton, Lancashire, where he died, April 9, 1816, aged 53.

The mission was then transferred to the charge of the secular clergy in the person of—

Rev. Matthew Newsham, son of Thomas Newsham, of Westby-cum-Plumpton in the Fylde, Lancashire, who was admitted at Crook Hall, Durham, April 29, 1802, whence in 1808 he migrated with the college to Ushaw, where he was ordained priest, and shortly afterwards, in 1814, was appointed to Everingham. During his incumbency a fine cruciform church, after the plan of the Maison Dieu at Nismes, 70 ft. by 30 ft., the interior being decorated with fluted Corinthian columns, and the altar being fashioned in rich Italian marbles, was erected by Mr. William Haggerston-Constable-Maxwell. It was solemnly opened on July 10, 1839. Mr. Newsham continued to serve the mission until 1842, when he withdrew for three years on sick leave. Meanwhile the mission was served by the Rev. J. Brown, 1842-4, and the Rev. Richard Aloysius Browne, 1844-7, the latter of whom stayed two years after Mr. Newsham's return to Everingham in 1845. In 1847 the mission was transferred to the charge of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate, and FF. Perron and W. Walsh joined Mr. Newsham, who continued to reside at Everingham till shortly before his death, which occurred at Houghton Hall, the seat of the Langdales, May 20, 1848.

In 1848 Fr. Robert Cooke, O.M.I., was placed in charge, and whilst here founded the mission of Howden. He was assisted by FF. Ambrose Tamburini, John Noble, W. Walsh, and Peter Grey; Fr. P. Bary took Fr. Grey's place in 1850. In 1851 the Fathers were—James Egan, Joseph Arnoux, S. Walsh, and Peter Grey; in 1852-3, Joseph Arnoux, Peter Grey, and John Dalton; in 1853-4, Joseph Arnoux, Charles Jolivet, and Joseph Bary; in 1854-5-6, Joseph Arnoux and Pat. Hickey, in which latter year the Oblates withdrew from the mission, and the charge was resumed by the secular clergy as follows:—

NO. VI

CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF ST. ELIZABETH'S CHURCH, RICHMOND, SURREY

CONTRIBUTED BY MISS AGNES DOLAN AND JOSEPH S. HANSOM

THE registers are in charge of the Rev. George Barrett, D.D., M.R., who fortunately found them in a "heap of rubbish" ready to be destroyed, when he took possession in 1901! The contents are now safely in print. He has kindly allowed us to copy and collate them down to the end of Fr. Peters' time, when they end conveniently two years after compulsory registration of birth on 1 July 1837. They extend to 24 Dec. 1854.

Except for wilful excisions they are in good condition, consisting of two books and one loose paper copy.

The first is a paper book $7\frac{3}{4}$ by $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches, bound in vellum, the pagination being given below. The first entry now extant is in 1794; but the first four pages have been cut out. The Rev. Dr. Barrett throws some light on these in his contribution to the Kingston and Richmond edition of the Shield of January and February 1905 (Salesian Press, Battersea). Quoting from a work entitled Anne Paule Dominique de Noailles, Marquise de Montague (Paris, 1864) he shews that Madame la Marquise gave birth to a son on the very day, Easter Sunday, 30 March 1793, on which the chapel was opened, and that his baptism was the first on the registers. He was named Alexander, the god-parents being Monsieur le duc de la Rochefoucault-Doudeauville and Mademoiselle Alexandrine de la Luzerne. It is not stated whether the baptism took place on the same day.

Supposing a page was given to the title, that the statement of persons and titles of celebrant, parents and sponsors, circumstance of exile, and witnesses was as long as the first extant entry, occupying a page and a half, we may perhaps assume that only few entries have been regrettably lost.

The second book is similar to the first, the paper being $7\frac{1}{2}$ by $6\frac{1}{4}$ inches. The first folio and the top of the second have been cut off, but the next is numbered one; so possibly no entries are lost. A single sheet, paged also two and three, has been sewn on page two, and indicated in the text.

The third is a loose paper copy paged 29 to 52, size $7\frac{3}{8}$ by $6\frac{1}{4}$ inches. This, being the same as part of the second book, is not printed; but some additions or variants are given in foot-notes. The dates are from 7 Jan. 1816 to 16 July 1838.

The registers of the neighbouring mission of Cheam are printed in C.R.S., vol. ii. Some names may recur here.

Mr. Gillow gives the following historical notes from his collections.

A. D. J. S. H.

"When, in 1501, Henry VII. had nearly rebuilt the old palace of the Plantagenets at Sheen, he renamed it Richmond, from his Tudor earldom of Richmond in Yorkshire, of which he was the second holder. It again became a favourite residence of the royal family, and this, combined with the natural beauties of the locality as well as its vicinity to London and Westminster, induced many Catholic families of position to settle here during the days of persecution.* Its accessibility by road or river made

* Sir Henry Bedingfeld, knight, mar. at Richmond 11 July 1609 Elizabeth Howe (as queried by Mr. Bruce Bannerman, the editor), who would be Elizabeth, dau. of Lord William Howard of Naworth Castle (Richmond Registers, Surrey Par. Reg. Soc.). If proof of residence, it might have been a temporary one of the bride's. The following burials look more like proofs:

1725 Apr. 28 dame Dorothy Bedingfeld.

1750 July 22 Mrs Henrietta Bedingfeld.

1751 May 26 Mrs Anne Bedingfeld.—J. S. II.

it a convenient place for priests in times of stress, and it is probable the Sacrifice of the Mass was more regular than can be actually proved.

The Rev. George Quinton alias Brooke served here during the reign of Charles II., and died here in 1685, his burial, as "Mr. George Brookes," being registered on 18 March.* He was a younger son of Joseph Quinton, of London, where he was born in 1619. He was sent to St. Omer's College in his sixteenth year, and thence proceeded to the college at Rome, where he was ordained priest, Jan. 27, 1647. He left Rome for the English mission on the following May 4, and ultimately settled at Richmond. It would appear that both the Jesuits and Carmelites were represented here at this period. The only names on record are as follows:—

Fr. Charles Trevanion alias Drummond, S.J., son of Charles Trevanion, of Caerhayes, co. Cornwall (by one of the daughters and co-heiresses of Sir Adam Drummond), who succeeded his grandfather, Sir Charles Trevanion, to the Caerhayes estate. Sir Charles' son, John, espoused Mary, sister of the first Lord Arundel of Trerice, and was slain in the royal army before Bristol. Fr. Charles, who was born about 1668, entered the Society of Jesus at Watten. He came to this district in 1704, and a little later is found residing at Marshgate, Richmond. About 1724 he got into trouble with his superiors, and for several years ceased to do missionary duty. Eventually, in 1730, he was reconciled, and died at Marshgate, according to the parish registers, † March 19, 1737, aged 70.

Fr. Christopher Conyers, S.J., was living "at Squire Neville's, Richmond Green, Surrey," in 1724, and apparently continued till his death, Aug. 29, 1730, aged 61.

Fr. Richard Moore, S.J., came to Richmond in 1731 from Holywell, co. Flint, and returned to the mission in North Wales in 1740, where he died in 1753, aged 81.

No other name of a Jesuit in Richmond has been preserved.

A small colony of French emigrés obtained permission to open a chapel, and this was accomplished on Easter Sunday, 30 March 1793. One of their priests, the Abbé Richet, is said to have been in Richmond this year, but whether as missionary or not, is not apparent.

When Fr. Thomas Monk came is not clear; but the registers make it certain that he was the missionary on 10 April 1794, when he records the first existing baptism by the emigré Bishop of Angoulême, in his presence. As he cannot be identified as a secular priest, it is possible that he was one of those Discalced Carmelites who came from the noviciate at Tongres, were ordained at Liège, and are only referred to in Carmelite records under their religious names. In an old obituary appears the notice of the death at Richmond on 24 March 1797 of Fr. Edward Palmer, Discalced Carmelite, aged 46. Fr. Monk signs the last entry in the first book on 13 April of the same year. The second is started before the end of that year by—

Rev. James Peters, who was then in charge of the mission. He followed his brothers, Charles and Andrew, to Sedgley Park School in 1771, and like them proceeded to Douay College in 1775, where he was admitted on Jan. 29. There he was ordained priest in 1789, and on May 25 of that year set out for the English mission, and was placed at Midhurst, Surrey, where he remained till he came to Richmond.

In 1822 a new church in the Vineyard was erected in the classical style by Miss Elizabeth Doughty. According to tradition the architect and builders expended the enormous sum of £24,000 upon what was but a small and inconvenient building. ‡ Part of this may have been due to costly foundations, but this could not have accounted for such an extravagant sum, and it is said that the benefactress was so disgusted with the result of her outlay that she never re-entered the church after her first inspection. It was opened by Bishop Poynter, V.A.—L.D., on July 6, 1824, and it was dedicated to St. Elizabeth, the patron saint of the foundress.

* Richmond Registers, Surrey Par. Reg. Soc.

In 1839, owing to advancing years, Mr. Peters withdrew from the mission, and retired to St. Leonards-on-the-Sea, where he died at All Souls, as the temporary chapel was called, Jan. 25, 1848, aged 84.

Rev. Robert S. Hodgson replaced Mr. Peters in the Vineyard in 1839. Mr. Hodgson went to the college at Old Hall Green in Feb. 1821, was ordained priest on Sept. 19, 1829, and was retained on the professorial staff till 1831. He served in London, finally at Hammersmith, whence he came to Richmond. Here he remained till 1848, then went to Golden Square, in 1850 to Southwark, 1851 to Weybridge, 1855 to Woolhampton, and 1869 to Upper Holloway, till death, Dec. 27, 1871.

Rev. John Baptist Hearn, 1848–51, assisted by Rev. Henry Rymer 1848–50, Rev. J. G. Wenham 1850, Rev. Robt. S. Hodgson again, Sebastian Faenza, and Wm. MacHarron during Jan.–Aug. 1851.

Rev. John Tilt, who had been educated at Sedgley Park and Old Hall, whence he came on the mission in 1839, was at Sheerness till 1842, Canterbury till 1846, and Tichborne till 1851, when he came to Richmond. He remained till 1856, when he retired in ill-health and died at Norwood, Sept. 10, 1859.

Rev. John Bernard Bagshawe came in 1856. He was ordained priest at Oscott, March 15, 1851, and had been Chaplain to the Forces during the Crimean War, 1854–6. In 1882 he received the honorary degree of D.D., and in 1887 became a member of the Southwark Chapter. He was the author of The Threshold of the Church, and other well-known works. At one period it was intended to have raised him to the episcopacy. He remained here till his death, Oct. 31, 1901.

NO. VII

THE CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF THE DOMESTIC CHAPEL AT CALLALY CASTLE, NORTHUMBER-
LAND, 1796-1839

CONTRIBUTED BY THE REV. MATTHEW CULLEY AND MR.
FRANCIS M^CININLY

CALLALY CASTLE, in the parish of Whittingham, a seat of the ancient Barons of Warkworth, in Northumberland, and Clavering, in Essex, was granted to a younger son, Sir Alan de Clavering, about the reign of Edward I., and continued the residence of his descendants until the family became extinct in the male line, upon the death of the late Edward John Clavering, in 1876, when the estate passed to his daughter and sole heiress, Augusta Lucy, who married in 1859 the late Sir Henry George Paston-Bedingfeld, 7th Bart., of Oxburgh Hall, co. Norfolk. The Claverings were staunch to the ancient faith, and equally so to the royal cause, and hence suffered the usual penalties of fine, imprisonment, and even death. Sir John Clavering, Knt., in the quaint language of the Visitation of 1666, ob. a. 22 R^x. Caroli I. [1646-7] in carcere pro firma fide erga dictum Carolum in London, and his eldest son, Col. Sir Robert Clavering, Knt. banneret, who raised at his own expense two regiments of horse and foot, besides some extra troops of dragoons, ob. in exercitu R^x. a. 19 Car. I. [1643-4] patre vivente et caelebs, aet. 26 annor. Sir John's fourth son, Thomas, was admitted into the English College at Rome in 1649, under the alias of Conyers, was ordained priest, and became chaplain to the Benedictine nuns at Pontoise, where he died in 1694, aged 68. Ralph, the third son, and Sir John's successor, also zealously espoused the royal cause, suffered imprisonment, and was forced beyond the seas, but eventually returned with Charles II. There is a tradition that there was always a domestic chapel within the castle, but the names of the earlier chaplains, if any, have not been preserved. Those on record are as follows :

Rev. Arthur Salthouse alias John Nateby, a member of a family which long kept the Saltcoathouse near Lytham, in the Fylde. He took the college oath at Douay in 1637, and in due course was sent to the mission in the north. He was serving at Callaly in 1647.

Fr. George Thomas Gibson, O.P., came as chaplain to Ralph Clavering in 1686, and in the following year, on Aug. 16, Bishop Leyburne confirmed 282 persons in the chapel at Callaly. Fr. Gibson withdrew to Stonecroft, Hexham, in 1693.

Fr. Henry Widdrington, S.J., born 1668, a younger son of William, second Lord Widdrington, of Widdrington Castle, co. Northumberland, apparently came to reside with his brother-in-law, John Clavering, whose wife, Anne, was Lord Widdrington's daughter, about the opening of the 18th century. He remained at Callaly till his death, Nov. 16, 1729, aged 61. Shortly before, in the same year, Bishop Williams made his visitation and confirmed 89 in the castle chapel.

Fr. William Kingsley, S.J., of Ellingham Hall, a seat of the Haggerstons, succeeded Fr. Widdrington in 1729, but probably served the two missions, as he is said to have died at Ellingham in 1734.

Fr. Robert Petre, S.J., was soon afterwards appointed to the chaplaincy, and was here in 1732-3, but removed to Hopcar, Bedford Leigh, co. Lancaster, the seat of the Sale family, in 1733-4.

Fr. Robert Turner, S.J., succeeded, and was still here in 1736.

Fr. Ignatius George Kingsley alias George Clayton, S.J., succeeded

Fr. Turner and removed to Haggerston Castle, the seat of Sir Carnaby Haggerston, Bart., about 1742. He was followed by—

Fr. John Darell, S.J., during whose chaplaincy the foundation-stone of the existing chapel at Callaly Castle was laid by the squire of the period, bearing the following inscription: An. Sal: MDCCL. Rodul: Clavering posuit. This was the year of Jubilee, 1750, and Fr. Darell sent to his superiors the following report of his mission:

“My salary from this place is £10. 10s. per annum . . . Mortuaries and other perquisites £1. The number of my customers [congregation], including all ages, about two hundred and eighty. Of my own gaining [converts] about half a dozen.”

In Sept., 1752, Fr. Darell was appointed rector of St. Omer's College, and his place at Callaly was taken by—

Fr. Joseph Walmesley alias Plessington, S.J., born in 1715, a grandson of John Walmesley (ancestor of the Westwood family, and younger son of Richard Walmesley, of Sholley Hall, co. Lancaster, Esq.) and his wife Margaret, daughter of William Plessington, of Dimples Hall, Esq. He adopted the alias of Catesby when he went to Valladolid in 1733, but was always known as Plessington on the mission. He had previously been at Oxburgh Hall, co. Norfolk, the seat of Sir Henry Arundell Bedingfeld, Bart. During his time, in July, 1773, Bishop William Walton gave confirmation to 201 persons in the castle chapel. After many apostolical labours he grew weakish, zealously crazy, objected to Mrs. Clavering riding on Sundays, and retired early in 1774 to Alnwick, where he lived with Mr. Strickland, and died in 1781. He was succeeded by—

Fr. Joseph Earpe alias Dunn, S.J., who arrived from Liège shortly before May, 1774, and left for Preston in April, 1776. His apparent successor was—

Fr. Joseph Closette, S.J., who, according to Foley, came about 1779. He left in Sept., 1781, for Wardour Castle, the seat of Lord Arundell, where he was killed by a fall from his horse in the following month. He was the last Jesuit to fill the chaplaincy at Callaly. He was succeeded by—

Rev. Thomas Storey, son of John Storey, of Northumberland, and his wife Frances Selby, born about 1738. He was apparently younger brother of Dom John Joseph Storey, O.S.B., who died in 1799. He commenced his course at Douay College on Oct. 1, 1752, and having been ordained priest in 1764 was sent in that year to teach at St. Omer's College, then conducted by the secular clergy. Thence he came to Callaly, but in 1786 left for Hexham, and died whilst on a visit to Newcastle, Feb. 2, 1795, through fright on being attacked by some women whilst returning home after supping with Sir John Lawson.

The cause of Mr. Storey's departure from Callaly was the state of embarrassment into which the then squire, Ralph Clavering, had got his affairs, which obliged him to break up his establishment and sojourn abroad. This was occasioned partly by burdens left by his father, and partly through the poverty of the relations of his own three wives. Hence his brother Nicholas, then in charge of the mission at Old Elvet in Durham, came to Callaly as chaplain and general manager of his brother's affairs.

Rev. Nicholas Clavering, son of Ralph Clavering, Esq., by Mary, daughter of Nicholas Stapleton, of Carlton and Ponteland, Esq., was admitted into Douay College, Aug. 19, 1739, and like his brother Ralph passed under the name of Stapleton. Ralph, born in 1727, came in third class rudiments from St. Omer's College, Sept. 21, 1741, and left Douay, July 5, 1747. Nicholas was ordained priest in Dec., 1752, and left the college for the English mission on Aug. 8, 1753. It does not appear where he was first stationed, but in 1759 he succeeded Mr. Thomas Chambers at Cliffe Hall, and in 1768 he replaced Bishop Maire as incumbent of Old Elvet. He was a capitular, and was elected archdeacon, Oct. 16, 1770. He was also agent of the clergy in Bishopric and Northumberland, an office which he resigned when he went to Callaly Castle in Oct., 1786. He was also grand-vicar to Bishop Petre in the northern district. His brother Ralph died in 1788, some time after which he went to assist Fr. Ralph Hoskins, S.J., at Brough Hall, and stayed on after his death till Aug., 1794, and subsequently joined the English Benedictine nuns from Dunkirk at Hammersmith, where he died, Oct. 18, 1805. It is not certain when he ceased to serve Callaly, but the first entry in the registers was signed by the French émigré—

Rev. Nicholas Alain Gilbert, who came over to England in 1792, and having served at Berrington and Pontop Hall came here for awhile in 1796, and commenced the registers. Upon leaving he appears to have gone to Wooler, and thence to Whitby, whence he returned to France in 1815.

Rev. Thomas Stout was sent to Sedgley Park School in 1777, whence he proceeded to Douay College, where he was admitted Sept. 4, 1780, ordained priest in 1792, appointed prefect general, and was imprisoned with the rest of the collegians during the Revolution till liberated Feb. 25, 1795. He then came over to England and was placed with the Rev. J. Griffiths at St. George's Fields chapel, Southwark, and thence came to Callaly Castle in 1796. Upon the removal of Mr. Robert Hemsworth from Thropton, Mr. Stout was appointed to that mission, where he arrived Sept. 23, 1797, and remained till his death, July 26, 1828, aged 62, being buried in front of the altar-rails of his chapel. Whilst at Thropton he established the first mission at Carlisle in 1798. He was succeeded at Callaly by—

Rev. Thomas Gillow, born 1769, fourth son of Richard Gillow, of Singleton, co. Lancaster, was sent to Douay College in May, 1784, and during the Revolution was permitted with the rest to withdraw to Esquerchin, Aug. 9, 1793, whence he returned to the college at Douay on Oct. 11 and made his escape on the following day. In November he arrived back home, and in December went to the college at Old Hall, Herts, whence he removed to Crook Hall, Durham, in Dec., 1794. There he was ordained priest, Apr. 1, 1797, and after remaining at the college as a professor for four months, was appointed to the chaplaincy at Callaly Castle, where he arrived Aug. 23, 1797. On Sept. 4, 1809, Bishop William Gibson confirmed 49 in the castle chapel. In 1817 Mr. Gillow was elected by the Holy See vicar-apostolic of the West Indies, with the title of Bishop of Hypsopolis in partibus infidelium, and his appointment was approved by his Royal Highness the Prince Regent. Mr. Gillow, however, declined the episcopacy through motives of health. On June 11, 1821, he left Callaly to take possession of the new mission at North Shields, where the chapel had just been erected by his cousin the Rev. James Worswick. Three days later Mr. Gillow preached the opening sermon. There he remained till his death, March 19, 1857, aged 87. Whilst at Callaly, in 1807, he published "Catholic Principles of Allegiance Illustrated," and subsequently printed "A Sermon," several controversial lectures, and "A Letter to the Rev. Wm. Hendry Stowell on the Rule of Faith," North Shields, 1830, 8vo.

Rev. Edward Crane succeeded, 1821-4, and during his time, on June 13, 1823, Bishop Smith confirmed 50 in the chapel. He then went to Bishop Wearmouth 1825-34, supplied at Callaly again for a time in 1829, St. Patrick's, Manchester, 1834-5, Kilvington, near Thirsk, 1835-59, being appointed a canon of Beverley in 1853, and died Feb. 28, 1861.

Rev. Andrew Macartney, born about 1789, served his country during the Peninsular war as an officer in the commissariat department, and at the age of thirty became a convert to the faith. In 1820 he went to Ushaw College to study for the Church, was ordained priest in 1824, and left the college to take Mr. Crane's place at Callaly. This he exchanged for Lea, Lancashire, of which he took charge on Jan. 10, 1826, but only remained thirty-four days, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Richard Albot on Feb. 14. Thence he went to Sheffield, as assistant to the Rev. Richard Rimmer, upon whose death in 1828 he succeeded to the charge of that important mission. He remained there till about the end of 1829, when he went to assist the Rev. James Fisher at Ashton-under-Lyne and Dukinfield, where he continued till 1833. His subsequent career was at Bellingham and Hesleyside, Northumberland, 1833-4; Crathorne, Yorkshire, 1834-6; and Osmotherley, Yorkshire, 1836. About the end of the latter year he returned to Callaly till 1838; then removed to Great Eccleston in the Fylde till Aug., 1839; chaplain at York Bar Convent, 1839 till Feb., 1841; St. Patrick's, Manchester, as chaplain to public institutions in the city, but went to reside in Salford in 1842; thence to Egton Bridge, Yorkshire, 1844-52; then went to reside at Grosmount, York, till 1857; Bishop Thornton, Yorkshire, 1857-9; in which latter year he retired to Ushaw College as a convictor; Ellingham, Northumberland, 1860 till 1873 (with the exception of an interval of retirement in 1866-7), when he finally withdrew from missionary life to Ushaw College, where he died after a painful illness, Jan. 27, 1874, aged 84.

Rev. Walter Maddocks, another Ushaw priest, succeeded Mr. Macartney at Callaly in Jan., 1826, but left in 1827, after which he served at Sunderland, Ashton in the Willows, &c., and finally died in retirement at Smethwick, near Birmingham, April 15, 1869.

Rev. Nicholas Brown succeeded, 1827-33, but during his term the chaplaincy was temporarily served by Rev. Edward Crane, previously mentioned, 1829, Rev. Thomas Middlehurst, a Lisbon priest, 1830, and Rev. James Albot, supplying from Thropton, 1833. Mr. Brown's subsequent career was at Longhorsley, 1833-4; Hesleyside, 1834, till he erected the chapel and presbytery designed by Bonomi at Bellingham in 1839; Wigton, Cumberland, 1851-65, being elected canon of Hexham in 1855; Carmel House, Darlington, 1865-74; St. Peter's, Constitution Street, Aberdeen, 1874-5; retired 1875; Carmel House again, 1875-7; retired 1877, till death in the Isle of Man, Aug. 31, 1878.

Rev. Joseph Richard Curr, son of John Curr, of Belle Vue, Sheffield, was sent to Sedgley Park School in 1802, and thence to Crook Hall, Durham, where he arrived July 27, 1806. He was ordained at Ushaw, and was appointed assistant to the Rev. Rowland Broomhead at Manchester. He subsequently served Stockton-on-Tees, 1822-6, and Ashton-in-Makerfield, 1826-30, then retired to the monastery of La Trappe in France, and afterwards to Ushaw College, till his appointment to Callaly in 1833. Here he remained till 1837, when he was transferred to Sheffield, his native town. In 1839 he removed to Blackburn, and in 1842 to Whitby. When the epidemic of typhus fever broke out in Leeds, Mr. Curr offered his services, and went to St. Anne's, where he fell a martyr of charity to the terrible scourge, was removed to Huddersfield, and there died, July 1, 1847. Mr. Curr's pen was constantly engaged in controversy, and whilst at Callaly, amongst other pamphlets, published "An Address to all Sincere Protestants in Coquetdale and Whittingham Vale," and "The Fox and the Goose; or, a Comico-serio Address to the Good People of Whittingham."

Rev. Andrew Macartney, as previously related, resumed the chaplaincy 1836-8.

Rev. Charles Brigham, born 1802, son of William Brigham, of Brigham Hall, co. York, Esq., went to Stonyhurst College, Oct. 12, 1814, and after completing his classical studies passed through a full course of natural philosophy, ethics, and theology under some of the ablest professors of the Society of Jesus in Italy, France, and Switzerland. In due course Mr. Brigham was ordained priest, but abandoning his association with the Jesuits, he was placed at Congleton, Cheshire, 1831-3; Bolton, Lancashire, 1833-4; Kilvington, 1834; St. Patrick's, Leeds, 1834-5; Blackbrook, Lancashire, 1836; Sheffield, 1836-7; and became chaplain at Callaly in succession to Mr. Macartney in 1838. After a short stay he left Callaly and subsequently went to King's Lynn, Norfolk, 1839-40, where he wrote "The Enormities of the Confessional, as put forth by the expelled Student of Maynooth College, briefly examined, and the student himself exhibited in his true character," London (1839), 12mo. In 1840 he was presented by Edw. Riddell, Esq., of Cheeseburn Grange, to the mission of Dodding Green, near Kendal, which gave rise to a long dispute with the bishop as to Mr. Riddell's rights. Whilst here he erected a tasteful addition to the rectory, bearing his initials and the date 1840, and he also raised the ceiling of the little chapel, which he decorated and ornamented. He remained at Dodding Green till 1858, when chancery proceedings were taken. He then went to the Monastery of Mount St. Bernard in Leicestershire for a spiritual retreat, and either there or in some other monastery he made an edifying end.

Rev. William Henderson, born 1808, ordained priest at Ushaw, Dec. 17, 1836, supplied temporarily after Mr. Brigham's departure in 1838. He was at Dukinfield, Cheshire, 1836-40; Birkenhead, 1840-6; Yealand, Lancashire, 1846-87; and then retired to Lytham, where he died, Jan. 30, 1893, aged 84.

Rev. Joseph T. Howard came from Biddleston in 1838, withdrew in ill-health in 1839, and died June 7, 1840.

Rev. Thomas Ord, a Northumbrian, ordained priest at Ushaw in 1839, succeeded Mr. Howard in that year. He remained here till 1866, when he removed to Thropton, and remained there till his death of gangrene of the foot, Oct. 7, 1900, aged 88. He was a strong character, and was a justice of the peace for his county for many years.

Rev. Patrick Thomas Mathews, ordained priest at Ushaw, Sept. 20, 1862, was first at Houghton-le-Spring, and then at Durham, 1862-5; Easington, 1865-6; succeeded Mr. Ord at Callaly, 1866-7; Sacriston, 1867-9; Burnopfield, Newcastle, 1869-79; St. Joseph's, Gateshead, 1879-94; Cheeseburn Grange, 1894 till death April 5, 1899.

Rev. Matthew William Gibson succeeded Mr. Mathews in 1867-71.

Rev. James Farrell, 1871-2.

Rev. Aloysius Hosten, 1872-3.

Rev. Joseph Arquis, 1874.

Rev. James Stark, 1875-7.

Rev. William Gillow, born Jan. 6, 1835, second son of Joseph Gillow, of Ribby and Preston, Esq., J.P., went to Ushaw with his brother John, Nov. 19, 1846, and was ordained priest, Sept. 21, 1861. He was at Hutton House, Castle Eden, 1861-6; Wolsingham, 1866-9, during which time he opened the mission at Tow Law in 1867 and served it from Wolsingham; North Shields, 1869-73; and Barnard Castle, 1873-7. After the Clavering estate was sold by Lady Bedingfeld to Major Brown in the latter year, Mr. Gillow, a grand-nephew of the Rev. Thomas Gillow, who was chaplain here 1797-1821, was appointed to the mission with the intention of transferring it to the village of Whittingham. Mr. Gillow, however, was in a very bad state of health at the time, and was unable to do more than remove the fittings and furniture of the castle chapel to temporary premises in the village. Early in the following year he was obliged to retire from missionary work on sick leave. He and his brother, the Very Rev. Henry Canon Gillow, were the last priests to say Mass in the old chapel at Callaly Castle. In 1879 Mr. Gillow took charge of the mission of Berwick-on-Tweed, where he remained till his death, Nov. 30, 1880, and was interred at St. Ninian's, Wooler.

After Mr. Gillow's withdrawal from Callaly Castle, the mission remained vacant until a site was obtained from the Earl of Ravensworth, the expense of the chapel and presbytery being defrayed by Sir Henry and Lady Bedingfeld, who also provided for the maintenance of the fabric and resident priest. The chapel, in the Norman style, was finished in Feb., 1881, and on March 1st of that year the Rev. C. Jckenroth took charge of the mission. The fine stained-glass window over the high altar was the gift of Mrs. Clavering, who died Feb. 13, 1881, at Tynemouth. She also left £600 for the benefit of the mission. The succeeding incumbents are as follows :

Rev. Patrick Walsh, 1882-8.

Rev. William Taylor, 1888-1900.

Rev. Henry Cartmell, 1900-1903.

Rev. Matthew Culley, 1903-7.

Rev. James Thompson, 1907 to date.

When the estate of Callaly was sold in 1877 the principal furniture and ornaments of the chapel were carefully preserved, and on the completion of St. Mary's Church at Whittingham, were removed there. A silver chalice has the date 1671, with the inscription, "Memento Jane et Mariæ Clavering"; this piece of plate, together with a monstrance of probably the same period, bears the Clavering crest. An ancient representation of the Crucifixion, which is said to have originally come from the parish church at Whittingham, and which on the dismantling of Callaly Chapel went to Oxburgh, has been recently presented to St. Mary's, Whittingham, by Augusta, Lady Bedingfeld, sole daughter and heiress of the late Mr. Clavering of Callaly. I am indebted for the account of the chaplaincy to Mr. Gillow, and for some facts to the Rev. Matthew Culley of Coupland Castle, who had for a time charge of the mission at Whittingham, and caused a copy to be transcribed of the Callaly register. The Rev. James Thompson has collated the proofs with the original which is in his custody.

In the original the date of the Baptism is noted regularly in the margin, opposite the entry. This has been here omitted. In very many cases a further marginal note gives the locality of the parents' home. This note has been enclosed in square brackets and transferred to the body of the entry.

CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF THE DOMESTIC CHAPEL
AT SLINDON HOUSE AND ST. RICHARD'S CHURCH, SLINDON, SUSSEX

CONTRIBUTED BY MAJOR SKEET

THE Slindon registers, contained in a paper book $10\frac{1}{2}$ by $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches, bound in leather, appear to have been transcribed from an older one 8 by $6\frac{1}{4}$ inches in vellum, and from numerous scraps of paper, most of which are still preserved at Slindon. They seem to have been copied by a scribe under the Rev. John White at the end of 1823 or beginning of 1824, the entries after his arrival being in the same hand, whilst his signature is quite different. The Rev. Joseph Silveira evidently made all the entries from his first on 16 Aug. 1829. My transcript was made by permission of the Rev. James Duggan from the later book, which includes the loose paper notes, not in the earlier one, but it has been compared with both, and finally Mr. Alexander Johnston has corrected it. Mr. Gillow kindly supplies the following historical sketch.

F. J. A. S.

"Slindon, an appendage to Pagham, was granted to the see of Canterbury by King Cedwall, A.D. 680, and subsequently became an archiepiscopal residence. Cardinal Stephen Langton died here July 9, 1228. Archbishop Winchelsey held an ordination in his chapel at Slindon in 1298, and many historical epistles were dated hence by various occupants of the see. In the reign of Elizabeth, the estate was obtained by Anthony Kempe, whose first wife was Anne, daughter and coheirress of John, Baron Conyers of Hornby, by Maud, daughter of Henry Clifford, Earl of Cumberland, (by whom he had a son Henry, who died sine prole,) and his second, Mary, daughter of Sir Edward Gage, K.B., of Firlle Place, co. Sussex, by whom he had three sons and two daughters. Anthony Kempe was the second son of Sir William Kempe, of Ollantigh, in the parish of Wye, co. Kent, whose ancestor Peter Kempe, of Wye, in 1344-5, was the second son of John Kempe through his marriage with a daughter of the house of Nevill, barons Nevill of Raby. One of Peter's grandsons was the famous Cardinal John Kempe, successively archbishop of York and Canterbury, born 1380, died 1454, by whom Slindon was occupied in his latter capacity. Either Anthony Kempe or his son and successor, Sir Garret Kempe, rebuilt the mansion, and alterations and additions were made by later inheritors, but traces of the ancient palace still exist. Sir Garret married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Edward Caryll, of Warnham, co. Sussex, and had four sons, all of whom died in their father's lifetime. The eldest, John, ob.s.p.; the second, Philip, married Frances, daughter of Sir John Webb, of Odstock, co. Wilts, and left a daughter and heirress, Catherine, wife of Thomas Eyre, of Hassop Hall, co. Derby, Esq.; the third, Thomas, likewise left an only daughter, Mary, wife of George Heneage, of Hainton Hall, co. Lincoln, ancestor of Lord Heneage; and the fourth, Garret, had a son, Anthony, and a daughter, Martha, a Benedictine nun professed at the English convent at Ghent, April 18, 1661. Anthony married his cousin Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Gage, of Firlle, Bart., and had several sons, of whom Anthony succeeded to the estates, and Henry, born in 1672, became a Jesuit and died in 1737. Anthony, the son, was twice married, first to Anne, daughter of Henry, 5th Viscount Montagu, and secondly to Jane, daughter of the Hon. Charles Stourton, and sister of Charles, 14th Lord Stourton. His daughter and eventual sole heiress, Barbara, married in the chapel at Slindon House in 1749 James Bartholomew Radcliffe, commonly called Lord Kynnaid, nephew of the unfortunate third and last earl of Derwentwater, who succeeded his maternal grandfather as third earl of Newburgh, and died at Slindon in 1786. He was followed by his son, Anthony James Radcliffe, fourth earl of Newburgh, born at Slindon in 1757 and died there s.p. in 1814. The latter's widow continued to reside at Slindon till her death in 1861, and was buried in the church of St. Richard at Chichester, of which she was the principal founder. The estate passed to Lord Newburgh's cousin, Francis Eyre, of Hassop Hall, whose father and namesake, of Warkworth Castle and Hassop Hall, married Mary Frances Gulielma, daughter of Charles Radcliffe, brother of the last earl of Derwentwater, by his wife the Countess of Newburgh, daughter and heiress of the second earl of Newburgh, Viscount Kynnaid, and Baron Livingstone. Francis Eyre then assumed the title of Earl of Newburgh, which upon his death in 1827 was likewise assumed by his eldest son Thomas Eyre, and after his death s.p., in 1833, by his younger brother Francis Eyre, who died in 1852. The estates and the claim to the title then passed to their sister, Mary Dorothea Eyre, who had married in 1836 Colonel Charles Leslie, twenty-sixth baron of Balquhain, of Fetternear, co. Aberdeen. The soi-disant Countess died in 1853 without issue, and the Slindon, Hassop, and other estates were enjoyed by her husband till his death at Slindon in 1870, and are now held by his son Charles Stephen Leslie, twenty-seventh baron of Balquhain, of Balquhain and Fetternear.

Throughout penal times the chapel in Slindon House was continuously served by a priest. During the worst days of persecution Mass was said in a secret chamber under the roof. Later the chapel was on the first floor, with an arched roof, and in close proximity were three priest's hiding-places. The last to occupy one of these holes was Fr. Joseph Molyneux, S.J., who thus eluded arrest upon a search being made for him by order of a magistrate during a temporary outburst of 'No Popery' fever. The site for a new chapel and cemetery was given by Colonel Leslie, and the foundation-stone of the present chapel, dedicated to St. Richard, was laid by Dr. Grant, bishop of Southwark, on Sept. 7, 1865. It is gothic in style, and accommodates about 300.

The following names of the priests at Slindon are the only ones that have been traced.

Fr. Anthony Bruning alias Hyde, S.J., born 1636, younger son of Anthony Bruning, of Wymering, co. Hants, Esq., and his second wife Mary, daughter of Francis Hyde, of Pangbourne, co. Berks, Esq., entered the Society in 1660. He was stationed at Slindon in 1689, but when he came or how long he remained is not known. He died in London in 1704.

Fr. Henry Kempe, S.J., born 1672, son of Anthony Kempe, of Slindon, Esq., and his wife Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Gage, of Firle, Bart., assumed the ancient Sussex family name of Gilderidge when he entered the English College at Rome in 1690. He entered the Society at Watten in 1691. After coming to the mission he served here for some years, and it was possibly he who commenced the registers in 1698. In 1717 he had removed to Wootton Wawen, co. Warwick, where he died in 1737.

Fr. William Lane, S.J., born in Norfolk, Jan. 30, 1671-2, was ordained priest at St. Alban's College, Valladolid, April 22, 1699, and left the college for the mission, but entered the Society on the following July 24th. He served Padwell, near Southampton, for a long period from about 1709. Apparently it was after this that he came to Slindon. He was declared rector of the Hants district in 1738. He died at Winchester in 1752.

Fr. Thomas Kingsley, S.J., born in Cheshire in 1705, son of George Kingsley, Esq., of Westminster, and of Ormsby in Yorkshire, entered the Society in 1723, came from Bromley Hall, Essex, the seat of the Mannock family, and was certainly here in 1761, apparently leaving about 1765, when he removed to the London district, where he died in 1781.

Fr. Joseph Molyneux alias Tickle, S.J., born 1731, son of Richard Molyneux, of Alt Grange, co. Lancaster, and grandson of Richard Molyneux, of Alt Grange, gent., and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Tickle, of Ince Blundell, gent. Fr. Molyneux entered the Society in 1752, and came to Slindon in 1765 from Bodney Hall, co. Norfolk, the seat of the Tasburgh family. He remained here till his death, Sept. 3, 1778, aged 47.

Fr. Richard Reeve alias Haskey, S.J., born in 1740, son of Richard Reeve, of Island Hill, co. Warwick, came from Salford Hall in that county, the seat of the Stanford family. He was the first priest to sign the registers, commencing on Jan. 7, 1780, and ending on April 23, 1782. The date of his removal does not appear, but about this time the Society, owing to its temporary suppression, found difficulty in supplying the chaplaincy, and the secular clergy were requisitioned, the first to sign the registers being—

Rev. Joseph Anson, born in London, June 10, 1753, son of Joseph Anson and his wife Mary Blackburne, was sent to Sedgley Park School, and registered Oct. 29, 1763, under the name of Hanson, which was probably the original orthography of the name, the family having removed from Lancashire to London, where the Cockney pronunciation would be Anson. From Sedgley Park he was transferred to Douay College, where he arrived July 15, 1767, and was sent to the preparatory school at Esquerchin. He returned to the college on the following Oct. 31, and after his ordination in 1781 came to the English mission. Where he was first stationed is not recorded, but he signs the registers at Slindon Jan. 21, 1785–June 11, 1786. Judging from the registers, Mr. Anson would seem to have left in the latter year. Later he was at Weston Underwood. He died Dec. 3, 1827, aged 74.

Rev. William Pierrepoint alias Poole, born in Lancashire, Aug. 9, 1753, son of James Pierrepoint and his wife Anna Maria Lowe, probably niece of Mrs. Eccleston, of Eccleston Hall, seems to have succeeded. There would appear to be some mystery about him, as he entered Sedgley Park School in 1769 under the name of Poole, and thence went under the same name to Douay College, where he arrived Feb. 24, 1771. He was probably a Pierrepoint of Holbeck Hall, co. Notts, of the ducal house of Kingston, to whom the estate belonged. The chapel in Holbeck Hall had long been served by the Jesuits, but in later times, after the deaths of two Catholic ladies of the Pierrepoint family, Holbeck was attended once a month from Spinkhill, co. Derby, the seat of the Poole (or Pole) family. It is possible that this circumstance, or more probably some family connection, was the origin of William Pierrepoint's assumption of the name of Poole. He became an alumnus at Douay in his second year's theology, Dec. 8, 1779 (being entered under his real name), and according to the Rev. R. G. Davis' brief memoir was ordained priest in 1781, at the age of 28. The Douay Lists make him commence the scholastic year as a minor-professor Oct. 1, 1782, and apparently leave the college in 1783, as his name disappears from the next year's opening list. He signs the registers at Slindon in Dec., 1786–Jan., 1787. Subsequently he took charge of the mission at Cowes in the Isle of Wight, where he arrived in 1811 and remained till his death, Feb. 15, 1828, aged 74. His position and career at Cowes was most unusual for a priest to occupy before the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Act. In 1816 Cowes, by Act of Parliament, obtained the benefits of local self-government under a body of commissioners who were appointed for life. Amongst them was the Rev. William Pierrepoint, and according to the minute books he was not only a very active member, but would appear to have fulfilled also the duties of Town Surveyor. He retained his position till his death, and on the occasion of his funeral the chapel was crowded to excess by persons of all religious professions. His portrait still hangs in the presbytery at Cowes.

Fr. Leonard Brooke, S.J., born 1750, apparently came in 1787 or 1788, and remained until he went to Lulworth Castle about the end of 1793, after which Slindon was temporarily supplied from Arundel Castle.

Rev. Philip Wyndham, born in Rome, Aug. 10, 1732, was the only son of John Wyndham, of Ashcombe, co. Wilts, Esq., whose younger brother Thomas was created Baron Wyndham of Finglas. Philip's only sister, Anne, married in 1751 the Hon. James Everard-Arundell, son of Henry, 6th Lord Arundell of Wardour, and her son James Everard-Arundell succeeded as 9th Baron Arundell in 1803. By indult of Benedict XIV., Philip Wyndham was admitted into the English College at Rome Nov. 14, 1744, was ordained priest March 13, and left the college on May 5, 1756. He would appear to have been in London in 1761, and about 1764 succeeded the Rev. Francis Hinde as confessarius at Bruges Convent O.S.A., where he remained till 1772. In that year he succeeded the Rev. Edmund Winstanley as chaplain to the Duke of Norfolk at Worksop Manor, and retained that position till he exchanged places with the Rev. Richard Fishwick, and went to Arundel Castle in 1785. He remained chaplain at Arundel till 1824, when he withdrew to Brook Green, Hammersmith, where he died, Feb. 6, 1825, aged 92. Whilst at Arundel Mr. Wyndham occasionally supplied at Slindon, and his signature appears in the registers in 1794.

Fr. James Leslie, S.J., born Oct. 21, 1741, was eldest son of Patrick Leslie Duguid, twenty-first baron of Balquhain and tenth baron of Auchinrove, by Amelia, daughter of James Irvine, of Kingcaussey, and his wife, the Lady Mary Forbes, daughter of the Earl of Granard. Fr. Leslie, who was educated at the Scots College, Paris, was excluded from the succession to the Balquhain barony and estates through being in holy orders. He returned to Scotland upon his father's death in 1777, but in that year or in 1780 took charge of the mission of Market Rasen, in Lincolnshire, where he stayed till 1793, when he came to Slindon as chaplain to Anthony, Earl of Newburgh. Here he remained till 1797, when he went to be chaplain to the Earl of Shrewsbury at Grafton Manor, co. Worcester. In 1806 he left Grafton Manor to succeed his younger brother, Fr. Charles Leslie, S.J., at Oxford. In 1812 he became chaplain to Peter Middleton, of Stockeld Park, co. York, and died there, Aug. 5, 1816, aged 74. He received the honour of the Croix de la Fleur de Lys from Louis XVIII. of France, Sept. 16, 1814. His younger brother, John, succeeded his father as twenty-second baron of Balquhain.

Rev. James Appleby, a young Valladolid priest, became chaplain at Slindon in 1797, and died April 19, 1799.

Rev. Francis Bowland commenced his scholastic course at Douay College Oct. 1, 1783, and during the Revolution escaped to England in March, 1793, being then in his second year's theology. In the following December he went to the college at Old Hall Green, where he was ordained priest about 1795. He apparently came to Slindon in 1799, and remained till 1821. He then went to Reading, and thence in 1839 removed to Midhurst, which he served, whilst occasionally supplying at Burton Park, Petworth, till his death in 1857. In 1805 a French émigré, the Abbé Joseph Mouchel, in charge of the mission at Brighton, occasionally supplied for Mr. Bowland at Slindon.

Rev. Mark Aloysius Tierney, born at Brighton in Sept., 1795, after being at the Franciscan school at Baddesley Green, co. Warwick, was transferred to Old Hall, where he was ordained priest in Sept., 1818, and retained in the college as procurator till 1819. He was then sent to the Sardinian chapel in London, and succeeded Mr. Bowland here in 1821. In 1824 he was appointed chaplain to the 12th Duke of Norfolk at Arundel Castle, and there found the leisure to devote to historical and antiquarian research for which his name is famous. He became the first canon penitentiary of Southwark in 1852, and died at Arundel, Feb. 19, 1862, aged 66.

Rev. John White, who went to Old Hall in Jan., 1807, and after his ordination served the offices of prefect and vice-president, left in Jan., 1824, and was appointed to this mission. In 1829 he was transferred to St. George's Fields, Southwark, where he remained till his death, Sept. 1, 1842.

Rev. Joseph Maria Silveira, born in England, March 30, 1794, son of Albert Garcia da Silveira of Lisbon, was sent to Sedgley Park School in 1804, and thence was transferred to the English College at Lisbon, where he was admitted July 8, 1815. In 1817 he was obliged to leave Lisbon on account of ill-health and return to England, and in October of that year was admitted into Old Hall College. There he remained till Nov., 1820, was ordained priest Aug. 6, 1822, and placed at the Sardinian chapel in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields. In 1827 he removed to Gosport, Hants, and thence in 1829 came to Slindon. In 1845 he temporarily retired from missionary work, and subsequently served Havant, Hants, 1849-56, Newport, Isle of Wight, 1856-7, and finally settled at Ryde till his death, Oct. 27, 1876, aged 82.

Rev. John Sheehan, another priest from the college at Lisbon, where he was admitted Feb. 13, 1836, was ordained priest June 25, and left for England July 10, 1845, came here to take Mr. Silveira's place, and remained till his death, Oct. 14, 1869.

Rev. Thomas Richardson, born Oct. 10, 1819, was educated at Old Hall and the English College at Rome, and was ordained priest in 1844. For a short time in that year he laboured at the Sardinian chapel in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, then went to Ryde, Isle of Wight, 1844-5; St. George's, Southwark, 1845-6; Hastings, 1846-9; East Hendred, Berks, the seat of the Eyston family, 1849-59; Hales Place, near Canterbury, the seat of Miss Mary Barbara Hales, daughter and heiress of Sir Edward Hales, the last baronet, 1859-60; Canterbury, 1860-4; Guildford, 1864-5; All Souls' temporary chapel, St. Leonards-on-the-Sea, 1865-6; Red-hill, Surrey, 1866-71; and then came to Slindon, 1871-8. Upon leaving here he went to Weybridge, 1878-87, when he retired from missionary work to Clifton Wood Convent, Bristol, where he died, Aug. 18, 1890, aged 70.

Rev. Thomas Malpass, who finished his theological course at St. Thomas' Seminary and was ordained priest May 27, 1877, was first placed at Sutton Place, near Guildford, the seat of Francis Henry Salvin, Esq., and then came here till 1882, when he retired for a time on sick-leave. He then went to Eltham, 1883, till his death, May 27, 1886.

Rev. Thomas Quentin Fleming, ordained priest at St. Alban's College, Valladolid, Nov. 11, 1866, was placed at Woolwich, 1866-72, Old Brompton, Chatham, 1872-3, Gillingham, Kent, 1873-8, and after an interval of rest from missionary work came here in 1882. He stayed till his withdrawal on sick-leave in 1896, and retiring to St. Ursula's Convent, Dartford, died in 1904.

Rev. Francis O'Callaghan came 1896 till he retired from missionary work in 1902, and died Jan. 29, 1905.

Rev. Thomas Whelahan 1902 till death, June 28, 1906.

Rev. James Duggan 1906 to date."

CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF THE DOMESTIC CHAPEL AT WATERPERRY MANOR HOUSE, OXON, AND ST. CLEMENT'S CHURCH, OXFORD, 1701?—1834

CONTRIBUTED BY JOSEPH STANISLAUS HANSOM

THE registers are contained in two books. The first is a common penny paper note-book in a marbled paper cover, ready to fall off from age and use, $6\frac{1}{8}$ by 4 inches, the pagination being given below. The entries as far as the year 1756 seem to be made from some previous collection, being in one continuous style of writing (very bad), and is doubtless that of the Rev. Francis Pole, S.J. The subsequent entries are continued in the same hand, but shew traces of being inserted at different periods. It is proposed to give a facsimile of a page shewing this. The last entry in the same hand is dated 18 Sept. 1764. The first in another hand is dated 6 Nov. 1765. The second book is of paper $7\frac{7}{8}$ by $6\frac{5}{8}$ inches, bound in boards, with a leather back.

The part printed stops in 1834; but in the second book there are other registers down to the end of 1855, which it has been thought unnecessary to print now.

Thanks are due to the Revv. Arthur Day and John Edge, S.J., the late and present rectors of St Aloysius' Church at Oxford, to which the registers belong, for facilities granted, enabling me to make the transcript and collate the proofs with the originals.

The Hon. Mrs. Bryan Stapleton, who has made Oxfordshire history a special study, and to whom Catholics are indebted for her interesting and concise History of Post-Reformation Catholic Missions in Oxfordshire, contributes the following historical notes on the chaplaincy and mission.

J. S. H.

“The mission of Oxford, to which these registers belong, embraces six separate and ancient missions or chaplaincies, viz. : Holywell Manor, now part of Oxford; Sandford on Thames; Britwell-Prior; Hazeley Court or Great Hazeley; Overey, now Dorchester; and Waterperry. All these were incorporated by Father Richard Blount, S.J., in 1620 into the ‘Residence of St. Mary’s,’ known among themselves as ‘Mrs Oxon.’

HOLYWELL MANOR.—The owners, by leasehold from Merton College, were a branch of the Scotch family of Napier who had been settled in Dorsetshire for some years. They appear to have held the true Faith early, if not upon their arrival in Oxford, as the best-known member of the family, the Ven. George Napier, was born and bred here, and he won his crown of martyrdom at the age of 60 in 1610. After his execution some part of his remains, which had been hung over one of the City gates, were taken and thrown into the river Thames, and floating down opposite Sandford they were taken up and carried to the house of his sister, the wife of Edmund Powell. Tradition says that there they still remain, buried in a barn once the chapel of the Knights of St. John.

Holywell continued in Catholic hands until the property was sold in the middle of the eighteenth century by Mr. Neville of Holt, co. Leicester, who had it by marriage with the Napier heiress. It was here that the few hunted Catholics of the day used to assemble for their religious duties whenever a priest came to their help.

There is no record of any resident priest here beyond the Ven. George Napier, a son of the house, and later on the Rev. Thomas Kimber, a secular priest, who was son of the resident, being agent to the Nevilles of Holt. We know that the Catholics resorted here for Mass, but no names are remembered. Father John Nicholas Day, O.S.F., was born at Holywell Mill, and was buried in St. Ebbe's Church, Oxford, 1658.

SANDFORD ON THAMES.—The only name we have been able to find is the Rev. Charles Collingwood, S.J., whose will is recorded in 10th Report of Hist. MSS. as being made in Jan. 1718-19. He was son of George Collingwood of Esslington, Northumberland, and brother to George, who suffered on the scaffold at Liverpool for the rising of 1715. He came to Oxfordshire about 1701, and remained until his death here in 1718; he was buried in the parish church on the 28th Jan. Probably the place was served by the Franciscans, of whom several were members of the Powell family.

This property was bought with many others in the country upon the dissolution of the monasteries by Edmund Appowell, a Welshman, one of the followers probably of Henry Tudor. He settled at Sandford, which had belonged to the Knights of St. John, and there his family continued to foster the Faith until the property passed from them. The family ended in two heiresses—the eldest married to Sir Francis Curson of Waterperry, and the second to the 10th Lord Teynham, whose descendants came in for Waterperry, while Sandford was sold by Lady Curson in 1760.

BRITWELL-PRIOR.—This mission owed its existence to the Simeon family; after several generations who had been zealous for religion and had given many members to the church, Sir Edward Simeon died in 1768, just as he was completing the 'new chapel,' of which mention is made in the register; he was buried at Aston, co. Staffordshire. He was never married, so his property passed to Mr. Thomas Weld of Lulworth, son of his sister Margaret.

In 1799 the Community of Poor Clares at Arles, in Flanders, fled before the French Revolution, having as their Abbess Sister Euphrasia Weld, sister to the owner of Britwell House, who kindly offered the nuns the loan of it. Here they remained until 1813, when they removed to Coxide, near Plymouth, and eventually they built the present Abbey of St. Clare in Darlington. After the nuns left Britwell the Welds returned and lived there for several years.

The first chaplain known is the Rev. William Brown, his first appearance being on Oct. 23, 1729, O.S.; he died at Britwell House, 3 Nov. 1750.

Rev. John Richardson, S.J., first coming 6th Aug. 1751, O.S. His real name was Shuttleworth, from Lancashire. Was Superior of St. Mary's District. His will in Hist. MSS., vol. 10, made 30 Jan. 1752; died at Britwell House, aged 57, 1765.

Rev. George Bruning, S.J., first coming 25 June 1765, N.S. Son of George Bruning of East Meon and Froxfield by his second wife Anne May. His half-sister married Mr. John Thomas Eyston of East Hendred. There seem to have been seven members of this family Jesuits. The entire register seems to have been written out by his hand. He died at Isleworth, and his body appears to have been removed to the church of East Hendred, where there is a tablet, 'To the Memory of the Revd. George Bruning who departed this life on the 5th June 1802, aged 66 years. R.I.P.'

1770. Rev. R. D. Carolus Blount of Snitterfield, co. Warwick, 3rd son of Sir Edward Blount, 4th bart., of Sodington, co. Worcester, signed the list of confirmations; this was probably in the absence of Father Bruning; and Rev. Blasius Morey, of Gifford's Hall, Suffolk, does the same in 1782.

1773. Rev. James Lane, only probably for a short time. He died at Norwich in 1821.

Rev. James Charles Hunter alias Weldon, S.J., was residing at Britwell House in 1792. Subsequently he went to London, where he died, 10 Dec. 1802, aged 86.

The last entry (1788) in the Britwell Register (the continuation is at Waterperry) is the baptism of John Davey of Overey.

CHAPLAINS TO THE NUNS AT BRITWELL.—1799. Father Thomas Pacificus Kington, O.S.F., came with the nuns from Flanders. He was a native of Warwick; while chaplain to the community in Flanders he was imprisoned and sentenced to the guillotine, from which the death of Robespierre fortunately delivered him. In 1800 he was appointed to the nuns (now at Taunton); died at Osmotherly, Yorkshire, Feb. 18, 1827, aged 73.

1800. Father Isaac Anselm Milward, O.S.F., apparently until 1803, when he went to the nuns at Winchester.

1803. Father Paschal Harrison, O.S.F., remained until 1809, or thereabouts.

1811. Father Edward Andrew Weetman, O.S.F., born at Rowington, co. Warwick in 1765, for about a year, when he went to Taunton, and died there in 1843.

1812. Father Joseph Tate, O.S.F., came this year, and the nuns left soon after.

Whilst the Weld family lived at Britwell House it is almost certain that they were served by the French émigré clergy from Reading or Thame.

GREAT HASELEY.—This place after leaving the Huddleston family came by Elizabeth Boulter, a convert and an heiress, to John Wolfe, Esq., whose family appears among the Catholic Non-Jurors for London and also in Essex. The last of the family, Mr. Charles Wolfe, died about the time of the opening of the 'new chapel' at Britwell, and we find in the register of Waterperry an entry in the hand of the Rev. Mr. Bruning of that place, 'that the Congregation at Haseley having been left without a priest since the death of Mr. Wolfe, belonged then to the Mission of Britwell and that he Mr. Bruning having attended them out of charity, considered that they now were joined to that of Waterperry.'

OVEREY, now DORCHESTER.—Here in an old homestead across the river, known as Overey, dwelt for nigh two hundred years an old Catholic family, surrounded by a certain number of cottagers, who without doubt shared the Faith with them. The Davey family had leased this old monastic farm from the Abbey of Dorchester and its representatives from the time of the dissolution, and had kept the Faith alive through the days of persecution in this corner of Oxfordshire. They and the Rev. Robert Newsham founded the new mission in Dorchester, built the church, and endowed it in 1849. The Davey family continued to hold Overey until 1901.

Priests who have served the Oxfordshire mission at Overey include—

Father Gilbert Wells, S.J., was residing here in 1752, when he made his will and styled himself as 'of Dorchester.' He belonged to the family of Wells of Brambridge, co. Hants; was still here in 1758, but later removed to Winchester. Died on the Mission in Wiltshire, 17 Oct. 1777, aged 63.

1773. Father Bernard Cassidy vere Stafford; it is conjectured that the latter was his true name, as he was buried as such. Was Superior of this District, residing at Warkworth in 1764, and lastly at Thame Park, where he died 11th June 1778. He belonged to the Irish Province, and is said to have been the last Jesuit residing at Dorchester during this century. Upon his leaving the mission fell under the charge of the chaplain of Britwell. Later on the French clergy helped to serve this place, and one of them, a noted person, died in the house of Mr. Davey in 1798, and was buried with honour in the Abbey Church at the expense of the Warden of New College, Oxford. He was Monseigneur Thoumin des Valpons, Vicar-General of Dol in Brittany, who died 2 March 1798.

About 1825 Father William Ibbotson came. He was born in 1800 near Skipton, and died at Stonyhurst in March 1834.

WATERPERRY.—Having now passed in review five of the component parts of the Oxford mission we must return to Waterperry, the most important, because the longest lived of the group. The list of chaplains here is almost complete and continuous from the year 1700, and it is supposed that there had been a resident chaplain at a much earlier date: 'Father Gerard, S.J., having established a mode of life, providing altar, chapel and room for a priest in the house of a lady near Oxford whose husband was indeed a Catholic but much given to worldly pursuits.' This early chaplain may have been Father Walpole, S.J., and the lady is almost beyond doubt Lady Curson.

The place was served by Franciscans, Benedictines, and Jesuits in charming impartiality, and some of the changes were so frequent as to suggest a certain diversity of opinion among the various parties.

In all probability about 1620 some Jesuit fathers were placed here by Father Blount, S.J. The first authentic name is that of—1742. Father Henry Stanley, S.J., son of Richard Stanley of Great Eccleston Hall, Lancashire, born 1688, joined the Society of Jesus, and served the Oxfordshire mission for many years. He died at Culcheth Hall, Lancashire, 27 Nov. 1753, aged 65. The only evidence of his residence here is his name as witness to a will in 1742. He sometimes assumed his mother's maiden name of Culcheth as an alias.

1750. Father Thomas Brooks, S.J. He was the chaplain at Tusmore, which place he served for many years, dying aged 82 on the 6th March 1761.

1758. Father Gilbert Wells, S.J., of Dorchester, mentioned above.

1759. Mr. Richardson, probably Father John Richardson alias Shuttleworth, S.J., of Britwell.

1761. Dom John Bernard Warmoll of Brise Norton.

1773. Dom John Jerome Butler, O.S.B., was stationed here in 1773, and was chaplain at Tusmore in 1786; he died 15 Nov. 1792, aged 78.

1775. James Lewis, S.J.

1777. Father John Closette, S.J. Left for Wardour Castle in Sept. 1781, but was killed by a fall from his horse within three weeks of his arrival on the 23rd of Oct., his 30th year. Buried in Tisbury Church.

1780. Father Peter Jenkins, S.J., born at Sutton, near Guilford, in 1735. Died suddenly at Bury St. Edmunds, 14th July 1818, aged 83, and was buried near its chapel.

1785. Father Peter Walker alias Westby, S.J., born at Preston, died at Scholes, 14 Nov. 1788. He does not appear in this Register again, and was probably only on a visit.

1789. The Rev. James Taylor, a secular priest. He was at Heythrop in 1795 for a few months.

OXFORD, 1790. The Rev. Charles Leslie, S.J., a younger son of Patrick, the 21st Baron of Balquhain and Count of the Holy Roman Empire, was the last chaplain, or rather missionary of Waterperry, owing to the altered circumstances of the place. He died suddenly on 28 Dec. 1806, and was buried in the 'Quire of the Chapel near the pulpit.' By his amiable manner and classical acquirements he conciliated the respect and esteem of many members of the University. Public interest in his works was shown by the publication of a novel, in which he and his niece appear as the heroes in the new chapel of St. Ignatius.

In 1799 he was joined by Father William Hothersall, S.J., who had been chaplain at Thame Park, the seat of Viscount Wenman, whose wife, a daughter of Lord Abingdon by a Catholic wife, kept chapel in the house. He succeeded Father B. Cassidy or Stafford, whom we have seen at Overey. Father Hothersall was buried Aug. 1803 in the chapel at St. Clement's, Oxford, having lived some time in retirement.

Father Charles Leslie began the independent Mission of Oxford and closed the old Chaplaincy of Waterperry. He bought a house in St. Clement's in Oxford and removed there. Sir Francis Curson, the last Baronet, died childless in 1750, and his widow in 1764. They left a bequest to the church, stipulating that Mass should be said alternately at Waterperry and at Oxford; no notice appears to have been taken of this until Father Leslie came in 1790. He very soon began to fulfil the conditions, and in 1793 he notes that he removed into Oxford, 'have left at Waterperry only half a dozen Catholics while at Oxford he found three score at least.' He built the chapel of St. Ignatius partly by subscription throughout the whole country, and devoted his whole fortune to it. In the circular begging for alms he remarks that the wants of the French émigrés had seriously interfered with the subscriptions he hoped to get. His mother, Countess Leslie, left £1000 for the chapel, but we cannot ascertain the amount of Sir Francis Curson's bequest.

1806. Father James Leslie, S.J., succeeded his younger brother. In 1812 he was appointed to Stockeld Park in Yorkshire, and died there 5th Aug. 1816 in his 76th year.

1812. Father John William Connolly, S.J. He belonged to the Irish Province. Died from rupture of a blood-vessel on 5th Sept. 1818, aged 39. Buried in the chapel.

1818. Father Robert Newsham, S.J. Kept a school for gentlemen's sons in the Presbytery, which school he removed to Dorchester in 1849, where he himself went to live. He left the Society of Jesus the same year; died at Dorchester in 1859. The number of adult baptisms above his name proclaim him a true missionary."

NO. X
GENEALOGICAL SUPPLEMENT TO THE BEDINGFELD PAPERS

BY RICHARD THACKERAY BEDINGFELD

As one who has devoted much time to genealogy, making East Anglia my special hunting-ground, and perhaps not unnaturally spending more time upon the Bedingfeld pedigree than upon any other, I have been asked by the editor to write a few notes by way of Addenda to the Bedingfeld papers.

The Papers speak for themselves; they make genealogy a living thing, and it is only here and there that some mysterious individual requires identification. The present Baronet, who evidently takes the keen interest which it becomes the head of an old family to take in its history, in these few cases, has been appealed to in vain; for the men are not in his pedigree, neither are they to be identified by the perusal of the muniments at Oxburgh. Sir Henry has therefore referred to me.

The Papers being already voluminous brevity now becomes a desideratum, and I shall therefore make use of the tabular form of pedigree to elucidate; but perhaps it will be as well to first make a few remarks upon a statement made in Note III. by the editor (p. 231), viz. that the Bedingfeld pedigree "is acknowledged to be of authority, though for some remote periods it cannot be confirmed from independent sources."

In the Record Office and elsewhere I have heard this before; eminent genealogists have informed me that Ogerus de Pugeys never existed, and that all sensible people have long since consigned him to the realms of myth, and that no family of the rank of the Bedingfelds could prove an antiquity so great. I have been told that the lord Malet, lord of the honour of Eye in Suffolk, knew nothing of this Roger who is said to have been one of his four knights, and to have received from him a gift of the manor of Bedingfeld, in consequence of which he was afterwards known as Ogerus (i.e. Roger) de Bedingfeld.

One of these iconoclastic gentlemen said to me: "I defy you to produce any eleventh-century document, or authentic copy of such document, upon which the names of the great Norman baron and your supposed ancestor occur together!"

This is no place for the reprinting of long Latin charters; but we know that Robert Malet founded the Monastery of Eye, and with the consent of King William the Conqueror gave to it the Church of St. Peter in Eye and many others with all the Immunities belonging to the Honor of Eye, as given him by the said King. We will refer to Dugdale. Here is his Monasticon Anglicanum, published by James Bohn in 1846. In vol. iii. p. 404, we find, "Num. I Carta Roberti Malet Fundatoris Ecclesiæ de Eya [Ex Registro de Eya penes Thomam Deye generosum an. 1630 fol. 58]." It is too long for insertion here; but an extract is sufficient. After the above-mentioned donations the founder confirms various gifts made to the monastery by his barons and other persons holding under him in military service by the words following:—

“Præterea donationes quas barones et milites mei, me annuente, eis fecerunt, præfato monasterio concedo et confirmo. Quorum nomina hæc sunt. Rog. de Huntingfeud dedit eis ij partes decimæ suæ de dominio de Huntingfeud, et de Linestede, et de Benges. Ric. Honel dedit eis duas partes decimæ suæ in Winerdestune. Willielmus Gulafre dedit duas partes decimæ suæ de Hukenholle. Ogerus dedit duas partes decimæ suæ de Bedingfeud, et de terra sua quam habuit in Framlingham. Ernardus filius Rogeri dedit duas partes decimæ suæ de Wytingeham, et de Wasketona. Radulfus Grossus dedit eis duas partes decimæ suæ de Cratinges.”

East Anglians, even if unaccustomed to old charters, will not fail to recognise Huntingfield and Bedingfield in feudal form, as shown in the above; the original of which was more ancient than the venerable Domesday, and should serve to prove that Ogerus held lands in Bedingfield of the Lord Malet by sub-infeudation. The Baron himself holding in fief as vassal of the crown.

The original Registers of Eye priory, in two volumes, were in the possession of Thomas Martin of Palgrave (“Honest Tom,” who married Peter Le Neve’s widow). The vols. were marked a and b. Dugdale gives many other Charters, besides the one already quoted, in which are mentioned early members of the Bedingfield family. We again turn to vol. iii. pp. 405–406: “Num. III Carta Regis

* Note the honour of Eye was conferred, by Richard I., on Henry, Earl of Brabant and Lorraine, circa 1190. Lorraine, in Low Latin, is Lotharingia.

Stephani." It is dated MCXXXVIII (2nd King Stephen), and we find it contains the name of Peter de Bedingfeld.

Now look at the Bedingfeld pedigree in Blomefield's Norfolk, and then come with me to Fetter Lane. We will write tickets for something circa the close of the 12th century; for we know that since 1194 Adam de Bedingfeld and Gundreda his wife had been fighting for their rights in the Law Courts. Adam was the grandson of the above Peter. The Pipe Roll No. 46—2nd John is brought to us, and we find at r. 1 Fines made before the King.

"Adam de Bedingfield 50 m. for having seizin of half a Knight's fee in Rampton and $\frac{1}{2}$ in Bedingfield of which he had been disseized.

Robert Maluvel 40s. that he should be compelled to plead with Adam and Gundred his wife concerning 7 bovates of land in Ramton."

If we turn to the Pipe Rolls for the 4 and 5 John we shall find more about Adam de Bedingfeld under Scutage, and if we want the next generation we may turn to Coram Rege Roll for Trinity 14, Hen. III., No. 36, m. 18, where we find that "Adam de Bedingfeld, son of Adam," claimed lands in Coddendam, Suffolk.

We could find more about these Adams in the Patent Rolls, and we can get many early descents of the Bedingfelds from the ancient deeds in the Record Office. Abstracts of many of these last have been printed. Sir Adam de Bedingfeld, Kt., 1245, was the grandson of the above claimant, and the father of Sir Adam "Sensc. de Eye." Sir Adam de Bedingfeld, Seneschal of the Honour of Eye, who sealed with the family arms (ermine, an eagle displayed gules) in 1269, is to be found in many records. He was still Seneschal in 1274 (Inq. ac. 3d. Edw. I.). Vide also Rotuli Hundredorum, Henry III. to Edw. I. (Printed Copy, vol. i. p. 534), where under the Hundred of Tunstede we shall find the Seneschal and Peter his son.

It would be easy for me to write a volume upon the Bedingfeld pedigree during these remote periods, for excerpts from the records are before me in abundance; but I must abstain, my space being so limited, and must content myself with having indicated a few of the independent sources from which a weight of evidence confirmatory of the pedigree in the early periods may be obtained.

It seemed to me that the editor was inclined to underrate this weight of evidence. No one would think of blaming him for that. He does not pretend to give more than a glance at these remote times. The labour bestowed upon the bulk of the work must be evident to all.

Just glancing at Sir Peter de Bedingfeld, son of the Seneschal (vide Bedingfeld Suffolk Patent Rolls, 5 Edw. I. and 9 Edw. I.), and Sir Edmund his son who married Maud, the daughter and heir of Sir William de Hemenhale, we come next to Sir Peter de Bedingfeld, son and heir of the said Sir Edmund. He was one of the fighting Knights of Edward the Third and the Black Prince (vide the grant from the King, printed in Betham's Baronetage), and as he appears to be the progenitor of all the Bedingfelds living at the present time, he is of considerable importance. We will commence with him in correcting the notes on page 231 of the Papers, and will use the tabular form of pedigree. (Vide Table A at p. 430.)

This table showing the chief division of the Bedingfeld family has brought us to the time when King Henry the Eighth denied the Pope's supremacy, and posed as head of the "Reformed English Church."

This, for the moment, seems to have made but little difference to the Bedingfelds of either branch, so far as property or freedom was concerned. Sir Edmund Bedingfeld of Oxburgh (son of the Knight of the Bath, and Margaret, daughter of Sir John Scott) and his wife Grace, daughter of Henry Lord Marney, were on excellent terms at Court; but in the next generation things were to alter. Henceforth the Bedingfelds of Oxburgh are known as the Catholic branch, while those of Ditchingham are spoken of as the Protestant branch. (Vide p. 232.)

The eldest son of Sir Edmund Bedingfeld by Grace Marney was Sir Henry Bedingfeld, Governor of the Tower in the time of Queen Mary, who suffered persecution during the next reign on account of his religion; and his fate was shared by his first cousin once removed, Humphrey Bedingfeld of Quidenham, Norfolk, son of John, and grandson of Peter Bedingfeld. (Vide p. 232.)

At this time another Henry Bedingfeld, who was a younger son of the before-mentioned Philip Bedingfeld and Anne Yaxley (vide Table A at p. 430), flourished as a Protestant clergyman. He was vicar of Bedingfield, Suffolk, rector of Upwell 1567, of Heddenham 1569, and of Southacre 1578; all in Norfolk. He married the daughter of William Walsingham of Upwell, and died in 1582. His eldest son, Edmund Bedingfeld, settled at Huntingfield, Suffolk, and left children, while his second son, Henry Bedingfeld, settled at Needham Market in the same county, and married Susan, daughter of John Holt, S.T.B., rector of Stokesby and Catfield, Norfolk, and Chaplain to Elizabeth's Archbishop of Canterbury, John Whitgift. From this match descend all the Bedingfelds of Needham Market, including the present writer, who has compiled their pedigree.

The reader may be interested to learn that some members of this branch have at length returned to the Catholic religion.

The Bedingfelds of Redlingfield, Suffolk, sprang from John, third son of the above Sir Henry and Katherine his wife, daughter of Sir Roger Townsend of Rainham. They are mentioned at pp. 232 and 240 of these papers, and elsewhere.

Foley has taken great trouble with the pedigree of this branch; but has omitted some points of interest. The royal descent of the Bedingfelds of Redlingfield has been mentioned; but I believe not shown by others. I therefore give it. (Vide Table C at p. 432.)

Foley, Davy, and other genealogists who have given us pedigrees of the Redlingfield Bedingfelds seem to have been unaware of the match between Francis Bedingfeld and Mary Paston, which I have given in Table B. However, it is mentioned in Payne's Non-Jurors (p. 298). He gives as his authority Coll. of Arms M.S.D. 22. This relationship to the Pastons is interesting, as it makes Francis Bedingfeld, father of Anthony Bedingfeld, S.J. (vide pp. 232 and 241), second cousin to Sir Henry Bedingfeld, the 2nd baronet, instead of being only his distant kinsman. The mother of this Mary was Agnes, daughter and coheir of William Everard of Linstead, Suffolk, who in her will, dated 1 July 1673, mentions, "my neece Margaret Bedingfeild wife unto S^r Henry Bedingfeild of Beckhall, my grandchild Francis Bedingfeild, my grandchild Elizabeth Bedingfeild, my daughter Mary Bedingfeild, my son-in-law Francis Bedingfeild sole executor." The testatrix died on the 11 April 1676. For the full contents of her will, see the Chancery Bill of Mary, widow of William Paston of Apleton, Norf., Esq., 23 Oct. 1677, and the Answer of Francis Bedingfeild and Mary his wife (Chancery before 1714 B. & A. Reynardson Bl. 70, memb. 4).

Henry Bedingfeld, the fifth and youngest son of Sir Henry, the Governor of the Tower, was seated at Sturston in Norfolk; but on the death of his uncle, Nicholas Bedingfeld, in 1636, he left Norfolk and went to live at Swatishall in Gislingham, Suffolk, which by deed of entail had been settled upon him and his younger sons John and Henry and their heirs male by the said Nicholas.

Henry had only just moved into his new home when he was convicted of recusancy; and seven years later (Michaelmas, 1643) the premises were sequestered for his recusancy, and he died at Gislingham the following February, and was buried at Sturston beside his wife, Mary, daughter of Edmund Daniel of Acton, Suffolk. She died 12 Feb. 1628. Blomefield is mistaken about the date of Henry's death.

Their eldest son, Francis Bedingfeld, married Anne, daughter of Edmund Skipwith of Snore Hall in Fordham, Norfolk, and left issue. John, their second son, died s.p. of the small-pox, 19 Nov. 1643. Henry, their third and youngest son, then had Swatishall. However, he let the place to Grace Bedingfeld, and we learn from Chancery depositions, Royalist Composition Papers, and other records, that after 1635 he spent most of his time beyond seas in Flanders and other parts, and died there s.p. circa 1661. I have no doubt of his identity with "Cousin H. Bed." mentioned in J. Barker's letter* of May the 21, 1645 (vide p. 18). Father Goldie is correct as to the first three Bedingfelds mentioned, viz. John, brother of the first baronet, and Captain Thomas Bedingfeld of Redlingfield and his brother Mathew. He is also right in making "Jack Taborough" identical with John Tasborough, or Tasburgh, of Flixton, Suffolk. John was the fourth son of Sir John Tasburgh of Flixton by Lettice his wife, daughter of James Cressye. He married Penelope, daughter and coheir of John Ramsey (alias Dicks) of Wickmere, Norfolk, and sister to Dorothy, wife of John Bedingfeld, second son of Sir Henry, the first baronet. I shall show directly that Jack's sister Elizabeth was the mother of Charles Bedingfeld of the Diary. Charles Bedingfeld of Oxburgh is mentioned at p. 106 and elsewhere in Thomas Marwood's Diary. I will now proceed to identify him, first giving the abstract of his will.

"Will of Charles Bedingfeld of Oxboro Gentleman dated 28, Oct. 1689, to my dear cousins Sir Henry Bedingfeld Knt. and Baronett,

* I think it likely that J. Barker was a connection of the Bedingfelds. There were many Johns amongst the Barkers of Suffolk and Essex. Elizabeth Tasburgh, who married Edmund Bedingfeld of Kirkby Bedon (vide Table B), had a sister Penelope Tasburgh, married to Sir Thomas Barker of Bottisford House, half-brother to Sir John Barker, Bart., of Grimston Hall. Their father, Sir Robert Barker, K.B., died at Ipswich, 8 Oct. 1618.

John Bedingfeld, and Edward Bedingfeld Esqrs. each one guinea for rings, to my dear sister Bullock twenty pounds to my dear neeces Elizabeth Harding and Ann Hummerston (Humberstone) each five pounds mentions my friend Thomas Marwood, my godson Mr Charles Hacon, my dear kinswoman Mrs. Sara Bedingfeld of Beckhall my full and sole executrix.

Proved P.C.C. by Sarae Stockdell, als. Bedingfeld, ux.
(Vide Table B at p. 431.)

John Bedingfeld of Wickmere, Norfolk, second son of the first baronet, is mentioned with Dorothy his wife and four of their children at p. 235. They had four more children, viz. Henry, buried at Wickmere, 18 June 1682; Margaret, buried at Wickmere, 10 Mar. 1683; Dorothy, buried at Wickmere, 18 July 1686; and Edward, baptized at Wickmere, 13 April 1693.

The last died young; but outlived his father, who we are informed by the monumental inscription in Wickmere Church left 3 sons and 2 daughters.

As we shall presently see, Foley is wide of the mark in saying the third surviving son "was probably Father Charles Bedingfeld, O.S.F.," named by Cole as "my friend the Minorite living in 1756." (Vide Bedingfeld Pedigree, Records of the English Province, S.J., vol. v.)

Edward Bedingfeld, third son of the first baronet, is also mentioned at p. 235. Besides his daughter Mary, wife of Sir John Swinburne,* Bart., he had two sons. Wotton and others tell us they did not survive, and leave them unnamed.

On the authority of the Lawson MS., from which some years ago I made notes at the College of Arms, these boys were named Edward and Henry. They both died in infancy.

And now we will return once more to Henry Bedingfeld of Swatishall in Gislingham, whom I have already shown to be identical with the "cousin H. Bed:" of Barker's letter (p. 18). Persecuted by the Puritans on account of his religion, he was glad, before he finally settled in Flanders, to sell Swatishall and the rest of his estate in Gislingham to his distant kinsman, Anthony Bedingfeld, the Round-head member of Parliament, who gave him four thousand pounds for it (Indentures, 10 Jan. 1649). Anthony left the estate to his brother, Sir Thomas Bedingfeld the Judge, who again parted with Swatishall, giving it to his brother, Philip Bedingfeld of Ditchingham, as part payment for the mansion-house of Darsham. One of this Philip's great grandchildren will be the last mysterious person for me to identify. The editor at page 232 has almost saved me the trouble, for he confounds a first cousin of the same name with the man we want. Others have been unable to get so near to the truth.

The man we want is Charles Bonaventure Bedingfeld, the Franciscan (1698-1782). His friend Cole says, "Father Charles Bonaventure Bedingfeld of the family of the Bedingfelds of Oxburgh in Suffolk was of a branch in that county or Norfolk that were Protestants and had a sister living at Norwich, and a nephew a clergyman of the Church of England." (Add. MS. 5845.)

Father Charles Bedingfeld in a letter to Cole, dated at Worlaby, near Brigg, co. Lincoln, 24 May 1771, gives his age as 73. In another letter, dated at Somerby, 11 Aug. 1767, tells him that he has an only sister living at Norwich. (Add. MS. 5824, pp. 20, 26, 27.)

Now let us compare all this with a portion of my pedigree of the Bedingfelds of Ditchingham. (Vide Table D at p. 434.)

In the British Museum, amongst the correspondence mentioned in the above-named Table, there is a letter from William Bedingfeld of Swatsfield Hall to his brother Charles, in which the latter's religion is spoken of in terms anything but polite. Such bitterness of feeling, begotten of bigotry and ignorance, is happily as rare in the twentieth century as it was common in the eighteenth. Magna est veritas et prævalebit!

In finishing with this last table it will be as well to give the missing links required to connect it with Table A, where we find that Philip Bedingfeld of Ditchingham (ob. 1542) married Anne Yaxley, and left issue by her. One of their younger sons has already been mentioned at p. 426. Another, Robert, had Ditchingham, while the eldest, Thomas, had Fleming's Hall, and married Mary, daughter of William Methwold of Langford, Norfolk.

Their eldest son, Thomas Bedingfeld, purchased Darsham Hall of Edmund Hummings, who had recently built it. He was married at Barham, Suffolk, 9 June 1584, to Dorothy, daughter of John Southwell, lord of Barham, and ancestor to Viscount Southwell. They left issue many children; Philip Bedingfeld, M.P. for Norfolk, who heads the Pedigree Table D, being their eldest son.

This gentleman, on his father's death in 1636, inherited Fleming's Hall and Darsham Hall. He already possessed Ditchingham, which had been left to him in 1621 by his second cousin, Sir Philip Bedingfeld, who died s.p.

Sir Philip was the only son of Henry Bedingfeld and Margaret, daughter of Thomas Darcy of Tolshunt Darcy, Essex, and grandson of the above-mentioned Robert Bedingfeld of Ditchingham by his second wife Mary, daughter of Sir Henry D'Oyley of Pond Hall, in Hadleigh, Suffolk.

In a recent edition of a well-known genealogical work considerable confusion has arisen in the Bedingfeld pedigree there printed. This seems to be partly owing to the author having received his information from some one who was unacquainted with the fact that for more than half a century Ditchingham was owned and occupied by a junior branch; but ultimately returned, as above shown, to the elder male line.

Constitutions

1. Name. The name of the Society is "THE CATHOLIC RECORD SOCIETY."

2. Objects. The objects are the transcribing, printing, indexing and distributing to its members the Catholic Registers of Baptisms, Marriages, and Deaths, and other old Records of the Faith, chiefly personal and genealogical, since the Reformation in England and Wales.

3. Management. The affairs of the Society are managed by a Council consisting of twelve members and four honorary officers, viz., The Recorder, Bursar, Legal Adviser and Secretary—four forming a quorum. It has power to appoint a President and Vice-Presidents, its Chairman and Officers, and to fill vacancies on its own body, and has power to refuse or take away membership. One-third of the twelve members and all the honorary officers retire each year, but are eligible for re-election. Nominations of New Members of the Council must be sent to the Secretary fourteen days before the Annual Meeting. The representation and management are reserved to Catholic Members.

4. Subscription. The subscription is one guinea per annum, which entitles members to the publications for the year, but the names of any members whose subscription shall be two years in arrears will thereupon be removed from the Society, and not be readmitted until all arrears are paid.

Subscriptions are due on June 1 in each year, and no work is issued to any member whose subscription is unpaid. A member wishing to retire from the Society must intimate his intention to the Bursar or Secretary before the 1st day of June, or be held liable for his subscription for the ensuing year.

5. Privileges. The members are entitled to the Volume or Volumes printed for the year of subscription, no Volume being issued to any member whose subscription is unpaid. They may also, on prepayment, obtain back numbers (if in stock) on such terms as the Council may direct.

6. Meetings. An Annual Meeting is held in the month of June or July, of which at least seven days' notice is sent to all the members. At this meeting a report of the work of the Society, with a statement of the income and expenditure, is presented. This is issued together with the list of members and the Constitutions of the Society.

7. Audit. The Bursar's accounts are audited by a member of the Society appointed by the Council, at the close of the financial year, which expires on May 31.

N.B.—The Bursar deals with Membership and Subscriptions.

FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CATHOLIC RECORD SOCIETY

BEFORE entering on other matters, we must deplore the loss by death of our first President, the Lord Herries, whose archaeological tastes and knowledge eminently qualified him for such a post, and whose urbanity made the task of those working under him pleasant. He placed several papers at our disposal, and urged the old Catholic families to do likewise. Illness prevented him doing much more. It is matter for regret that he did not live to see the Everingham Registers, in which he was much interested, printed in Volume VII. His response to the first appeal for members was prompt, his name appearing as the twenty-third Founder of the Society. His ready consent to accept the office of President of the Society, giving it the benefit of his experience and name, when its membership had barely attained to seventy, was a great advantage.

It is necessary to record the further losses by death of the Rev. Charles Rose Chase, M.A.; Mrs Nevile, of Wellingore Hall; Mr Robert Hovenden, F.S.A., one of those Protestant gentlemen who have given us their generous support, as he did to most archaeological and genealogical societies, to say nothing of many volumes he personally edited; Mr James Brand, K.C.S.G.; the Rt Rev. Monsignor John Edward Canon Crook; Count Louis Pomian Bodenham-Lubiński, the sixty-sixth Founder; and Mr William Mostyn.

In addition to these eight deaths, we have already to lament two more for this year, both on the same day—Mr Valentine Dudley Henry Cary-Elwes, and Mr Simon Conyers Scrope, the representative of a great Catholic and historic name, and the twenty-fifth Founder.

The vacancy in the office of President has been filled by the election of his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, and the Council thanks him for his acceptance, which must be beneficial to the Society.

The resignation of seven members is much regretted, as well as the necessity of having to remove five names under Constitution No. 4. With the eight deaths recorded above there is a heavy loss of twenty.

Against this there are twenty-five new members, showing a nett gain of five; and so the steady progress of the four former years is sustained. There are still many Catholic names noticeable by their absence, and it is hoped that they may be relied on to fill, or more than fill, the inevitable breaches in our ranks. Now that the idea of founding our Society is demonstrated to be anything but chimerical, and that already it takes rank with the most important ones of older standing, their support can confidently be asked for, to keep it in its present, if not in a better position. The number of important libraries subscribing is one good feature, which may easily be extended, if ratepayers and readers would ask for the Society's works.

The number of members at yearly intervals may be recalled with interest:—

The many delays over Volume VI have been trying, extending the work over eighteen months. At an early stage Mr Gillow's illness, and later the greatness of his task, were the first factors. An index of 126 pages necessarily took much time, and a mishap further extended it. When the MS. was complete and handed over to the printers, next to nothing was done for two months. It ought to have been in the hands of members before the Annual Meeting; but even after delivery of the sheets a number were found to be torn. The printers have accepted responsibility.

The text of Vol. VII, being that for the fifth year, is nearly complete; the index is being prepared, and will be printed when ready.

For the sixth year Volume VIII has been three months in the press, and the question of Volume IX stands over, for a short time, to see whether the transcript of the third and fourth Douay Diaries can be completed in time. In the year 1878, the late Rev. Dr Knox, aided by other Fathers of the London Oratory, brought out the first and second Diaries from the archives of the Archdiocese of Westminster. Thirty years have passed, but for one reason or another the work has not been continued. Now our Society supplies the demand for such work, and may bring it out in a handier and less expensive form, but limited to the members. Should there be undue delay other work may take its place.

With the present membership, no attempt to print two volumes a year can be made. Whilst, however, limiting the output to three in two years, the volumes have more than kept up their godly proportions; and it must be evident that it is cheaper to so produce them than the same material in small ones.

The considerable balance shown in the Hon. Bursar's Statement, presented with this Report, coupled with the subscriptions due since 1st June, justifies our putting work in hand sooner than in the early days of the Society, when the doubtful amount of available funds enforced prudent economy. The low bank-rate prevailing of late, preventing full advantage being obtained from money on deposit, a purchase of £500 Consols has been made, and now stands in the names of the Bursar and two other members of the Council.

In several of our volumes there have already appeared family notes of births, marriages, and deaths, the religious element only slightly veiled. They frequently appear in books of prayer or devotion, diaries, etc. It is desired to augment the number of these. Obituaries of the clergy, 1745-1839, those in the Laity's Directory, and others are being prepared, and several have been offered. More are invited from the present owners of such notes.

* At the inaugural meeting seventy-three names were announced; but two never qualified for membership.

Thanks are due to our member, Mrs Seymour Spencer for undertaking the Index of Volume VII, and for a transcript of the important Registers of Liverpool, which must take prominent place in an early volume; also to Miss Harting, who, having completed the Lulworth Registers in Volume VII, is now transcribing those of Durham; to Miss Agnes Dolan, for the greater part of the transcript of those at Richmond, Surrey; to the Rev. Matthew Culley and Mr Francis McIninly, for those of Callaly; to Mr Richard Thackeray Bedingfeld, for supplying some much-needed genealogical information about his family; to Miss Annie Stearn, for continuous transcript work; to Mr Andrew, for again auditing the accounts, etc. etc.

Major Skeet was elected to a seat on the Council, caused by the retirement of Mr J. Orlebar Payne, who felt himself unable to attend meetings, but to whom the thanks of the Society are due, for suggestions and advice. Later, Major Skeet was elected Hon. Secretary, so becoming an ex-officio member of the Council and again causing a vacancy, which the Council was glad to be able to fill by a friar, in the person of the Very Rev. John Procter, S.T.M., Provincial of the English Dominicans. The clergy are thus represented by two Seculars, a Benedictine monk, a Dominican friar, and a Jesuit, as seems desirable.

The tenancy of Father Procter's seat on the Council expires at the end of the past year; but he is qualified for re-election for the next three years, together with the Very Rev. W. O. Canon Sutcliffe, M.A., the Marquis de Ruvigny, and Dr Williamson.

PROGRESS.

THE position of our Society as compared with other Record-printing Societies and the dates of foundation will be of interest.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE FIFTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

The Fifth Annual General Meeting of the Catholic Record Society was held in the Archbishop's House, Westminster (by the kind permission of the Archbishop, Patron), on Thursday, July 1, 1909.

There were present, his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, E.M., K.G., who took the chair for the first time as President; the Rt Rev. Abbot Gasquet, O.S.B., Vice-President; the Rt Rev. Abbot White, C.R.L.; the Very Rev. Prior Higgins, C.R.L.; the Very Rev. Canon Sutcliffe; the Revv. J. Gilbert Dolan, O.S.B., John Fletcher, and J. H. Pollen, S.J.; Mrs Hungerford Pollen; Miss Urquhart; the Marquis de Ruvigny; Sir Henry Paston Bedingfeld, Bart.; Major Vaughan; Major Skeet; Mr V. Hussey-Walsh; Mr C. George Keogh; Mr F. A. R. Langton; Mr Leonard C. Lindsay; Mr J. Hobson Matthews; Mr Joseph Mawson; Mr Charles J. Munich, K.S.G.; Mr Carlisle Spedding; Mr Richard S. Wood; and Mr Joseph S. Hansom.

Letters of regret and sympathy were received from Miss Ainsworth; the Rev. Dr Burton; Mr Hanmer; Miss Harting; the Very Rev. Father Procter; Mr Richard Duncan Radcliffe; Mr Orby Shipley; Mr Slater; and Mrs Seymour Spencer.

The Press was represented by The Times, The London Central News Agency, The Press Association, The Catholic Times, The Catholic Herald, and The Universe.

In moving the adoption of the Report of the Council and the Bursar's Balance-Sheet, the President referred to the loss of one he esteemed and revered, the late Lord Herries, the first President of the Society. Lord Herries took deep interest in the movement; was a man specially adapted for the appointment, and thought it somewhat of a reproach to the Catholic body that such a Society had not been thought of before. All felt the loss the movement had sustained. There were also on the death roll several other names of personal friends of his own, and of those respected in many walks of life. The losses generally shown in the Report were heavy; but it was satisfactory to find that there was a gain in the end of five members.

The Society was to be congratulated on its striking—almost unique—financial position, as shown by the balance-sheet. But this refreshing condition of affairs must not lull them into indolence, but make them go forward with renewed energy. The work had a special interest—an intrinsic interest—to Catholics, showing the records of the sufferings of their forefathers in less happy days than the present.

He noticed some difficulty in getting one volume forward. Such difficulties were not uncommon, but it seemed that this, the Sixth Volume, would be soon out, and others were in a forward state. His Grace referred to the generous offers made of family records by their owners, and said much valuable information could be obtained from such interesting sources.

Mr Hussey-Walsh, in seconding, urged the making of "genealogy" of the widest interest, as was shown in the rules. Nothing appealed to a wider circle in this country and in America. No branch of it was so little known as that of Catholic families. The London registers, as those of Lincoln's Inn Fields, Spanish Place, the French embassy, Moorfield's, Ratcliffe Highway, St George's (Southwark), Chelsea, and Kensington contained much of interest. Those of Moorfield's contain the case of a man, the Chevalier d'Eon, posing as a woman. The names of emigré families occur in them, filling gaps in French families, whilst at certain times the registers might almost be called Irish. Other family records also existed, and the scope of our work should be as wide as possible. With the small increase to 360 members a second volume each year seemed hardly realisable; but with about 450 it would be possible, and we might hope for a third with another 200.

Abbot Gasquet supported the adoption, saying the Report was very interesting. It was manifested that the Society was not only useful, but absolutely necessary. The work done was ample guarantee of that to be done in the future. He strongly urged the great importance of printing lists of Recusants. They existed in great profusion from about 1583, and ought to be made more public. Those printed in the time of King Charles II seemed to him somewhat too modern. The Recusants existed in all stations of life. In some respects their life-long sufferings, exorbitant fines, imprisonments, contempt, and injury, made them even more deserving of respect than the Martyrs. He would like to see put up in every Catholic church lists of the local Recusants, who had set such a magnificent example to us. Present day Catholics wanted to have their history made known, and within the reach of non-Catholics, so that all might know what Catholics had suffered at the time of the change of religion. A notable pageant had recently been held, the prevailing idea being to maintain a fiction—the continuity fiction; but history showed, in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, people being persecuted to death for upholding the religion of their forefathers! All ought to know from the original records the heroic stand then made. He had been asked, in reference to the proposal of the Government to put a double tax on individuals, whether history furnished a precedent. He replied promptly, that it had been done with the Recusants, and—something more. The present proposal was to crush out the great landlords; the former was to crush the Catholic religion out of existence.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

Mr Mawson asked whether enquiries and statements could not be inserted in the volumes. He had made considerable research himself, and would like to bring some matters to notice.

Father Dolan said this would entail the publication of a periodical, of the nature of Notes and Queries, monthly or quarterly, as volumes coming out on an average at intervals of about eight months could hardly deal with such matters expeditiously enough. He did not know whether this could be entertained, but suggested that a paper might be submitted to the Council for insertion.

Major Vaughan proposed, Mr Munich seconded, and it was resolved

“That the Very Rev. John Procter, Provincial O.P.; the Very Rev. William Ormond Canon Sutcliffe; the Marquis de Ruigny; and Dr George Charles Williamson, be re-elected Members of the Council for the ensuing three years.”

Sir Henry Bedingfeld proposed, Mr Keogh seconded, a vote of thanks to the Council and Honorary Officers for their work during the past year, and this was carried unanimously.

In reply, Father Pollen said that members would soon have two goodly volumes of over 1,000 pages, and illustrating Catholic life all over England. There would be eight Registers for the counties of Essex, Dorset, Norfolk, Northumberland, Oxford, Surrey, Sussex, and Yorkshire; Recusant Lists for Monmouthshire in 1719, and for Everingham in 1767, and returns for 23 counties and towns (1664-1670). The latter, fully annotated by Mr Gillow and others, would be especially important. The Bedingfeld Papers comprised 70 different pieces, illustrated by eighteen family pictures and four pedigrees. They would throw light on the existence of a Catholic family through the penal times. For the future, Mgr Ward was undertaking the Correspondence of Robert Smell, agent of the English Vicars Apostolic during the years of Emancipation at home and wars abroad. The Douay Diaries, one of the most valuable of our records, was being attacked in two places,—Dr Burton, of Old Hall, was preparing the later, the Society was having the earlier volumes transcribed. The proposed volume of Obituaries was also full of promise. The Augustinian Canonesses of Bruges had promised a copy of their Dirge Book, which noticed both the nuns, relatives, benefactors, and confessors. From Oulton they were expecting The Book of the Commemoration of deceased Religious (O.S.B., of Ghent), giving short biographies of about fifty sisters (17th and 18th centuries), and a contribution was also kindly offered from Colwich. Of the secular clergy they had already lists running from 1748 to 1839; and there were in hand, or promised, various smaller papers. For the time the store of materials was satisfactory, but they much needed assistance in editing and preparing for the Press.

Major Skeet returned thanks for the Officers, and desired to acknowledge the work done by Mr Hansom.

Mr Langton proposed a vote of thanks to the President for his conduct in the chair, which Prior Higgins seconded.

NOTICES.

THE too-long-delayed Volume VI was posted to members entitled to it on 9th July, 1909.

Members are requested to call the attention of their friends to the Society and its work. A copy of the current subscription form is enclosed to members this year, in case they desire to introduce a friend. It shows also how back numbers are procurable by members desiring to complete a set.

Transcripts of interesting unpublished documents ready for the press, together with the loan of the originals for the purpose of collation, are invited. It is desired always to have material for half a dozen volumes ready for printing, as special donations for printing may enable the output of work to be increased.

Offers of help in transcribing documents, especially in the Public Offices in London, where the greater part of the documents relating to the country are stored, are invited. Parish priests are especially invited to provide exact copies of old registers in their custody, or give facilities for this being done.

Members desirous of paying through their bankers can be supplied with a "Banker's Order," on application to the Bursar or Secretary.

A copy of the second annual report is desired for a new member. Perhaps someone, having a copy he does not want, will oblige by sending it to the Secretary.
